Like first chapter, I decided that I wanted to rewrite this chapter as well, the chapter had a lot of grammatic errors and now there are hopefully all fixed, but the obvious ones are gone now.

First off, look at this picture of him at So determined and yet so youthful looking. Also, according to his dates, he was so young when he died of a heart attack. Wright Mills at age The Sociological Imagination is divided into two sections prefaced with an introduction which is frequently excised, abbreviated, and inserted into anthologies. His first section could well be titled A Primer on Problems. And in this category would fit two types of problems. The first negative, the second positive. Bureaucracies in general give rise to the impulse to standardize man, to select the type of material which should be studied not to expose social structure, but to reinforce it, and additionally create the lowest scum on earth, the research technician. Or so it seems in Mills estimation. This technician is characterized by dogmatic, methodical, precision. However he is pusillanimous in attempting new research. In fact, Mills has little of recommendation to say of the research technician or the American collegiate material. I was surprised to find Mills tone throughout the book one of plain speech, almost didacticism, and yet fairly condemnatory other times. He reads like an English novelist, or not unlike CS Lewis at times. What issues are there? Mills makes a sharp distinction between personal troubles, and troubles of the milieu, or environment, affecting many. These troubles relate to historical and structural issues, and must be studied with one hand around empirical fact, and one around methodology and theory. In order to study a problem one must do the following: Discern what values are being threatened, and are the values conscious or unconscious for the actor and the threatener. How do these values play against the background of history and structure? Is there a causal connection between a public issue and a personal trouble. Restate the problem in these terms. Research what other data and findings have been done on this problem. Keep in mind the full sense of the problem, while devising ways of testing hypothesis. Check yourself constantly to avoid: An idea which is too large for a concept "ie: Leaning toward Grand theory A concept which becomes enmeshed in too much detail:

He was walking in an endless dark with no real path in mind Step after step, he simply walked through the darkness that seemed to oddly familiar to him. It was like he was walking on an endless black ocean in the night, you could hear the splash sound after every step he took as if he was walking through a puddle But if he looked down he saw a face. It seemed to imitate his every move. Black coal colored eyes His face was with a huge smile Then it clicked for him He was looking at himself His dull eyes met the eyes filled with so much sparkling emotion that it could put firework to shame He started to remember now A background began to materialize His eyes widen in realization It was his third birthday party The day he had dubbed as the best day in his life It was also the day he found out he was going to be a big brother It was a very bright Saturday afternoon, Naruto was in his room playing with his toys but he was interrupted in his playing when his mother and father called his name. Can you come down here for a second? She is indeed very impatient. A little while after Naruto came running down the stairs, his ever so huge smile on his face the whole way while his hair was going everywhere, it was kinda wierd non of them had black hair or black eyes, but they did know why Naruto was gifted with such beautiful hair and eyes. Kushina, who the doctor said was unable to give birth, because of the Kyuubi seal was rushed on her in her young days where she was a child her egg-stock was destroyed Or people thought so So, she was gifted an egg from one of her best friends However, the doctors must have smoked something because after the birth of Naruto, she was said to never be able to give birth again without a new egg Kushina had pretty much fallen to her knees crying then and there She proved them all wrong when she 3 days before Naruto birthday was checked And was found pregnant However back to present Naruto ran down and tripped but quickly came up and before his parents where his dad was shaking his head in amusement at the energetic boy But it quickly came to a stop But was as quickly up again while giving a grin that resembled a fox while he was scratching the back of his head in embarrassment. His parents however just sweat dropped while chuckling Minato and giggling Kushina "No Naruto we are not starting your training, your just 3 years old you should run to the park and play with your friends" Said Minato with a smile at his son, who pouted at the mention of no training. He suddenly started crying His parents frowned at the reaction and brought him in for a hug. As fast the memory came, it was gone again. And he simply continued his path in the darkness.. Still without a destination But his ever so observant eyes and ears perked up at a disturbance in the endless darkness, a little spot of light the distance He decided to follow the light. As the picture of a morning became clearer he was hit by soft wind However, this wind was no ordinary wind If it was calling on him But the more the sun in the distance was rising The faint whispers became louder and louder as he was suddenly engulfed in a bright yellow light as the sun had finally came up over the ocean line. But then it was dark again However, this it only required a slow opening motion of his eyes, before he was blinded again by the sun that was shining, his eyes quickly narrowed in annoyance, but as his eye became more used to the light, the memories of the previous day came back to him He is your son! Your flesh and blood! How can u ever even let it come to your mind to abandon him?! Come on Minato vi have a child to raise" The crying became silent sobs Until he was suddenly crying out madly while his Sharingan was spinning madly in his eyes while it was replaying the memories of yesterday night while he was trembling A sound of rushing footsteps echoed in hallway as the third Hokage Hiruzen Sarutobi opened the door again after he just left it, he had tried to wake up Naruto but without success and after he leaves the room Naruto suddenly screams up, So, he rushes to the room he was in. Hiruzens eyes widened at the event that stood before him, Naruto was lying as a newborn baby, trembling as tears came down his cheeks as his Sharingan was spinning madly. Hiruzen acted quickly and took boy in for a big grandfatherly hug while whispering soothing words until he finally went back to into a dreamless sleep Hiruzen sighed in sadness with a big frown on his face while anger was burning in his eyes as a thousand suns, at the events that had just occurred. Minato probably is just another coward among the bunch However, what brings you here, Orochimaru? I just think it appropriate for me as his possible sensei to visit my possible student" Spoke Orochimaru with a smile on his every so snake like features while he walked over to Naruto and pulled to cover up to his little face. And managed to hear the sniffling sound Naruto made in his sleep. Orochimaru crouched down and sat on the bedside while Hiruzen looked out of the window, with a look of sadness. No child should ever have the live through a thing like this. Orochimaru and Hiruzen smiled sadly at the young boy, Orochimaru had lost parents when he was just a kid. Orochimaru knew his parents loved him However, they were killed in action But one thing was clear. They will be there for him through his journey. Pheeew i hope you guys liked it I tried to make it all a little bit more detailed and give some more background info. Narumis will be the one Naruto has in the canon. But the voices he heard was Hiruzen that brought him out of his personal dark before he walked too far into it. Imagine that it was like when Sasuke was in Itachi genjutsu at the massacre, and the thing that brought him out of his personal hell was his will to avenge his family this is my own theory. Thanks to Silver Orbed Lioness who beta read this. The school year of to approached at breakneck speed for Albus Dumbledore. The Professors at Hogwarts were preparing for a new term. Every teacher at the school was overjoyed that the Harry Potter would be joining them this year. The young Potions Professor was hoping now that the Potter brat was coming, he would finally be the new Defence Against The Dark Arts teacher this year. A rare Severus smile inched along his face. This time of the school year was what Severus enjoyed the most. The lack of annoying dunderheads running around making his life miserable cheered his heart immensely. The taciturn teacher sank down in his chair. There was one muggle he was glad to never see again. The man before him never seemed to open up. No, he was not going to get the DADA position he was so hankering after. I am just your lapdog. So what life threatening adventure do you wish me to humiliate myself for this time," One would have to be a troll not to recognise and flinch at the sarcasm Severus aimed at the Headmaster. The scowl matching the venomous tone. His heart broke again inside of him at the reminder. He hated it Dumbledore kept drawing out the badly laid plot. A smattering of my students have Death Eater parents. He must trust me. Openly protecting Potter will put into question my loyalty to his cause. Not only do I want you to protect him, but I also want you to befriend him. The combination I loathe the most. Also did you forget what I just told you a second ago? Suavely, the Headmaster pulled out a small teal hued potion from a secret draw in his desk. Severus stared at it with shock and disbelief recognising it for what it was, a rather interesting and dangerous tincture. You well know my childhood was hell! My life as a student here was absolutely crap. He was interested in teaching Harry Potter. Eyes shimmering hatefully at the manipulative man in the seat that he was abusing for his own war games. He was sure this was the worst idea in the history of bad ideas but he shrugged his shoulders. After staring at the receptacle in his hands, Severus tipped the contents in his mouth. The effect was immediate: Sweating profusely, he struggled to stand up as his body began to shrink. The magic woven into his robes meant that they adjusted to his new size. In less than fifteen minutes Severus was no longer Professor Snape: As I recall you ignored me when I was 11! The old man seemed to forget that he never considered Severus once the hat yelled Slytherin. This may be a chance to do many things differently. Hagrid will explain and hand over the letter, you will begin being nice to Harry, do not think of the father but think of the mother and I am sure you are to do well. Your review has been posted.
