Chapter 1 : I Have To Mark You Mine, a teen wolf fanfic | FanFiction

It was over an Hour later when everyone started heading Home. That was when we all got soaking wet from the driving Rain that suddenly flared up. Another day with over a dozen stops.

February 11, Dear Suman and Rick, I did not know Marcus and came to know about him only last month when I was looking for tech guidance to fix something. I came across his blog which was very helpful. I wrote a reply there. Only later, while browsing, I realised that he is not on earth anymore. His blog was very useful to me and I just had to write to let you know that he continues to help people around the world. May God give you strength. Regards, Sharon Pryga October 9, Marcus- I was blessed beyond words to have you as my best friend for the last 15 years. You were such an amazing person, friend and man of God. I will love you forever, miss you forever, and you will forever be in my heart. I do not know how Marcus would look like without smile because I never saw him without one. You are fondly remembered. May your soul rest in peace. He has been a blessing to anyone he has met and will deeply be missed more than I can convey. Debbie Chastain September 22, My deepest sympathy to his family, friends and church friends. I am so sorry for this loss. Marcus was a great guy who gave back to his community every day! I will dearly miss Marcus. Arlene Emery September 21, My deepest sympathy to Marcus family. It was definitely a shock to hear of Marcus sudden passing. I knew Marcus since high school. We had art classes together. We reconnected again when he started working at CSX. It was always great working with him. I enjoyed the stories he shared of the missions he would go to around the world. It was a blessing to know him. My prayers are with his parents, his close friends and his church family. He is now in heaven sharing his LOVE. What a wonderful young man you raised, so caring and loving. Maybe he was just too good for this world. Such a loss for all of us. He was always so upbeat and friendly. I enjoyed being his admin when he started at CSX. It was like working with my own son. Remembering you and Richard and prayers are offered for Marcus today and for you as well. You are in our thoughts and prayers during this most difficult time. The stories of Marcus and what he did will inspire many in the future. I know how proud you were of him he was an incredible son. September 21, You are both in our thoughts and prayers. Dief has fond memories of Marcus. He always had the sweetest big smile on his face and when I would stop by to say hi or ask for guidance he was always so cheerful and willing and ready to help. I know he touched so many people in a positive way. My thoughts and prayers are with his friends and family. He will be greatly missed. I will always remember Marcus for his smile and the stories he told about his travels. Sincerest condolences to the family. What, I can do is recognize how ready you were to go to heaven, we talked about this many times, if anyone had no fear, it was you. But I do appreciate, and will remember every moment we shared together, and never forget how you could, and would talk to anyone, and be their friend. Heaven has gained a true Angel with an amazing joy and peace and love for all! May God continue to bless you and give you comfort in such a tragic time. Robert Bloom September 19, I was not close with Marcus, but we worked together from time to time in the field of Child Welfare. Marcus was kind, passionate, and sincere. I was extremely sad to hear about Marcus passing so suddenly and unexpectedly. These sorts of things do not make sense, but I do know he will be missed and remembered. Jon Lessig September 19, My sincerest condolences for your loss. Marcus was a good man with a very big heart. Betty Gwynne September 19, Sincere condolences on your loss. May God give you peace as he shares love with Marcus. My prayers are with you both. I enjoyed working with him and he will be dearly missed. Especially his great big smile. Will be keeping his family and friends in prayer as the days ahead will be hard. He always had a smile and his face and he always was someone who you could rely on. My thoughts and prayers go out to his friends and family. H E September 19, I am so very sorry for your loss of Marcus. May you all be comforted knowing God is close to the broken-hearted, by dear friends and many precious memories. Know that there are many who care and realize the great job you did raising a wonderful son. Studstill Family Our deepest prayers, and condolences reach out to all Family and friends. By BCE, various Greek city-states, sharing a language and a culture based on slavery, pioneered novel political cultures. In the Greek city of Athens, by about BCE, the male citizens who owned land began to elect their leaders. These elections by the minority of a minority represent the first democracy in the world. Other states in Greece experimented with other forms of rule, as in the totalitarian state of Sparta. These polities existed side by side, sometimes warring with each other, at one time combining against an invading army from Persia. Ancient Athens is known for its literary achievements in drama, history, and personal narrative. The individual city-states did not usually see themselves as a single entity. The conqueror Alexander the Great, who called himself a Greek, actually was a native of the non-Greek state of Macedon. The city of Rome was founded traditionally in the year BCE. Slowly, Rome grew from a kingdom to a republic to a vast empire, which, at various points, included most of present-day Britain a large part of Scotland never belonged to the empire , France then known as Gaul , Spain, Portugal, Italy, Greece, Turkey, Iraq, Palestine including the territory claimed today by the modern state of Israel , Northern Arabia, Egypt, the Balkans, and the entire north coast of Africa. This empire was maintained through free-born or adoptive citizenship, citizen education and indoctrination, a large and well-drilled army, and taxes directed by a large bureaucracy directed by the emperor. As each province produced more Roman citizens, the state became hard to maintain. Whole kingdoms in the north and east, and the invading peoples we know as the Germanic tribes the Ostrogoths and Visigoths and the Franks sat apart from the system. After the death of one emperor in CE, power struggles between the army and a succession of rulers of contested origins produced anarchy. Diocletian - reinstated the Empire by Rome regained territory until , when the Empire was so large that it had to be divided into two parts, each with a separate ruler. The two halves sat uneasily together. The East, which considered itself the heir of Alexander the Great, spoke Greek or a dialect, while the West spoke Latin. The Eastern Empire survived until , but the system to maintain the Western Empire broke apart. Plagues and crop failures troubled the world. In , Germanic tribes deposed the boy who was then the Emperor. Roman roads fell into disrepair, and travel became difficult. Some memories remained in the lands which had once known Roman rule. The supreme rulers of various tribes called themselves king, a distortion of the Roman word Caesar. Catholicism eventually spread through England where the Germanic tribes of the Angles and the Saxons now lived and to the lands of the post-Roman Germanic tribes. Among those tribes, the Franks rose to prominence. Charlemagne - , the King of the Franks, conquered great portions of Europe. He eventually took control of Rome. The senate and the political organs of Rome had disappeared, and Charlemagne did not pretend to become the head of the Church. But prestige came with identity with the past, and so this trunk of lands became The Holy Roman Empire. The result of political stability was technological advance. In addition to vellum, Europeans now started making paper of rags or wood pulp. They also adopted the wind and water mill, the horse collar for plows and for heavy weights , the moldboard plow, and other agricultural and technological advances. Towns came into being, and then walled cities. More people survived, and the knights and kings over them grew restive. Viking Exploration of North America Danish seamen, painted midth century. In the eighth century, pushed from their homes in Scandinavia by war and population expansion, Norsemen, or Vikings, began settling parts of the Faeroe, Shetland, and Orkney Islands in the North Atlantic. They went where ever treasure was, trading as far as Byzantium and Kiev in the East. In the West they raided from Ireland and England down to the Italian peninsula, sailing into a port, seizing its gold, and murdering or enslaving its people before fleeing. They began settling Iceland in approximately CE. A Viking called Erik the Red was accused of murder and banished from his native Iceland in about 984. Eric explored and later founded a settlement in a snowy western island. Knowing that this bleak land would need many people to prosper, Eric returned to Iceland after his exile had passed and coined the word "Greenland" to appeal to the overpopulated and treeless settlement of Iceland. Eric returned to Greenland in 985 and established two colonies with a population of nearly 100. Leif Erikson, son of Erik the Red, and other members of his family began exploration of the North American coast in 999. He landed in three places, in the third establishing a small settlement called Vinland. The site contains the remains of eight Norse buildings, as well as a modern reproduction of a Norse longhouse. But the settlement in Vinland was abandoned in struggles between the Vikings and the native inhabitants, whom the settlers called Skraelingar. Bickering also broke out among the Norsemen themselves. The settlement lasted less than two years. The Vikings would make brief excursions to North America for the next years, though another attempt at colonization was soon thwarted. By the thirteenth century, Iceland and Greenland had also entered a period of decline during the "Little Ice Age. Yet the Vikings are now considered the true European discoverers of North America. The influence of their people outlasted even the terrible raids, and their grandchildren became kings and queens. For example, a branch of Viking descendants living in France, the Normans, conquered England from the Anglo-Saxons in 1066. In the year 1347 sheep and cattle began to die of a contagious disease. Farmers could not support the growing population. And then, in 1347, some Genoese trading ships inadvertently brought a new, invasive species of rat to Europe. These rats carried bubonic plague. Plague was also called the Black Death, from the darkened skin left after death and from its deadly reach. It had three strands: The masses of bacteria would flow through the human system, killing cells and leaving their refuse in lymph nodes in the armpit, groin, and neck. These nodes would swell and turn black, creating bubos. Infection could also spread into the lungs, so that a person might cough or sneeze the germ into the air. This created pneumonic plague, spreading disease into spaces where people gathered and where rats dared not go. It also spread through contamination of food. The last form of disease, and its most deadly, was septicemic. This attacked the blood, leaving stretches of pale skin looking black, and killing the person within hours. Surviving laws of cities and guilds regulate public cleanliness and penalize adulteration of food. They cannot show how strictly these laws were applied. And they show no knowledge, of course, of germ theory and the need for sterilization. Older systems such as the few public baths which remained from the days of colonial Rome were seen as sinful and dangerous, invitations to the plague. The responses to plague can be seen in the records left by survivors -- one third of the population of Europe died in repeated waves of disease -- and in the subsequent changes in society. Airplanes and satellites show the foundations of plague-era towns which were emptied by the disease. In just one square mile of pre-plague Europe there are reports of there being 50,000 people. Other families were locked in by city authorities. This is the beginning of the modern system of quarantine. The Black Death seemed erratic, sometimes taking people deemed good and pious, sometimes not. One priest or church prelate might die, and another survive. And a living priest might give no aid to other survivors. Some critiques of the Church which had become spread through most of Europe date from this era. Although some lands became waste through lack of tilling, those people who survived grasped the property of those who had not. Europe then had a land-based economic system. Rich people became richer. There began a labor shortage: The wages of farm hands began to rise. In the surviving towns they needed people to guard the gates: Cities became more powerful in the depleted lands, and authority grew more centralized. Towns, courts, and feudal manors had their priests, monasteries and nunneries had their scriptoria or libraries, and after the 11th century CE, a few cities had Universities, schools to educate men to be high-ranking clerics, lawyers, or doctors. Where children had schools, their parents paid a fee so that they might learn Latin, the language St. Jerome had used for his translation of the Bible. Latin was the language of the Church. It was also learned, along with military tactics and the rules of chivalry, by men who trained to be knights. A smattering of Latin was necessary, along with Math, even for the elementary schools which sprang up in some cities. There both boys and girls were taught literacy and math, prerequisite for acceptance as an apprentice in many Guilds. Latin across Europe created a European-wide culture: As in the Greek and Roman eras, only a minority of people went to school.

Chapter 3 : Imagining the Internet

Animal Crossing is a game where you play as a human living in a town full of animals. A game where responsibility really shows, from helping out your neighbours and paying the debts of your house. When I first heard about Animal Crossing I thought it was really stupid. The game looked like something a 7 year old would play. I was about 13 when I discovered Animal Crossing so my opinion on a game like this would make sense. One night while visiting my friend I saw that he had copy of Animal Crossing. I made fun of him for owning the game, but he told me that he liked the game and he kept saying good things about it, but all I did was laugh at him about how much he was praising it. We almost went into an argument over the game, but before we did, my friend offered me a bet to play the game for a whole week. I assumed that he wanted me to see why he loved it and expected me to enjoy it just as much as he did. I accepted his offer and went off home to play the game. Only a week I got this game till. I started up the game and laughed right away at the title screen for how "babyish" it looked. My brother even snickered at me when he took a look at the game. After he left I just went ahead and I hit the start button and started playing the game. After spending a couple of hours on it, it was not long until I got hooked onto the game. Hours became days, days became weeks, and weeks became months. I had the game for two months, yes I did forget to return it to my friend. When I visited my friend he mentioned about the game since he had forgotten that he lent it to me, I told him that I was going to give it back to him but he was kind enough to let me keep it, I gave out a huge sigh of relief to hear him say that. I spent about two years playing this game and I ended up hearing that it had a sequel Animal Crossing: Wild World and it was already out. I was ready for this game and I even heard it was out for the DS, which I already have. I ended up getting it as a gift for my 15th birthday, it was a gift I did not regret. During my life I also bought Animal Crossing: I have mostly been waiting for the new Animal Crossing game "New Leaf" since hearing about it back in E3 of It is one of the only games I wanted to get along with Pokemon X and Y for So after saving my money I managed to get New Leaf and started a new and exciting life. I started the game and I found myself sitting once again in a train. I sat there and saw a blue and white cat walking up to me, it was Rover, I laughed at how many times people had to run into THIS guy before they got into their town. Anyway, Rover did the usual Animal Crossing beginning steps; Ask for your name, ask what your gender and asking what the name of my town is going to be. After sitting there thinking I finally came up with a name; Everlast. That name came out of nowhere in my head and I liked it. Rover then proceeded to show me some maps just to show how the layout of my town is going to look. After completing everything I was told, we were arriving in my town. She and the other animals said "welcome" and the dog told me that I was the new mayor of this town, funny how they think that the mayor they want just had to be a fucking human of all things. We talked and I mostly told her that; "you got it wrong" and everything, but she just ignored me and I just went with it. She showed me where the town hall was, so after I talked to her I headed down there. I wanted to talk to the other animals but I needed to get this done as soon as possible. I exited the Town Hall and proceeded to the Main Street. I saw a blue building on the left of the post office and as I entered I saw a familiar face; Tom Nook. I talked to Tom about me being the mayor and I asked him for a house, after the conversation he went outside with me into town to make a house. I told Tom that I wanted to have my house built just in the middle of nowhere away from the other houses. Nook then set me up a yellow tent and told me that my house would be built by tomorrow morning. I went off to Isabelle to tell her that I finished what I was supposed to do. Isabelle asked me for my birthday and gave me an ID card, afterwards she told me that I needed to head down to the "event plaza" for a ceremony. I arrived at the plaza to see a dirt area and I was standing in front of Isabelle, once again we were surrounded by the animal neighbours. Isabelle handed me a sapling and I planted it. Afterwards Isabelle left to do her original work and I was standing there in the plaza. I had nothing else to do so I went and talked to my animal neighbours. The neighbours I had were one cat, two dogs, one eagle and a wolf. After talking to my neighbours I went back to Tom. Tom told me that I needed to pay my loan in order to pay for my house, the amount he wanted was 10, bells. He told me that I could get this much money by doing the usual thing when starting out in Animal Crossing; shaking trees to obtain the fruits, getting seashells, hunting bugs and fishing. I did this for about ten minutes and I managed to make about 12, bells. I paid Tom the money and he told me that my house could now be made. Now that I finally paid off the debt I turned off my game since it was nearly 11 at night and I had school the next morning. I saved the game and went off to bed. I got into the game after I finished doing some homework for school and as soon as I entered the game I saw that my house was finally made. It was small on the outside and pretty damn small inside, also as I went inside the house, Isabelle came in behind me. She gave me a wallpaper and gave me instructions on how to design the inside of my house and on using the camera. When she was done, Isabelle headed off back to the Town Hall. I was left standing in my house and I went off to hunt for some more bugs and fish just to be ready for my next loan for the house. I spent about two hours catching bugs and fishing for fish. During those sessions I talked to my animal neighbours and I had to do errands for them, mostly doing it to get free items for my house and for myself. Looking for bugs and fish I managed to make up to 12, bells once again. I went off to see Tom and he told me that my next loan for the house would be for about 39, bells. As I was done talking to Tom I went off to town to find my bugs and fishes to make it up for the loan. I managed to make up about 9, bells from bugs and fishes and had about 21, bells in total. Once again it was getting late and I had to get ready for school in the morning. I saved the game and went off to bed for school. The online feature was something that really got my interest, it first came out for Wild World and it was something I was really interested in at the time. Now the moment I got New Leaf I had a good internet and I was ready to use the online feature on it, so I decided to have my town open just for others to see. One night though while I was doing an assignment for an animal I got a notice about someone that just entered my town. I stopped doing what I was doing and ran to the train station. Upon walking up to the station I stopped and I saw someone. It was a guy. He was wearing a striped green shirt, his face was the default face for the character and he was holding a slingshot. He stopped in front of one of my ponds and spun around in place. I asked what he was doing in my town again. He stopped in place while he was spinning. He looked at me. After I said that to him he once again ran away. He instantly stopped by a nearby river. He looked at me and spun in place again. I started to laugh in real life. This guy was funny to watch. He dropped about 22, bells below him, and he once again did a spin. The most money I usually made in the game is about 12, bells. With this much I was able to afford to pay the loan I have for the house. I just stood there watching him as he still spun. I walked up to him and picked it up. Afterwards he ran away. While I was following him he started bugging out. As soon as he said that he was gone. I assumed that he lost connection with my town. I then just stood there in the place where he disconnected while other animals were walking around me with shovels and fishing poles. I now had enough money to pay for my home thanks to this random person. Afterwards, I ran to Nook to pay the debt. The next day as I exited out of my home I saw my mail box flashing.

Harper alone would add a handful of wins, but if he does come aboard, the Phils will still have work to do before or after that signing. Britton would offer a unique look, as a lefty with a power sinker. Going from Pat Neshek to Dominguez to Britton would offer the opponent three completely different styles and repertoires in innings. The Phillies would lock down plenty of leads. Nor do I love the idea of trading good young players for the injury-prone James Paxton or Robbie Ray. Since , Happ is with a 3. Yates is also cost-controlled for a low price. From a Phillies perspective, Yates seems like an overly optimistic return. Stammen, who you probably remember from his seven seasons with the Nationals, is coming off his best year. He had a 2. Erlin, a lefty, made 39 appearances, 12 starts, and exhibited tremendous control, walking just 12 batters in innings. Sign Wilson Ramos If Harper comes aboard, it would likely mean Rhys Hoskins moves back to first base and Carlos Santana plays more third base than anyone expected. Where else is there to improve? Ramos and Yasmani Grandal are the top two catchers on the free-agent market. Both are coming off very good offensive years and both have question marks. But both players will get decent offers because offense behind the plate is at a premium. There just are not many catchers around the league who can hit. Ramos was awesome for the Phillies The Phillies acquired him with 55 games left and he played 33, hitting . If they feel comfortable he can reach plus plate appearances again in , they should bring him back. ### Chapter 5 : Tame Impala - Wikipedia

Mac Miller was found dead in his Studio City home earlier this month after a friend called The emergency call was placed for a patient in cardiac arrest but the year-old was pronounced.

In his youth, he played football for Lourdes Celtic Football Club. Following that, he commenced a plumbing apprenticeship. He won via technical knockout TKO in the first round. Following the fight, he turned professional and was signed by the Irish Cage of Truth promotion. After McGregor won his second fight against Mo Taylor, he made his featherweight debut in a loss via submission against Artemij Sitenkov. After a victory at featherweight in his next bout against Stephen Bailey, McGregor contemplated a different career path before his mother contacted his coach John Kavanagh and reinvigorated him to continue pursuing mixed martial arts. Following this, during and, McGregor went on an eight-fight winning streak, [26] during which he won both the CWFC Featherweight and Lightweight championships, making him the first European professional mixed martial artist to hold titles in two divisions simultaneously. McGregor, repeatedly throwing a counter left hand, found little success with his initial striking. After ascertaining that Brimage was susceptible to a snap kick directed at his chest and chin, McGregor began to employ a looping left hand uppercut, throwing every time Brimage would move forward into striking range. These uppercuts grounded Brimage shortly after McGregor started to use them. The bout was stopped 1: Following the bout with Holloway, an MRI scan revealed that McGregor had torn his anterior cruciate ligament ACL during the bout and would require surgery, keeping him out of action for up to ten months. McGregor began the fight with a signature spinning side kick, before finding his range and successfully landing various taekwondo kicks, and left hand counters. Nonetheless, much of the fight was spent on the ground, as McGregor attained a takedown 1: When the fight returned to the feet in the third minute, McGregor began to employ his left hand cross, and started to cut off the cage. The win earned McGregor his first "Performance of the Night" award. The finish officially came at 1: If McGregor were to win the fight, he would face Aldo for the Featherweight Championship later in McGregor kept distance by using side kicks to the legs of Siver, as well as wild spinning wheel kicks and leaping roundhouse kicks. Siver, a capable Brazilian Jiu-Jitsu [53] and Judo [54] practitioner, attempted three takedowns in the first round of the bout, but McGregor was able to avoid all three attempts handily. Referee Herb Dean officially stopped the fight at 1: The win came via TKO. McGregor made use of his eight-inch reach advantage [71] by throwing various taekwondo techniques at range, including a multitude of spinning back kicks, and a roundhouse kick. After being hit with an elbow from Mendes, McGregor attempted to escape back to his feet, suffering a striking combination as a result. The third and final successful takedown for round 1 for Mendes occurred at 3: Mendes briefly attempted a topside guillotine in the final half a minute of the round, but McGregor was able to roll out of the submission. After a successful variety of boxing combinations, Mendes landed a takedown at 0: McGregor, remaining offensive on the ground, landed a flurry of 7 elbow strikes to the head of Mendes from 2: With 10 seconds left in the round, McGregor landed a jab-cross combination that sent Mendes to the canvas. A series of strikes delivered to the grounded Mendes forced Herb Dean to step in and halt the bout at 4: To come in here and just to hear all the support [at the weigh-ins] and today If he wants to come back, he can come back, but I swear to god his day will come. This would be the second consecutive time McGregor would be scheduled to fight in Las Vegas in the headlining match. During the customary staredown, both men needed to be separated from one another. The final attendance for the event also broke the Nevada attendance record, with a live attendance figure of 16, Neither man performed the customary touch of gloves. As the bout began, both men rushed to the centre of the cage. McGregor threw the first strike of the fight, a left cross which failed to connect. But as Aldo attempted this combination, McGregor stepped back and countered with his own left hook. After delivering two additional hammerfists to the grounded Aldo, John McCarthy halted the bout. The win over Aldo extended his UFC win streak to 7 and overall win streak to But precision beats power, and timing beats speed.

He was a phenomenal champion. We deserved to go a little longer. Cerrone 2 , between reigning champion Rafael dos Anjos , and the 2 lightweight contender, Donald Cerrone. I will fight you in Brazil. I will go to Ireland to fight you there. McGregor criticised his opponent on numerous occasions throughout the press conference, stating "Rafael dos Anjos is a free TV fighter. He fights on free TV. I like the sound of that pound title as well. I feel like I can take three gold belts. On 23 February, it was announced that dos Anjos was withdrawing from the fight after breaking his foot. The first minute consisted of McGregor showcasing a variety of kicks, before Diaz initiated a clinch, and forced McGregor to the cage. McGregor, aware that Diaz would bring his head low after delivering a jab-cross combination, attempted to make use of a left uppercut, with varied success. The final minute consisted of both men exchanging blows, before a slow body kick from McGregor led to Diaz taking him down at 4: McGregor began to connect with significant combinations, until Diaz clinched and pushed McGregor to the fence, at 1: After a combination of uppercuts from McGregor at 1: After a 7-strike combination from McGregor, Diaz separated from the exchange and proceeded to land a jab-cross combination at 2: A swarm of strikes, including a slap, followed this combination, Diaz landing with great effectiveness until the initiation of another clinch, where Diaz landed 10 strikes. After the two disengaged, McGregor returned fire with a barrage of 4 strikes, before being hit with two consecutive jab-cross combinations. In an effort to avoid the assault, McGregor gave up his back, allowing Diaz to punch his head into the crook of his arm, and secure a rear naked choke. McGregor tapped to the submission at 4: It broke his winning streak of 15 consecutive wins, and was his first loss since November I respect Nate; he came in, he took the fight on short notice, came in at , and done the job. He was efficient, I was not efficient. That was it, I feel. We win some, we lose some. I will never shy away from a challenge. I will never shy away from defeat. This is the fight business. McGregor is left handed and primarily fights out of the southpaw stance , but often switches to an orthodox stance. He will frequently try to be the aggressor in his bouts. Kavanagh recalls McGregor as "a game kind of boxer. He was very game. He loved to fight. But he was also very strong â€” he could seriously bang. The bout was contested at super welterweight pounds with 8 oz. In the post-fight, he revealed it was part of the game plan to let McGregor punch himself out in the early rounds. McGregor was warned a few times through the fight for hitting behind the head, but no points were deducted by referee Robert Byrd. By the fourth round, McGregor began to tire and breathe heavily with his mouth open. Mayweather started to take control and landed with his right hands. For the next few rounds, McGregor came out throwing shots in the opening 30 seconds, but immediately tired, giving Mayweather enough time to carry on landing clean and winning the rounds. In round 9, McGregor had almost nothing left. Two of the judges scored the round 10â€™8 to Mayweather. In round 10, Mayweather landed some hard shots which staggered McGregor across the ring and had him heavily slopped against the ropes. After a few unanswered punches with McGregor barely on his feet, the referee waved the fight off. The time of stoppage was 1 minute and 5 seconds of round Tonight, ladies and gentlemen, for sure I chose the right dance partner to dance with. Conor McGregor, you are a hell of a champion. I owed them for the Pacquiao fight. This was far less than the Mayweather vs. This also meant the fight generated more buys in the UK than Mayweather-Pacquiao which took place in McGregor worked on the whiskey for over three years prior to the launch. The whiskey is named after the Crumlin neighborhood, in Dublin 12 , in which McGregor grew up. McGregor is the founder and owner of the company.

It turned out that the temperature never dropped below 70 F 21 C the entire night. We ended up sleeping more on top of the covers than under them. Before leaving our Rain Gauge showed over an Inch. We were up shortly after 8: I was driving the Truck and Kathy was following with the Car. The issue to check was the Regeneration of the Diesel Particulate Filter has not been engaging which could cause it to plug up and leave us stranded by the roadside. Guardian Storage yard flooding. Our next stop was to collect our Mail at Guardian Storage. Both Carrol and Wendy know that we must be counting the days before we leave town and are excited for us. As we were heading away I recalled going to Fasten-al across the road. We bought brand new Camping Chairs at Camping World last year but because the desert stones are not always flat it has sheared the Crossbar Rivets. Today I found the same bolts in a Number 8 Grade Bolt. These will never shear off again. Since we had to drive by Rose City Ford where we purchased our Escape we stopped in to schedule its Oil Change before we leave. I also mentioned a few other things we were never explained about the Car. They sent Dan the Salesman that sold us the vehicle out in the Drizzling Rain to make the adjustments for us and to find out what the Keyless Entry Code was. Our next stop was the Credit Union to get coins for our Laundry. We have an appointment for that. It was nearly Tasty, Filling and Healthy. It was just before noon that I dropped Kathy off at the front door of the Windsor Rehabilitation Center because it was still Raining. The Doctor had changed her medication which aggravated her Ulcer causing her more discomfort. We talked about a number of different things and Vera appreciated every second we could stay to visit but we had to say our Good-Byes shortly after 2: Just before we were about to leave my Cell Phone started ringing. They had found an Error that was not allowing it to go into Regeneration and once that was cleared it was working just fine. Hard to see that it is drizzling. The Rain was still falling so it slowed traffic down as we crossed the city for the second time today. This time we had to wait until 3: With the new On-Line Questionnaires that I was able to do this morning on my own Computer it took less than Five Minutes to get processed. I was enjoying an OJ and Cookies by 3: Our next stop was easy because we simply walked through the building because VitalAire and Canadian Blood Services share the same building. Tiara had all our CPAP Supplies ready for us so within a few minutes we went back through the building keeping dryer before getting out to the Car. Kathy had questions about a proposed Tuner Kit and what its benefits would be along with the Approximate Cost. By the time everything was put away and we settled in at our Computers it was 9: Before we could get out the door our daughter Karen was calling to say the News Channel was showing a Funnel Cloud heading our way. Within minutes it was packed with people. We closed the doors to the Washrooms and stayed in the Hallway. Spencer said he and his wife have lived here for 16 years and this is the first time they have ever been warned to seek shelter. It was over an Hour later when everyone started heading Home. That was when we all got soaking wet from the driving Rain that suddenly flared up. Another day with over a dozen stops. Thank you for following along and feel free to leave a comment. Knowing that the Alarm was again set made it feel like a Pretravel Night where the anticipation is so great that we barely sleep. I was certain today we would be stuck making numerous stops behind School Buses with their Flashing Lights. Traffic in both directions must stop when that is happening to protect the children. We again lucked out because the Bus we were following was empty and was heading back to the depot. Warm Cloudy Skies this morning. Being that others had not shown up for their appointments they took us in immediately. The worst news we got was the Weather Forecast showing Colder Temperatures with Precipitation Of White heading to our area before we are scheduled to leave. Everything is Electronically Controlled today so the problem can hide itself before returning. With time on our hands we went to walk around the newly renovated Walmart. We were impressed with a few things but not others. It was nearly Kathy reads a lot of books and lucky for her the Park has a Book Exchange Library that gives her a supply of fresh material. They sell gently used books at reasonable prices but to make it even better, if you buy Four Books you get One Free. Kathy might have enough books to see her through the winter now. Clear Cool Skies this afternoon. I wrote a while back how we bring our Medications and Vitamins from home when we travel. Since we are leaving in four weeks we headed over to the Shoppers Drug Mart on Manning Road to get the last of what we need. Even though it was costly today we saved a lot and we got a lot of points that we can use to save money, even at the Grocery Store. Sanford with his new Toy. It has been a while but we had a Gift to deliver. He never put it down the entire time we were there. When Greg came home from work Sanford brought his new Toy to show him. We talked for a few minutes before heading out. It was only 4: We took our time, enjoying our tasty meal but it was soon time to head out. We had brought our Jackets with us and by 5: Tyler Black 87 We went to the Tecumseh Arena for 5: After being away from it for a year he found a league that he could play in close to home. This league consists of Teenagers 16 and Older. Tyler seemed to play like he always did but some of his team-mates forgot there is no I in team, which was a costly mistake. When we arrived Home in the Park, we were so tired that we only brought in what was necessary and the rest can wait until tomorrow. Thank you for following along and feel free to leave a comment. ### Chapter 8 : SpongeBob SquarePants (season 1) - Wikipedia

I finally arrived at Leafy and headed to his home, funny thing is that I had never seen his house when I visited the first time, I was too busy exploring his town. When I got to his house I stopped in my place and took a look at his house, his home was a mansion.

Family[ edit ] Montferrand was born in the parish of Chaillot , France now the 16th arrondissement of Paris. Decades later, Montferrand admitted in his will that, although his father owned Montferrand estate, the title is disputable "and if there is any doubt, I can accept other names, first of all Ricard, after my father". Montferrand married Julia Mornais in 1807. The next year, he was again drafted into the Army when Allied troops were approaching Dresden. Montferrand worked on a few unimportant jobs, spending three years performing basic draftsmanship and seeking opportunities overseas. In 1812, he was granted an audience with Alexander I of Russia , and presented the Tsar with an album of his works. Petersburg, carrying a recommendation letter from Abraham-Louis Breguet. On December 21, 1812, he officially joined the Russian service. His first major project, the Odessa Lycaeam , did not materialize due to financing problems. The fairgrounds were transferred to Nizhny Novgorod , equipped with temporary wooden trade rows. Betancourt visited the site in 1813 and proposed a six-million- rouble , four-year project to rebuild the Fair using stone. Alexander I approved it, at the expense of halting the reconstruction of the Winter Palace. Montferrand, as chief architect, reported to Betancourt, who personally managed the project. Montferrand started with the two-story main administration building. This traditional, neoclassical design was marked by custom column capitals with a caduceus motif. The fair itself consisted of eight two-story corner blocks and 48 standard trade row buildings. Despite shortages in manpower and material, the Fair opened in July 1813. Rectification work proceeded to and consumed a further 3. In 1814, Alexander I assigned Betancourt to find the architect who could rebuild the cathedral; Betancourt pointed at Montferrand. Four original concepts, using as much of the old structure as possible, failed; the fifth was approved in February 1814. The foundation work took five years. It took more than a decade to obtain the 48 granite columns for the main portico. In the same time, bricklayers completed the main walls and vaulted ceilings. Montferrand proposed an all-metal triple-dome system, where the middle conical dome carried the lightweight interior and exterior frames. The dome, completed in 1820, cost two million roubles less than originally estimated. Montferrand managed artists such as Karl Briullov and his brothers, Peter Clodt , and Ivan Vitali , all under close inspection by the State and Academy bureaucracies. The cost was estimated at 1. Petersburg, and transported by barge. Montferrand selected the quarry contractor in March 1821, in a bidding war that reduced the column price from thousand to thousand roubles. By April 1821, the carvers completed shaping it and started blasting the path from the quarry to the loading bay. The barge loading nearly ended in a catastrophe. The column broke through the ramp and threatened to roll over the barge; a team of workers managed to set it back in place. Petersburg prepared the foundation and scaffolding; the cost estimate doubled to 2. Montferrand summoned a total of 2, soldiers, officers, and professionals to erect the column, raising it safely on August 30, 1821. He prepared five different designs for the building terminating the eastern side of the square, but the Guards Corps building was awarded to Alexander Brullov. The Cathedral was built in 1822 by Andrey Voronikhin with temporary fittings. By 1823, the plaster sculptures were falling apart, and a leaking roof threatened to destroy frescoes and floors. Montferrand also supervised new fresco paintings The Four Evangelists. He lost the bid to design the new iconostasis to young Konstantin Thon. The statues were made by Boris Orlovsky , and the bases by Vasily Stasov. The foundation and base was started with leftovers from the St. The contract for the equestrian statue was awarded to Peter Clodt. Clodt completed the model in the summer of 1823. Other projects designed by Montferrand Project.

And I did a big interview with Cliff Johnson of Fool's Errand fame for an article a few years back about his career and his then-just-released-afteryears-development game A Fool and his Money. I may interview Cliff again as I write the chapter (yes, he gets a whole chapter) about him.

Ball State lost on Homecoming. They started their drive near midfield before redshirt junior Riley Neal connected with sophomore Justin Hall for a yard gain, setting the Cardinals up at the Neal subsequently connected with redshirt junior Riley Miller in the end zone for the first score of the game. The Bobcats had a solid drive going and found themselves at the Ball State 1-yard line as the clock expired in the first quarter. Maleek Irons would punch it in to start the second to even the score at seven apiece. This was the start of eight consecutive Bobcat scoring drives and seven straight Cardinal three-and-outs. Once the Bobcats found the end zone, they simply kept rolling. A Cardinal fumble set Ohio up in great field position, and A. Ouellette finished the job with a 9-yard touchdown. All eight plays gained yardage, and the drive was capped off by a 2-yard plunge by quarterback Nathan Rourke. Ball State sent redshirt sophomore Drew Plitt out at quarterback for its last drive of the first half, as it appeared as though Neal had injured himself on the previous possession. The Bobcats used the sidelines as their friend, getting out-of-bounds on two separate downfield gains. On the first play after a timeout, Rourke found Andrew Meyer for a touchdown with two seconds left in the half. Ohio went into the locker room up with more offensive yards than the Cardinals. Rourke was once again the beneficiary, running it in from three yards out. Following another Cardinal three-and-out, Ohio switched quarterbacks, and Quinton Maxwell entered the game. On his first play, Maxwell connected with Meyer for a yard gain. Ouellette broke a yard run to the end zone on the next play, extending the lead to The Bobcats once again took advantage of the turnover, as Irons ran for his second score of the day, marking the eighth straight Ohio drive resulting in points. Another three-and-out for Ball State brought out the remaining reserves for the Bobcats, and a missed field goal attempt finally ended the scoring streak. Ball State at last reached the end zone again late in the fourth quarter. Ohio ran down the remaining time on the clock and walked away with a convincing victory. Ball State struggled to move the ball at all offensively. The Cardinals ended the day with only yards and 11 first downs. The Bobcats only completed 12 passes, but they had six rushing touchdowns and two players with yard rushing games. Contact Zach Piatt with comments at zapiatt@bsu.edu.
