

Chapter 1 : The Angling Bookstore - Fishing & Outdoor Knots

The Knots Pocket Guide shows in simple step-by-step graphics how to tie seven common fisherman's knots that will prepare even a beginner to rig up for fishing.

Another end loop can be tied quickly and easily using the Blood Bight Knot. Double the line back to make a loop of the size desired. Bring the end of the loop twice over the doubled part. Now pass the end of the loop through the first loop formed in the doubled part. Draw the knot up into shape, keeping pressure on both lines. The Blood Bight Knot is often used for attaching a dropper when fishing deep water with several hooks. Some anglers attached the hook directly to the end of the loop, which should be at least one-foot from the end of the line. However, this is not a productive practice, when the fish are apprehensive. Dropper Loop Another method of forming a loop, or loops, in the line above the sinker is to use a Dropper Loop, which that stands out at a right angle to the line. Form a loop in the line. Take hold of one side of the loop, and make 6 or more turns around the line itself. This is the tricky part - keep open the point where the turns, or twists, are being made. Take hold of the other side of the loop, and pull it through the centre opening. Hold this loop between the teeth. Pull gently on both ends of the line, making the turns gather and pack down on either side of the loop. Draw up the knot by pulling the lines as tightly as possible. The turns will make the loop stand at right angles to the line. Tucked Sheet Bend Usually employed by the fly fisherman, the Tucked Sheet Bend is commonly used for joining the backing line to the tapered line. It is not an especially compact knot, but has a very strong attachment, which cannot be said for the more aesthetically pleasing Perfection Loop. Make a Blood Bight see above at the end of the backing line. Take the end of the tapered line. Pass it through the Blood Bight and make a simple Sheet Bend. Now pass the end of the tapered line back through the closed loop of the Sheet Bend. Hold both ends of the tapered line to tighten and draw into shape. Float Stop The float fishermen who use a running float for casting use the Float stop to prevent the float from running up the line. This knot will move readily over the rod guides, but grip a monofilament nylon so tightly that it will not slide over the line. It should be made with about 6 inches of nylon, usually the same diameter as the line itself. Take 2 turns 3 if necessary around the main line at the chosen point. Tighten into shape bringing the coils close together. Turtle Knot The Turtle Knot is very simple to tie but is very weak. It should not be used for light lines, and there are better knots for use with heavy ones. At least consider using the double turtle trick listed below to enhance it, if you choose this simple knot. Pass the line through the eye of the hook. Make a simple loop. Carry the end of the line on to make a Simple Overhand Knot upon the loop. Pass the loop over the hook. Draw up into shape.
