I am like an owl of the desert. I seek a pure heart, and there is the place of My rest. Prepare for Me the larger upper room furnished, and I will keep the Passover at thy house with my disciples. Shut out the whole world, and all the throng of sins; sit as a sparrow alone upon the house-top, 3 and think upon thy transgressions & Thomas A Kempis's "Imitation of Christ The Never Changing One. Blessed truth and precious assurance for us poor, weak creatures, yea, among all His creatures the most changing; He changeth not. They shall all perish, but Thou shalt endure: I am Jehovah, I change not. God is unchangeable in his nature. Unchangeable in his nature. There is no eclipse of his brightness. No period put to his being. His essence shines with a fixed lustre. With whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning. Thou art the same. All created things are full of vicissitudes. In the preceding pages we have shown that the translation, "in Our image," actually means, "after Our image. We now proceed to show how it should be translated, and give our reason for it. We begin with citing some passages from the Old Testament in which occurs the preposition "B" which, in Gen. Yea, all of you gird yourselves with humility, to serve one another: Such was the triumphant exultation of the Old Testament Church! By faith, which is the substance of things hoped for, they considered the gracious declarations & John Newton's "Messiah Vol. The fact of Covenanting, under the Old Testament dispensations, being approved of God, gives a proof that it was proper then, which is accompanied by the voice of prophecy, affording evidence that even in periods then future it should no less be proper. The argument for the service that is afforded by prophecy is peculiar, and, though corresponding with evidence from other sources, is independent. Because that God willed to make known truth through his servants the prophets, we should receive it & John Cunningham's "The Ordinance of Covenanting Letter xvi to Rainald, Abbot of Foigny To Rainald, Abbot of Foigny Bernard declares to him how little he loves praise; that the yoke of Christ is light; that he declines the name of father, and is content with that of brother. In the first place, do not wonder if titles of honour affright me, when I feel myself so unworthy of the honours themselves; and if it is fitting that you should give them to me, it is not expedient for me to accept them. This History, as to its essential features, might, a priori, be sketched with tolerable certainty. From the nature of the case, we could scarcely expect that the Jews should have adopted views altogether erroneous as to the subject of the prophecy in question; for the Messiah appears in it, not in His humiliation, but in His glory--rich in gifts and blessings, and Pelagian self-delusion will, a priori, return an affirmative answer to the question as to whether one is & Ernst Wilhelm Hengstenberg's "Christology of the Old Testament Testimonies. In order to prevent the possibility of being led into paths of error, faith is directed, not to a Christ of the imagination, but to "the Christ in the garments of the Sacred Scripture," as Calvin expresses it. And therefore we must discriminate between 1 faith as a faculty implanted in the soul without our knowledge; 2 faith as a power whereby this implanted faculty begins to act; and 3 faith as a result,--since with this faith 1 & Abraham Kuyper's "The Work of the Holy Spirit Cross References.
