

Chapter 1 : ClassDojo Big Ideas

It was just another day until Ms. Jill and Ms. Katie decided to do something crazy. They keep a sense of humor through the ordeal-because laughter is the b.

Kids can get an edge on the work world by starting early and in doing so they will gain valuable experience working with different people, learning about managing money, have some money to spend once they get older, or save for college. A lemonade stand, mowing lawns, baby sitting, and doing odd jobs are popular ways that kids can earn money while learning some important life skills. But first ask yourself, is your child ready to work? If they are ready, then here are some ideas for kids to make money. Also, to help encourage saving, see our budgeting section for some helpful lessons. Parents often need a good and reliable baby sitter to watch their kids. This position can be even expanded into a baby sitting service, by joining together a group of people who can offer baby sitting services to all the parents in the neighborhood. Parents Helper A parents helper is similar to a baby sitter. However, if your child is too young to baby sit on their own, then a job helping parents is a good opportunity. Later, once your child is older, they would likely have gained some references for regular baby sitting work. House Cleaning Instead of a parents helper, your child could simply do house cleaning. There are many chores that would be suitable such as vacuuming, dusting, etc. Lemonade Stand Everyone is familiar with the old fashioned lemonade stand. Of course, this is a seasonal business, depending on your location. During other times of the year, it could be a warm apple cider business but be careful if your child needs to handle hot items. Also try selling coffee, donuts, snack bags, or other food items. If possible, set up a booth at a local community fair, or sale if allowed. In addition to food, there is the possibility of selling other types of items. Is your child good at crafts? Then have them make their own artwork to sell. Sometimes, a combination of food and items makes a good business. Car Washing Car washing is a needed service in many communities. Have your child get together with a few friends to offer to wash local cars. As an addition to this business, they can sell items mentioned in the lemonade stand section above while people wait for their car to be washed. See what other professional car washes charge in your area, and price the services competitively. Animal Caretaker If you child enjoys animals, then try an animal caretaker business. This might involve walking dogs, dog washing, or general grooming. This may include watering plants, and any other chores they may need. Landscaping Cutting grass, weeding, trimming, planting flowers, and other landscaping jobs are abundant. Scan the neighborhood for homes that need landscaping services. In the spring, offer to plant flowers, or do winter clean-up. Snow Removal In the winter time, many people need to have their driveways or sidewalks shoveled. This job works best when a group of kids can work together shoveling several houses. Create a business, and make arrangements to shovel peoples houses before the snow storm. Additional Ideas Ask what kids can do in their own home, such as writing little stories that they can sell to their family and friends. Kids can create their own jewelry to sell, or decorate interesting rocks. Tips for Running the Business For many of these jobs, have your child print and hand out flyers to be distributed in the neighborhood. As the business grows, references or work previously done could be quoted. Giving out free samples is always a good way to attract business. For services, offer coupons for new potential customers. Safety and Other Points Most important for any of these jobs, is making sure your child is safe, so make sure they are old enough to follow important safety guidelines including: Make sure you always know where they are. Avoid going door to door by themselves. Recommend that they do jobs that they like to do. Be sure they are mentally prepared and committed to do the work they need to do and promise to do. If there is a cost in setting up the business, make sure they have enough money and know where the money is going to come from. All these jobs should not interfere with normal school work or completing homework for school. Help them set fair prices for the work they are doing. Tell them to come to you for advice if they need it. Member Tips Here are some more tips and ideas sent in from our members and readers of this site: I think its better to either baby-sit or car washing or paper rounds and also you can help in some shops. Ways to make money mow lawn, lemonade stand, sell cards, cars wash, garage sale, dog sitting, cat sitting, basically pet sitting, baby sitting, and rake lawns. Asking to take your dog for a walk or clean the dishes. When your working at a lemonade stand, always be polite. Give people their change, say thank you. Kids can make cookies, cakes, brownies, etc. For example fixing broken bikes. Hey your kids could earn money by walking dogs or how about helping out with the community as they pay good money for little kids to get involved but parents have to sign permission. Kids could do face painting at a town fair or in their neighborhood. Also, they could sell their own artwork. Window washer, car washer, lemonade salesman. A child can maybe help the elderly unpack or unload a car full of things such as groceries or bags of clothes etc. When a child starts their own business it takes them to a level of learning. Sometimes a parent should not help their child with their business so that the child can learn by themselves. Give them a few pointers but do not do the work for them.

Do you have any good ideas for the exercise/sports Summer Reading theme. I have a 2 & 3 class and a 4 & 5 class. Katie your ideas have helped me so much! I have.

We all fall into one from time to time. This time of year can be tough for a lot of people” the holidays are over, work starts to get busy and spring is still months away. I mean, I have no excuse! I live in New York City. How could I ever feel uninspired or demotivated? Sometimes reconnecting with a past coworker or long lost friend can be the motivation you need to get out of a slump. I can speak from experience that adding different energy into the mix can spark a creative idea or even open up a new opportunity. Immersing yourself in a creative space can spark so many ideas. Look up free concerts or dance performances in your community. Switch up your workout routine. Adding weekly jogs into my fitness regimen was such a game changer. You could just try a different cycling instructor or go to a new studio for a yoga class. Even making time to watch a workout on YouTube at home could be just what you need to feel motivated! Try cooking or baking a new recipe. Not only will your belly most likely be satisfied, but getting in the kitchen is a great way to pull yourself away from technology. Is your closet exploding? Do you constantly find yourself looking for misplaced belongings at home? Are your desk drawers at work a bottomless pit? Consider taking the time to just overhaul whatever that sloppy area is and see how much your mood improves. Teach yourself something new. I mean, this could be literally anything. Photoshop I watch YouTube tutorials all the time! A career skill to add to your resume. How to mix up a few fancy cocktails at home. I just pulled these off the top of my head! Go on a pinning spree. Social media can be stressful, but Pinterest remains one of my digital happy places. Browsing home decor ideas or collecting inspiring quotes always lifts my spirits and put me in a positive mood. These are just a few ideas! Get outdoors and find a local spot to hike or go kayaking. Go on a daytime double date and road trip to a local farm or orchard for a picnic. Do a random act of kindness.
