Characters[edit] Hal Mikkelson – Hal is the main character of the series. He is half-Araluen and half-Skandian. Unfortunately, he was killed in a raid, leaving Hal and his Araluen mother living alone. Due to his mother being an Araluen, he looked different than other Skandians, and was ignored and bullied by his peers. It is also with the inspiration of seabirds that Hal names his ship Heron. He is also the person who is mainly responsible for the liberation of Limmat and nearly lost his life while trying to save the Town and retrieve the Andomal from Zavac after its stolen from under their noses. Hal is also a very good swordsman and accurate with a crossbow. He is a great Navigator and Helmsmen and is smarter and quicker thinking than most other Skandians. He is perhaps the character who is the closest to Lydia, though she seems to feel torn between Hal and Stig, and she also is fond of Ingvar somewhat like a favorite teddy bear. He lost his right hand during a storm at sea and was, in his early years, the Maktig meaning "the Mighty One", a title for the greatest warrior in Skandia three years in a row, which no one had ever done the longest running besides him was only one year. Despite so, Thorn bore no grudge over the matter, though he admittedly did consider how it would have been if things turned out differently at some point of time. He was described as an "old drunk" by the Skandians due to the fact that he drank excessively after he lost his hand and death of his friend. Karina, gave Thorn a job and stopped his drinking habit. Soon, Thorn stopped drinking and found himself to be a helpful person. Hal makes a custom hook to place over his arm, and a war club to fit replace the hook when in battle. It gives him an extra edge in battle once more, and brings out his potential as a warrior. Thorn is greatly admired by the Heron crew as well as Lydia, who consistently believes that despite the loss of his hand and losing the title Maktig because of it, Thorn was still the greatest warrior of all. It hit him under the arm and he died soon after. With his dying breath, Mikkell made Thorn promise to look after his wife and child. Mikkell was a very skilled swordsmen and was faster than the average Skandian. It is revealed in the second book that he and Thorn had fought over Karina before, though Karina ultimately chose Mikkell over Thorn, and conceived a child which they named Hal. Karina Mikkelswife – Karina is an Araluen slave who was freed by Mikkell, and later married him.. She is very beautiful and is sought out by many Skandian men. She brought Thorn out of his drinking habits and set his life back on track and also gave him a job. Karina runs an eating house in Hallasholm. It was implied in the third book that Karina had struggled over whom to pick and had spent a long time over it, though she picked Mikkell in the end and bore his child named Hal. Stig, unable to swim, was saved when Hal jumped in and pulled him out of the water, thus starting their strong bond and friendship. His mother works as a washerwoman, which he is embarrassed about. Stig has a habit of losing his temper but learns to control it through time. Stig tends to be awkward around girls his age, in which he either speaks too little or much. It is hinted and shown that he has feelings for Lydia just like Hal, though he refuses to let it come between him and Hal. Tursgurd – Tursgurd is the antagonist in the first book. He is the leader of the Shark Brotherband. Notorious for his arrogance and cruelty, he is disliked by the members of the Heron and Wolf Brotherbands, as well as most of the Sharks. His father is the current Maktig which gives him even more to boast about. In the third book, he openly insults the Heron Brotherband again out of jealousy and went as far as to call Lydia a "scullery maid", prompting Ingvar to knock him out in a single blow. He becomes a pirate and slave trader in the latter part of the series. For this, he is popular and is liked by many people. He is the leader of the Wolf Brotherband and dislikes Tursgud. He helped the Herons on numerous occasions, but his team was disqualified from Brotherband training because their ship was ruined in a navigation test during an unsuccessful tacking maneuver. He is now the most powerful person in Skandia, the Oberjarl. Erak has a comical bond with Thorn; while the two insult and tease each other, they clearly still hold a close friendship and care about each other. He is a respected warrior and is inseparable from his ship, The Wolfwind. He claims to be a patron of the arts but in truth is a collector of anything. He is very attached to his axe and possessions. Ingvar – Ingvar is an extremely strong and solidly built sixteen-year-old boy who is good at fighting but has problems with eyesight meaning he would do more harm than good in battle. Despite his poor eyesight, he is able to differentiate between the Heron crew members and enemies by the watch hats Edvin knitted, and has also learnt to see without the need of using his eyes taught by Thorn, simply by closing his eyes and envisioning the scene clearly as it is. After he becomes disheartened about his eyesight, Hal makes him a sort of early pair of spectacles out of tortoiseshell making him a formidable warrior. He does however always return them, just because he likes the joy of it. He also is very good at picking locks and stealth. Despite leaving those days behind him, he still keeps his lock picking tools, which he uses to break them out of jail in the third book.

Edvin – Edvin is a member of the Heron Brotherband. When he disagrees with people he makes it quite clear. Despite his small build, he is quite resourceful and skilled at cooking. The caps later gain a new Heron patch on them.

Stefan – Stefan is the wise-guy and mimic of the Herons. He is a sail handler and rower on the Heron. He likes and admires Hal for his leadership skills and qualities. His sharp wit is only aimed at those who have large egos or boastful without being able to back it up, like Tursgud. Like most twins, there is a special bond between them. However, when sail handling, they work like well oiled clockwork, a fact that surprises Hal. Despite their antagonising, Ulf and Wulf do hold a special bond, and it is hinted that they some times argue on purpose simply to amuse the Heron Brotherband and lift their spirits when a difficult task lay ahead. They show their hidden affection after Ulf gets injured at Tabork.

Sigurd – Sigurd is the organizer of brotherband training. He along with three others one for each brotherband run the show. He has been known to encourage a little bit of cheating.

Zavac – Zavac is a captain of the Magyar pirate ship, the Raven. He also raided the town Limmat to steal the secret emerald deposit that is hidden there. He is brutal and merciless, with no qualms about betraying his fellow pirates. During the invasion of Limmat, he abandons his fellow pirates to save his own life and keeps all of the treasure. He is eventually hunted down and killed by the Herons when they reclaim the Andomal, Thorn made sure he went down with his ship by trapping him in his sleeping cabin, the Raven, when he was about to kill Hal during the ship duel. In the battle led by Zavac, her grandfather was killed while trying to defend the city. She leaves her home and helps the Herons in the battle against Zavac and goes hunting for Zavac after deciding to leave Limmat after the battle with the Heron Brotherband. She is extremely accurate with an atlatl and an expert tracker due to her hunting background. Thorn admires the younger girl greatly and to tease her as a sign of affection and respect. She seems to also like and admire Ingvar, and the two quickly form a one-of-a kind bond. It is hinted she does have an interest in them as more than friends when she shows slight jealousy upon seeing Hal and Stig receiving much attention from other girls. Lydia is typically tough and tomboyish, though she later displays a more girlish side of herself when she despairs over what to wear to the party of Hallasholm with Karina coming to her aid.

Barat – Barat is the commander of the town guard in Limmat. He is extremely pig-headed, arrogant and has no faith in Hal or his crew.

Rikard – Rikard was the first mate to Captain Nagy, a magyar captain. He reveals the location of Zavac and attempts to escape but is caught. At Krall he is killed by Vargas for betraying Zavac.

Vargas – Vargas is the loyal third mate to Zavac. Then in Raguza, he leads the ambush on four of the Herons and is killed.

Andras – Andras is the second mate of the Raven. He thinks that Zavac is not in tune with his ship and is not a good helmsman and that only speed had saved them from the Heron but if they versed a ship with similar speed, they would lose which he ends up being correct. He is killed in the battle against the Heron.

Mihaly – Mihaly is a pirate and now Korpajlo of Raguza. He is a deadly opponent with great skill in swordsmanship, and using his daggers as well as fast and agile.

Mannaoc – Mannaoc is the captain of the Seahawk. He is a part of a ship escort service which protects traders for a fee from pirates and outlaws. He also knows a lot about Raguza and tells Hal what the rules in are in Raguza and how to gain entry. He is infamous in Raguza for destroying many ships and he is a deadly enemy.

Kloof – Kloof is a huge mountain dog that Hal ran into in the fourth book. She is very fond of Hal. Kloof also takes part in battles and is very vicious towards anyone who intends to harm her master.

Important items[edit] The Andomal – This is a huge amber sphere about 25 centimeters in diameter with a reptilian claw in the middle believed to come from a dragon. This artifact has been treasured by Skandians for centuries and is kept in a shrine the Tabernacle on a hill close to Hallasholm.
