Im So Ticked Off. I don't understand why my Dr. wants me to get the trial spinal stim, when he told me as soon as I'm % fused he will remove my hardware.

Tawnda Andrews comment Let me tell you a true story. Approximately 15 years ago I started to think pretty highly about a certain handsome man. She, I could tell, was very special to my man and I wanted everything to go smoothly. The big moment arrived and she welcomed me with a big grin and excitement. I can honestly say that I fell in love with her. She was a total sweetheart and my co-conspirator in teasing my now hubby. Candii was perfect in every way. Unfortunately what I saw is not what the world sees. They belittle and joke about people like her because they only look skin deep and judge based on that. My sister-in-love had cerebral palsy brought on by a birth accident which deprived her brain of oxygen. She could only say a few words but was able to communicate very well. She loved teasing and adored babies and was pretty much over the moon in love with her niece and had she lived longer would be reveling in all the littles I have now. She was a big fan of scary movies, Nancy Drew books, and reality television. She brought everyone who knew her joy AND allowed to you glimpse a character of God which is lost in the rest of us: Evelyn loving on Auntie Candii! See, someone accidentally sent me a text last night. A friend of a friend who clicked on my number. Cuz he sounds like one. Why is it used to describe someone in a very demeaning way? Where is the PC police for this type of thing? Where are the marches on Washington demanding that their lives matter? Where is the outrage that these children are the most aborted population in the world? Cuz he sounds like it. Cuz he sounds like it? Why do you continue to use it? Why do you let others use it around you? Now tell those around you to stop it too. You know what would be even better? Say hi and high five those with mental handicaps. Smile and appreciate their God created uniqueness. Give them grace and love, heaps and heaps of grace and love. Remember they were created in the image of God too.

Chapter 3 : The " I am so TICKED OFF thread" - calendrierdelascience.com Forums

Ticked calendrierdelascience.com intermediate stage between being annoyed and being pissed off. When you are annoyed, you generally try to calm down, but if you get ticked off, it clearly seems more "enjoyable" to use violence, wich leads to being pissed off.

The Lord said to me: You are my servant, Israel, through whom I show my glory. Now the Lord has spoken who formed me as his servant from the womb, that Jacob may be brought back to him and Israel gathered to him; and I am made glorious in the sight of the Lord, and my God is now my strength. Let me read that last line again: I always attribute the good stuff to you, and take ownership of the bad stuff myself. How fair is that? Are you always the strength, love, hope behind my triumphs? So then do I just not tap into them the days I fall? Yesterday in the hallway of the office of my current therapist, I run into my former therapist. I hate it when that happens. The world seems terrible to me. I think I need a psychologist badly. I have thought about suicide many times. It seems to be always on my mind. I stopped reading for a little bit and just cried. I am still crying. I was born sick. The proof is now there. I just read it. As I read through my junior-high journal, my heart hurt. I was in so much pain back then. And the way I blamed myself for all of it makes me now, in retrospect, cry twice as hard. I have to say this, puke I was blessed. And I have no one else to blame but you. I know I sound like an ungrateful victim. That journal of mine made my angry. And I want you to know that. Does every strength of mine always have to be attributed to you?

Chapter 4 : Iago: Look at this. I'm so ticked off that I'm molting.

Vindicator sports reporter Joe Scalzo talked with Kelly Pavlik for an exclusive interview on Monday, less than 48 hours after his loss to Sergio Martinez. Here is the text of that interview: First, you needed about three dozen stitches for your eyes. I get the stitches out in about five or seven days. How hard was it to deal with the loss? It was hard this time because I was taking control of the fight. I was finding a rhythm, countering him, coming over his jab and catching him. It seemed like he was tiring in the middle rounds. And then in the eighth round, I got cut. It was kind of my fault because I got lazy for a minute and he threw a punch and as soon as he hit me, he caught me on the bone and blood starting pouring into my [right] eye. That was a big turning point. It had nothing to do with his movement because I was countering him. So is that the main reason you looked so flat for the final four rounds? Pretty much the only way I could possibly see was by rubbing it with my glove and the only thing that was doing was cutting it more. I also got little bit fatigued muscle-wise, but the cut definitely had lot to do with it. We did everything the right way, but it was a battle making weight. We left at about [pounds] on Wednesday and by the time we flew and put on some short-term weight, I was back up to Even on Friday, I was running 3 to 5 miles. He took over the later part of the fight. I know I would have won the fight. I could see what he was doing and without that cut, there would have been no hesitation. But my main focus was trying to keep my eye clear. You have a rematch clause. Do you plan to activate it? I definitely want the rematch. We did it [losing the weight] the right way. We even had a nutritionist. But pretty much once I got to , it was almost impossible to lose those last three pounds. I have to watch what I eat and maybe do something [cardio-related] at least three days a week instead of five [during training camp], something to keep the calories burning. With that being said, if the weight stays up, I have no choice but to move up to another weight class. When do you plan to make that decision? Is that a fair observation and, if so, why? You know, in this fight, without the cut, you would have said it was a good Kelly Pavlik. I was confident going into the fight, I was healthy going into the fight. There were no injuries, no missed days of training or sparring. But, yeah, I did have a couple bad fights since the Lockett fight. Is that a fair criticism? By the middle rounds, I knew when he was going to throw the jab and I was hitting him with counters, but in a matter of seconds I got blood in my eye and once he went to my right he was out of my field of vision. Will you be making any changes? I hate to sound like a broken record but we had the right game plan for the fight. Even in the middle rounds, you can hear the [HBO] commentators stating how good I was doing with the movement. I was doing the right things, taking control of the fight. The big game-changer was the cut, which it would be with anybody. How much longer do you want to stay in boxing? It is what it is. Fighters lose all the time. Mancini said that, as strange as it sounds, there might even be a little bit of a relief, since you can just be a fighter and not have to be the representative for the whole city. Do you feel that? There is a little truth to that. So, now you can be just a fighter? I was a guy who came up representing Youngstown and once I won the titles, I got the , other things that came with it, which is obviously going to happen. It happens to anybody. But now I can get back on track and focus on fighting. I just want to focus on getting the titles back.
