

Chapter 1 : Christmas in the Country Craft Show | DeKalb County Events

"Jingle bells, Jingle bells, Jingle all the way " What a great Christmas carol. Too bad Chrissie Tripp can't really play it on her fife. In practice she just moves her fingers and hopes that no one else in the Lincoln Lions Band will notice that no sound is coming out.

She is an author and teacher. She was educated at Marymount College, where she was awarded a B. Giff now resides in Weston, Connecticut, along with her husband James and their three children. The stories revolve around second-grade teacher Ms. Rooney and the students in her class, in particular perpetual troublemaker Richard Best nicknamed "Beast" and Emily Arrow, who is good in math but terrible in reading. Books in the series include: The Beast in Ms. Made into a musical by ArtsPower. The Valentine Star - Emily reports her classmate Sherri for misbehaving in class, and Sherri vows revenge. Lazy Lions, Lucky Lambs - Richard has trouble with a writing assignment, since writing is his worst subject. Snaggle Doodles - Ms. Rooney assigns her students to groups to come up with inventions, and Emily clashes with Linda, the bossy leader of her group. Purple Climbing Days - Richard struggles with rope-climbing in physical education class. The Candy Corn Contest - Mrs. Rooney offers a jar of candy corn as a prize for whoever correctly guesses the number of candies in the jar. December Secrets - Emily is assigned the irritating class "crybaby," Jiliannel Simon, as a "secret pal" for the month of December. B-E-S-T Friends - Annie, the "weird" new girl in class, constantly irritates Stacy, but then Stacy is assigned to be her class partner. Garbage Juice for Breakfast - Dawn participates in a treasure hunt at summer camp. The Beast and the Halloween Horror - Beast finds himself in trouble after he fudges a letter-writing assignment. Monster Rabbit Runs Amuck! Look Out, Washington D. Next Stop, New York City! Rooney takes her class on a trip to New York City. Eleven - Sam Mackenzie thinks that his "grandfather" has kidnapped him. Newbery Honor Plot: Her father and a grandmother are her only family. She looks forward to this trip every year, and hopes to spend a fun summer with the small family she loves. Alone with her grandmother, Lily sees a long lonely summer ahead. And then, Albert appears. A refugee from Hungary, from his family thrown to the winds to his escape from the Nazis, young Albert bears a grief and sadness of his own. His sister, Ruth, is in France and his grandmother is in Hungary. Lily learns to deal with the situation of having her best friend gone, she is friends Albert, and makes her summer a little more worthwhile. All the Way Home Plot: Unexpected help comes in the form of Mariel, whose big heart cannot always overcome the weakness of her polio-stricken legs. Determined to help Brick and discover the identity of her birth mother, Mariel finds a way to get them both to Windy Hill A wonderful story of friendship and personal triumph for the preteen set. Pictures of Hollis Woods Awards: She immediately bonds with Josie, her new guardian, who is a slightly eccentric, retired art teacher. Yet Hollis is far from content. She finds her self wondering what it would be like if she were still with the Regans. She misses the mountain. Giff intersperses tender scenes demonstrating Hollis s growing affection for Josie with memories of the Regans, whose images Hollis preserves in her sketchbook. As readers become intimately acquainted with Hollis, they will come to understand her fears, regrets and longings, and will root for her as she pursues her dream of finding a home where she belongs. Life is hard for poor Irish potato farmers, but year-old Nory Ryan and her family have always scraped by And just like that, all their hopes for the harvest Hunger sets in quickly. The beaches are stripped of edible seaweed, the shore is emptied of fish, desperate souls even chew on grass for the nourishment. As her community falls apart, Nory scrambles to find food for her family. Meanwhile, the specter of America lurks, where, the word is, no one is ever hungry, and horses carry milk in huge cans down cobblestone streets. As Patricia Reilly Giff writes in her note to the reader, the Great Hunger of to was a tragic time for the Irish. Enough food to feed double the population was sent out across the sea, while an indifferent government ignored the starving masses. More than one million of the eight million people in Ireland died. One by one, her family has departed for a new life in America; Nory is the last to go. Readers will be engrossed in the series of dramatic events, as well as the grueling day-by-day struggle, as the protagonists suffer injuries, thievery, separations, and horrific sea passages. The very real tragedy of the Irish potato famine and the subsequent exodus from that country is brought to life in a fictional account that will make a profound, lasting mark on the memories of young readers. A House of Tailors Plot: Her mother is very proud of Dina and her sister Katharina. Dina does not like sewing very much. She dreams of "escaping" from her sewing machine, and soon her wish comes true. She is horrified when she finds out her uncle is also a tailor, and soon, she has to help out and sew again. She is miserable and homesick. She tries to fit in and also to stand up to her uncle, who is about as stubborn as she is. Soon, her uncle and his family realize that Dina is so strong and brave. Readers will enjoy all her adventures while learning about the struggles our ancestors had to go through when coming to America. But in the process, Meggie runs away from her best friend Lily, and meets new friends in Willow Run. Desperately, Meggie does everything to locate him while her parents pray and hope that Eddie is still alive. In the end, Meggie finds hope. Her brother and father move to America after her death. Then, when twelve-year-old Lidie leaves Brazil to go to America to join her father and brother on a horse ranch in New York, she has a hard time adjusting to the new lifestyle. The same thing happens when she receives a horse.

Have You Seen Hyacinth Macaw?: The Winter Worm Business: Sweeny, Where Are You?: The War Began at Supper: Show Time at the Polk Street School: Monster Rabbit Runs Amuk! Look Out, Washington, D. Next Stop, New York City! Happy Birthday, Anna, Sorpresa! Adaptations Work in Progress Sidelights A prolific author, Patricia Reilly Giff specializes in writing humorous books for middle-grader readers. In both her novels and her multi-book series, Giff explores situations that are readily familiar to young people: Although she did not begin writing until her early forties, Giff always had a clear idea of her objectives. She once commented, "I had worked with so many children who had terrible problems that I wanted to say things that would make them laugh. I wanted to tell them they were special. On winter evenings I shared an armchair with my father while he read Hiawatha and Evangeline to me. I wanted to write. Intimidated by such masterworks, she changed her major from English to business, "and then to history, where I listened to a marvelous man named Mullee spin tales about the past. I fell into teaching because my beloved dean, who had no idea I wanted to write, saw that it was a good place for me. Slowly and painfully, I began to write. Rooney decides to have her students stage plays. Bring-your-pet-to-school week becomes the focus of Pet Parade, as student Beast looks for another pet to take to Ms. Serving as both a story and a tour guide of sorts, the books feature maps of their subject cities, as well as phone numbers of the most favorite tourist attractions for kids. In Starring Rosie, although unhappy about finding herself cast as the evil witch rather than the star in Sleeping Beauty, Rosie rebounds, offers to find a boy to play the handsome prince, and then must make good on her promise. But finding a boy willing to wear tights on stage in front of all his friends proves to be no easy task in what School Library Journal contributor Eva Mitnick characterized as a "breezy and fun" read. A Glass Slipper for Rosie finds the young dancer involved in another class production, although disappointment follows when she realizes her grandfather may not be in town to see the show. Bair praised A Glass Slipper for Rosie as "a well-rounded story about family and friends. In Ho, Ho, Benjamin, Feliz Navidad a young boy shares the holiday season with his homesick Ecuadorian neighbor and learns about Christmas celebrations in other countries. Sarah appears again in Say Hola, Sarah. Here her progress in learning Spanish is being aided by Anna, although she is frustrated at how slowly she is advancing in another book that includes short lessons in the language. In the poignant story, which takes place during the summer of as World War II rages across Europe, fifteen-year-old Lily is left behind with her grandmother as her widowed father joins the army to fight the Nazi threat overseas. The former title takes place at the onset of the Irish Potato Famine in , and is a survival story related by twelve-year-old Nory Ryan. She lives with her family on the west-central coast on a subsistence-level farm; worried that they may be evicted any day and hoping their father will come back from sea with money to save them. When the famine strikes, many families decide to immigrate to America, and the Ryans want to join these. A contributor for Publishers Weekly found that the novel "meticulously recreates" the Great Hunger, as the Potato Famine was also called. Brick is sent to stay with a friend in Brooklyn when a fire destroys their apple crop in Brick and Mariel slowly become friends, and when he voices a desire to return to his home area to help a friend harvest apples, Mariel encourages him and even decides to join him. Her one desire is to trace her birth mother, and for that she must return to the hospital where she contracted polio. Reviewing the novel in Booklist, Ellen Mandel felt that Giff "delivers a memorable picture of s America" in this "tightly woven, inspirational story. Booklist reviewer GraceAnne A. Upon her arrival, Dina is disappointed to learn that her uncle, a tailor, lives with his family in a cramped Brooklyn tenement, and that she must earn her keep by helping him with the business. According to School Library Journal critic Barbara Auerback, A House of Tailors "is rich with believable, endearing characters as well as excitement and emotion.
