

Chapter 1 : Our Interesting Times: Casey Gane-McCallac - the CIA's Secret War in Jamaica

To understand the nature and history of the CIA, the book gets to the bottom of the John F. Kennedy assassination, Watergate, CIA heroin smuggling in Laos during the Vietnam War, and cocaine trafficking during Iran-Contra, which involved the same players who were involved in destabilizing Jamaica.

US Government Tried to Assassinate Bob Marley 40 years ago a group of terrorists, assassins and drug dealers met in a small town called Bonao in the Dominican Republic to organize ways to murder and terrorize innocent civilians to further their cause; on June 29th of Their cause was not Islamic extremism and their enemy was not the United States, their cause was anti-Communism and a hatred for Fidel Castro, and the United States was their friend and not their enemy. The men who met in Bonao, were not only bonded together by their common cause, they also were all trained by and worked with the American Central Intelligence Agency. They would unite under one common group name: Jamaican Prime Minister Michael Manley and the Jamaican government would alert American authorities to the culprits of the bombing, but they would be ignored. At the time, the CIA was launching a massive destabilization campaign against Michael Manley due to his progressive policies, ties to Cuba and Fidel Castro and his opposition to Apartheid. They would take credit for bombings in Trinidad, Guyana, Barbados and the attempted kidnapping of the Cuban ambassador to Mexico; in which his chauffeur was murdered. One month after the CORU public execution of a diplomat and his American female assistant on Embassy Row, the anti-Castro terrorists would up the ante even further by killing 73 civilians; bombing an airplane in the biggest act of terrorism in the air of the time. The same plane that CORU had bombed in Jamaica in July was flying to Barbados on the 6th of October, , when an explosion sent it to the sea, killing all 5 crew members and 68 passengers, including the members of the Cuban fencing team. Freddy Lugo and Hernan Ricardo Lozano were caught in Trinidad and quickly told authorities they were ordered to bomb the plane by Bosch and Posada, who were later arrested in Venezuela. Both of them would admit to planning the bombing in interviews and in books several times. Posada would escape from jail to Chile with Freddy Lugo in only to be extradited back to Venezuela, where he would stay in jail for another eight years. In he would once again break out of jail -- with the help of Jorge Mas Canosa, a good friend of George HW Bush -- to start working with another anti-Castro Cuban CIA agent -- Felix Rodriguez, another close friend of Bush -- training the Contras and assisting in their plan to arm them through the cocaine trade. Posada would continue acts of terrorism against Cuba and assassination plots against Castro for the next 30 years and was recently charged with being behind a plot that would send mercenaries to Venezuela to assassinate their President in Posada is still alive and living in Miami today, where he is considered a hero by many in the Cuban community there. Orlando Bosch would be freed from Venezuela in with help from the American government. Orlando Bosch would die a free man in after 50 years of terrorism, extortion, and assassination attempts. Both Bosch and Posada were terrorists trained by the CIA who received the protection and support of the Bush family and their allies for their murderous careers. Maybe that can explain their license to kill and immunity and protection from justice their whole careers. The events that happened 40 years ago are still very important to what goes on today. Born to a South African mother and Jamaican father, he quickly became interested in global politics and history, which he studied at Columbia University. The former staff writer for NewsOne has covered a wide variety of subjects from music to politics to drugs and organized crime.
