Vintage Book Club Flyers! By Shawn Robare 24 Replies I wanted to start off and the end of my winter hiatus with something that I think is pretty damn cool. One of my goals with this site was to try and track down and share some of the more obscure things that I was really fond of as a kid. Sure, talking about the Transformers and G. Joe is cool, but so are the Donruss Zero Heroes sticker cards and issues of Stickers magazine. Well, this past December, a very awesome friend of the site dug deep into his archive of school papers and ephemera from over 25 years ago, and he came out with some very amazing pieces of newsprint. Much like vintage food packaging, school book club flyers are in my opinion so of the rarest pieces of ephemera as there is absolutely no reason to archive them. The closest thing would be the very niche market of people selling old Saturday morning cartoon ads on ebay, but it seems like no one is selling book club flyers. This one represents books available for kindergarten through 1st grade, and mostly features the large format floppy picture books and read-alongs. Leo the Lop was part of a series of books by Serendipity written by Cosgrove and illustrated by Robin James that really knocked my socks off as a kid illustration-wise. Also included in the series were books like Little Mouse on the Prarie , Trapper about a little while seal , and the Gnome from Nome my favorite. You also get your first glimpse at the book club flyer up-sale which includes the concept of a free poster with the purchase of three or more books. This next flyer is for a slightly older set grades 4th through 6th and was released in February of 2011! This is a bit more of what I remember from back in school. I mean look at the horrible job on that curved block font around the dog poster. I mean using the specific font as an image lift from a book like with the Heathcliff offering is one thing, but mixing in the serif and sans serif fonts is hurting my eyes a little. Anyway, enough grousing about design, I mean look, original solicitations for Choose Your Own Adventure books are in this flyer! I also love the fact that even though some of these posters are super cheesy, they were at least also super cheap. Also, notice the solicitation for Mad Libs. Though I never had any Mad Libs books as a kid I know they were huge and these book club flyers were most certainly one of the main places to score them. Book club flyers were also a place to score stickers, and if memory serves there was also a sheet of stickers in the flyers offered by Troll. My favorite listing is for yet another of my holy grail items, the Antioch sticker book, Hogan Wins the Belt. Along with these flyers Esteban also found some of the sweet posters that he and his sister ordered back in the day. It all seemed silly to me and as I unfolded yet another sickeningly cute poster of kittens I asked my mom what kind of little boy likes this stuff. Troll sure knew their audience.

If he had a robot it could do the chores, take baths, and go to school. In fact, if he had a robot he could rule the world! But if he had a robot, it would get to eat the dessert instead of him.

For best results use only: Title, Author, Date Range, and Keywords. You will be able to limit your search further once you reach the results page. This is the best book search engine on the net, from a huge Canadian company originally started by booksellers. Millions of books of all kinds from dealers all over the world, some not found in libraries. Most of the English language books ever published: You should limit your search at least to Format: You can do this on the advanced search page or once you arrive at the results, using the left hand column, as with Abe. Often you can find more about the content of a title by going to an individual library holding. Once you have narrowed down a possible title, try Amazon. The colour option on Google is working better and better. I have started using Images on Bing. Look in the left hand column to limit your search to these. A few words can help: If all you can remember is a few words, try Google. Put the words in quotes. Use only one or two, essential, easily-spelled, keywords. Try this sample Google search: Selling One or Two Books. Probably the easiest place for an individual to sell books like those above is on Amazon. Look up your book, click on the picture, then look in the blue box for "Have one to sell? If, and only if, Amazon has listed the book in the past, will you be able to list also. Ebay is also very easy and inexpensive to use for a few books and it allows you more room to describe the books. For pricing your book, it is easier and more accurate to use the Abebooks. Then double check on Amazon because prices there are sometimes higher. The more care you put into describing your books, the more likely you are to sell them.
