Early life[edit] John Fisher was born in Beverley , Yorkshire , [2] in , the eldest son of Robert Fisher, a modestly prosperous merchant of Beverley, and Agnes, his wife. He was one of four children. His father died when John was eight. His mother remarried and had five more children by her second husband, William White. Fisher seems to have had close contacts with his extended family all his life. He attended Beverley Grammar School , an old foundation claiming to date from the year Fisher earned a Bachelor of Arts degree in and in , proceeded to a Master of Arts degree. Also in Fisher received a papal dispensation to enter the priesthood despite being under canonical age. In he resigned his benefice to become proctor of the university and three years later was appointed master debator, about which date he also became chaplain and confessor to Margaret Beaufort, Countess of Richmond and Derby , mother of King Henry VII. On 5 July , he became a doctor of sacred theology and 10 days later was elected Vice-Chancellor of the University. He placed great weight upon pastoral commitment, above all popular preaching by the endowed staff. Fisher had a vision to which he dedicated all his personal resources and energies. A scholar and a priest, humble and conscientious, he managed despite occasional opposition to administer a whole university, one of only two in England. He conceived and saw through long-term projects. A stern and austere man, Fisher was known to place a human skull on the altar during Mass and on the table during meals. Nonetheless, Fisher stayed there, presumably by his own choice, for the remaining 31 years of his life. At the same time, like any English bishop of his day, Fisher had certain state duties. In particular, he maintained a passionate interest in the University of Cambridge. Re-elected annually for 10 years, Fisher ultimately received a lifetime appointment. As a preacher his reputation was so great that Fisher was appointed to preach the funeral oration for King Henry VII and the Lady Margaret, both of whom died in , the texts being extant. The latter attributes it "Epistulae" 6: In Fisher was nominated as one of the English representatives at the Fifth Council of the Lateran , then sitting, but his journey to Rome was postponed, and finally abandoned. Prior to this date Fisher had denounced various abuses in the church , urging the need for disciplinary reforms. In Fisher ordered the arrest of Thomas Hitton , a follower of William Tyndale , and subsequently interrogated him. Hitton was tortured and executed at the stake for heresy. Fisher, as a member of the upper house, the House of Lords , at once warned Parliament that such acts could only end in the utter destruction of the Catholic Church in England. The Commons , through their speaker, complained to the King that Fisher had disparaged Parliament , presumably with Henry prompting them behind the scenes. The opportunity was not lost. Henry summoned Fisher before him, demanding an explanation. This yere was a coke boylyd in a cauderne in Smythfeld for he wolde a powsyned the bishop of Rochester Fycher with dyvers of hys servanttes, and he was lockyd in a chayne and pullyd up and downe with a gybbyt at dyvers tymes tyll he was dede. This gave the King his opportunity and an edict forbidding such appeals was immediately issued, and the three bishops were arrested. Their imprisonment, however, must have lasted only a few months for in February , Convocation met, and Fisher was present. A cook, Richard Roose , was executed by boiling alive for attempted poisoning. Intrigues with the Holy Roman Emperor[edit] Fisher also engaged in secret activities to overthrow Henry. As early as he began secretly communicating with foreign diplomats. In September communicating secretly through the imperial ambassador Eustace Chapuys he encouraged Holy Roman Emperor Charles V to invade England and depose Henry in combination with a domestic uprising. Matters now moved rapidly. In January of the next year, Henry secretly went through a form of marriage with Anne Boleyn. It seems that the purpose of this arrest was to prevent him from opposing the sentence of divorce which Cranmer pronounced in May, or the coronation of Anne Boleyn which followed on 1 June, for Fisher was set at liberty again within a fortnight of the latter event, no charge being made against him. In the autumn of , various arrests were made in connection with the so-called revelations of the Holy Maid of Kent, Elizabeth Barton , but as Fisher was taken seriously ill in December, proceedings against him were postponed for a time. However, in March , a special Bill of Attainder against Fisher and others for complicity in the matter of the Maid of Kent was introduced in Parliament and passed. Subsequently a pardon was granted him on payment of a fine of pounds. The same session of Parliament passed the First Succession Act, by which all who should be called upon to do so were compelled to take an oath of succession, acknowledging the issue of Henry and Anne as legitimate heirs to the throne, under pain of being guilty of misprision of treason. Fisher refused the oath and was imprisoned in the Tower of London on 26 April. He was to remain in the Tower for over a year, and while he was allowed food and drink sent by friends, and a servant, he was not allowed a priest, even to the very end. A long letter exists, written from the Tower by Fisher to Thomas Cromwell, speaking of the severity of his conditions of imprisonment. The effect was precisely the reverse: The charge was treason, in that he denied that the King was the Supreme Head of the Church of England. Since he had been deprived of his position of Bishop of Rochester by the Act of Attainder, he was treated as a commoner, and tried by jury. The only testimony was that of Richard Rich. John Fisher was found guilty and condemned to be hanged, drawn, and quartered at Tyburn. John the Baptist on 24 June, and of attracting too much public sympathy, King Henry commuted the sentence to that of beheading, to be accomplished before 23 June, the Vigil of the feast of the Nativity of St. He was executed on Tower Hill on 22 June. John the Baptist, who was also beheaded; his death also happened on the feast day of Saint Alban, the first martyr of Britain. He met death with a calm dignified courage which profoundly impressed those present. There was no funeral prayer. Canonisation[edit] Portrait of Fisher, c. Portraits[edit] Several portraits of Fisher exist, the most prominent being by Hans Holbein the Younger in the Royal Collection; and a few secondary relics are extant. There are twenty-six works in all, printed and manuscript, mostly ascetical or controversial treatises, several of which have been reprinted many times. The original editions are very rare and valuable. A number of parishes are dedicated to St. John Fisher including those in:
