Charles Gordon Matthews, 70, passed away at home in Short Hills on June 8, Gordon was born in Danville, IL, and had lived in Millburn-Short Hills for the past 33 years.

In command was Leonard Calvert, brother to the lord proprietor, who served as governor of Maryland until In March , the ships landed at St. Michels, he acknowledged he was indebted to John Holes for one thousand pounds of tobacco, and he bound his crop of corn and tobacco for the debt. On 4 August Capt. Thomas Cornwaley demanded of John Prettyman three hundred sixty two pounds of tobacco for debt and damage, and one pound and half of beaver. Michaels Hundred was assessed Twenty three pounds of tobacco as part of the general levy on the hundred. We know that John Prettiman was a member of this expedition as he was one of the ones that an account was submitted for pay. The expedition was under the command of Will Macifenin, Sergeant. Corwaleys furnished powder, bullets and lead for the expedition. Thomas Coply, Esquire, three hundred pounds of tobacco due him for wages. Maryes [Maryland] went out to stand for a Deere and coming back Rowland Vaughan spooke unto John Prettyman to goe with this deponent and his Company to the Sweades [present Delaware] by Land whereunto the said Prettyman Answered saying I am ingaged I cannot goe Whereupon Rowland Vaughan voluntarily proferred to give the said Prettyman a bill of Nyne hundred pounds of tobacco to saitsfy his debts if hee would goe along with him and his company whereupon this deponent and all his Company proferred the said Rowland saying it shall not bee given wee will all make you satisfactin att the Dutch Plantation with which proferr the said vaughan was content. The court ordered John to repay the debt by last of December. He could sign his name in an era when only small minority of men could sign their name. This is an indication that he had a background above that of the normal settler. It is an indication to me that his family, considering that he attempted to farm, was a landowning family in England with some education. He was not a good farmer, but seemed to be a leader and capable in a military situation. This is an indication that he probably came from a landowning family that had tenants to do the work. He was a "freeman", and not imported as a servant. He probably paid his own passage. His family had probably lost much of their property, etc. He was probably at least 21 years old when he came to Maryland, would have been born probably between to There have been numerous theories on the ancestor of John Prettyman of Maryland and Virginia. If John had a son then I believe the laws were such in England that the son should have inherited the land, and since he did not this is an indication that John had no sons. Furthermore the London Middlesex Parish registers show that John of Holborn was born no earlier than So his children had to be born no earlier than In fact the Parish register of St. John, son of John and Margaret, died in May This document is a letter dated 28 Feb from the Right Hon. This Robert could not be the ancestor of the John in Maryland as Robert was styled batchelor in [See Muskett p]. We have not ruled out the last possible fit and that is Robert, brother of John of Stebon Heath. Ernest George Pretyman stated; "I have little doubt that Robert is the founder of the American stock. Ernest George Pretyman is quoting his great grandfather and great uncle and may have been confused as to which Robert. Proper age-no other documented John within proper age group.

Hunt died in Baltimore last Sunday, aged 60 years. He married a lady of Northampton, and was well known in both counties. Mary Nicholson Kelley, wife of Thomas B. Kelley, of Northampton county, died Thursday, Feb 11th, at the residence of her sister, Mrs. The interment was made in Fredericksburg, Va. He was born in Northampton co. In his childhood the family removed to Baltimore, where he was educated in the public schools. In , at the age of nineteen, he located in the town of Hampton, Va. When the War of the States began, he did not hesitate in his allegiance to his State; but in April, , he volunteered in the Washington Light Artillery, organized at Hampton and officered by some of its most prominent citizens, one of the lieutenants being James Barron Hope, the poet and magazine writer and after the war a distinguished journalist of Norfolk. As a member of that command Comrade Richardson participated in the Pennsylvania campaign, including the siege of Yorktown, the battle of Williamsburg, and the retreat to Richmond. On arriving there, by some mismanagement the company was disbanded and the men sought service in other commands. Porter, afterwards promoted to commander of a battery of field artillery. As a private in this renowned command Richardson proved his mettle in some of the most hotly contested battles of the Army of Northern Virginia. He did all that was honorable, just, and brave for the Southern cause. From the privations and sufferings of prison life, almost more than mortal man could endure, he never entirely recovered, and from their effects he was a life long sufferer. Yet he would never give up as long as he was able to walk, living only two months after he retired from business. In he began merchandising on a small scale and continued in business thirty years, constantly enlarging it and accumulating a competency. During that time he filled quite a number of positions of public character, serving as alderman and Mayor of Hampton after its incorporation. Ten years later, upon urgent request, he consented to serve again as mayor, the conditions requiring a man of experience and tact to redeem the errors of previous administrations. He was also for seven years Commander of R. At the age of seventy-two years he folded his hands and was at peace with his Maker, for he had been a Christian many years. Comrade Richardson, was twice married, and surviving him are his widow, a son, and two daughters, with a host of friends, one of whom in his far off Texas home sends this tribute to the gallant soldier and true son of the South. Savage, of Northampton county, died to-day, aged sixty-three. She is survived by her husband, three sons - William T. Travis - and two daughters - Mrs. Ames and Miss Mary Travis, of Norfolk.
