They also face a greater risk of harassment and violence. As a result of these and other stressors, sexual minorities are at increased risk for various behavioral health issues. A survey conducted by the U. Census Bureau found that a higher percentage of LGBT adults between 18 and 64 reported past-year binge drinking five or more drinks on a single occasion than heterosexual adults. In one meta-analysis, LGB adolescents were 90 percent more likely to use substances than heterosexual adolescents, and the difference was particularly pronounced in some subpopulations; bisexual adolescents used substances at 3. For example, gay and bisexual men and lesbian and bisexual women report greater odds of frequent mental distress and depression than their heterosexual counterparts. LGBT people are also at increased risks for human immunodeficiency virus HIV due to both intravenous drug use and risky sexual behaviors. HIV infection is particularly prevalent among gay and bisexual men men who have sex with men, or MSM and transgender women who have sex with men. For example, addiction treatment is associated not only with reduced drug use but also with less risky sexual behavior among MSM, and those with HIV report improvements in viral load. Many other worthy groups are listedâ€ Jeff Light Hepatitis A outbreaks underway among gay men in many different cities show that it is not just homeless people and drug users who face significant risk from the disease, the physician said. Preventive efforts should not skate just to where the problem is at the moment but should also try to anticipate where the outbreak is headed. Given that recent epidemiological evidence shows that gay men are at a higher risk of hepatitis A infection than the general population, it would not be an unreasonable approach to double down on education and vaccination efforts in this demographic group, Schooley said. The idea was already on the mind of Dr. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention issued a brief on an outbreak among gay men in New York that has now reached 51 patients. Fifteen of the 32 men who were infected had sex with other men. So far, he said, out of the cases confirmed so far, only eight gay men have had outbreak-linked hepatitis A infections. Two were illicit drug users, three were both drug users and homeless and three were part of neither group. Lesbian couples are considered less at risk than men due to fundamental differences in the nature of sexual contact. Collaboration is also underway, he added, with programs that regularly provide health care to gay men. The director said there is no current data available on exactly what proportion of gay men living in San Diego County have had a hepatitis A vaccination, though the fact that outbreaks have occurred in other places for many years now means that this group is generally better vaccinated than the general population. Though the teams work in largely the same way they always have, approaching small groups of people in bars, clubs and city sidewalks, a hepatitis A flier was added early this summer as the outbreak grew. Family Health Centers was already offering hepatitis A vaccinations to any gay man who arrived in any of its medical offices, and that has been the case for many years, he said. He speculated that maybe the reason the outbreak has not yet appeared to any large degree among gay men is because vaccination efforts have been underway for many years. Family Health, which offers a range of services to nearly , uninsured, low income and underserved patients each year, operates 21 clinics throughout San Diego and has screened 12, patients for hepatitis A since Aug. Nearly 9., she said, have received at least one shot and the interest in vaccination has picked up recently. Low-income, disabled seniors at Praxis community in Deerfield Beach are struggling without power and medication after Hurricane Irma swept through South Florida.

Chapter 3 : Health | Gay News - Part 13

Internalized homophobia, alienation, poor support structures, and high levels of depression all contribute to substance abuse among lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender individuals, with social activity at bars and clubs reinforcing addictive behavior.

His father, the Oscar-winning director of "Reds," was a longtime Hollywood lothario before setting down and marrying Bening. Stephen Ira Beatty slams Bono for saying that transgenderism is "a birth defect, like a cleft palate," and that "being male and having breasts is about the worst thing I could imagine. There is something in testosterone that makes talking and gossiping really grating. Beatty did not respond to an email. Bono, 42, underwent gender reassignment from to , legally changing his name from Chastity to Chaz on May 7. In a second post after the initial one got press attention, Beatty says that he holds no "ill will" against Bono, admitting he was once guilty of making insensitive comments. Beatty also complains in his blog that Sarah Lawrence College, where he is a sophomore, has refused to accept his chosen name. He said he "refuses to be treated as a logistical problem. There, in the "About" section, he says he is an activist and writer -- "a white anti-racist, a feminist, and a poet. The impacts of public and private funding of lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender (LGBT) health research, the state of integration of LGBT health issues into the academic and professional.

Furthermore, transgender individuals and people of color are disproportionately represented as victims of homicide National Coalition of Anti-Violence Programs, , thereby denoting the importance of intersectional and marginalized identities e. Whereas overt discrimination consists of verbal abuse and physical violence Bhui et al. Past research, however, has yet to differentiate the effects of LGBT oppression as a function of its overt and covert forms. In order to better equip practitioners in tailoring treatments or interventions that mitigate the negative effects of discrimination, this paper explores how overt and covert discrimination psychologically impacts LGBT-identifying individuals. For instance, certain forms of physical violence against LGBT individuals e. As such, it is clear that overt forms of discrimination extend across various environments and pose significant implications for LGBT individuals. Stress stemming from microaggressions toward LGBT people, in turn, is associated with mental health concerns such as depressive symptoms Swann et al. For example, a transgender lesbian black woman will likely face a more severe set of microaggressions than a cisgender gay white man will. Furthermore, research demonstrates that there is a dearth of positive images of queer people of color in particular Lopez, ; thus, for this group within the LGBT community, the negative effects of racism compound onto the heterosexism experienced more broadly among the LGBT community. Nevertheless, while the lack of media representation for the community is damaging, it is promising that there have been an increasing number of, and diversity in, LGBT characters in recent years Kelso, While overt and covert forms of discrimination manifest differently, the detrimental effects they produce share several similarities e. Understanding that these outcomes are common across overt and covert discrimination can inform the development of comprehensive interventions. Future research should also identify protective factors for LGBT individuals who have experienced discrimination. For instance, interpersonal support might mitigate the problematic effects of heterosexism and discrimination Hong et al. However, intervention and treatment for LGBT individuals must be supported by additional research on the the combined effects of heterosexism and racism, ableism, classism, and other forms of discrimination that affect LGBT individuals who are also part of other minority groups Huang et al. In addition to tailoring support to the experiences of discrimination among LGBT individuals, research must also identify means of decreasing heterosexism among society-at-large. School-based interventions represent one key means of reducing discrimination, by promoting LGBT tolerance among future generations while their attitudes towards the LGBT community are still developing. Interventions aimed at shifting beliefs about LGBT individuals are the most effective means of supporting the LGBT community, as they would prevent discrimination before it occurs rather than simply managing its negative effects.
