When it comes to typical Easter celebrations, the day is filled with church services, Easter egg hunts, and Easter dinner. However, for those who have been chosen to host Easter dinner, the days leading up to Easter can be quite stressful. There is the challenge of figuring out a menu, preparing the food, and serving Easter dinner on time. While a ham is the most typical route to take for Easter dinner, consider going in a different direction this year with crab cakes. Crab cakes from Box Hill are the perfect solution to your Easter dinner woes. Instead of spending the entire day preparing your Easter dinner, take the time to relax and enjoy the holiday with family and friends. Crab cakes from Box Hill can be ordered online to be shipped directly to your door. Once they have arrived, simply refrigerate until Easter. The only preparations needed now are your sides and beverages. Box Hill crab cakes are already seasoned and molded to perfection, so preparations for your entree have already been completed. Pair your Easter dinner crab cakes with more traditional Easter sides to blend both aspects of the dinner. Your sides could include roasted potatoes, potato salad, steamed green beans, or even deviled eggs. Keep your beverages light to help balance the tastes of your sides and crab cakes to create the perfect Easter dinner for your family. Not sure how to cook your crab cakes? Here are your steps! For minutes, preheat your oven at a temperature of degrees. Use a pan without grease, using only a small amount of butter or water to cook your crab cakes on. Cook crab cakes for about 20 minutes, depending on your oven. Crab cakes should be firm and have a golden brown top with an internal temperature of degrees. Located in Abingdon, Maryland, our crab cakes are available year round and can be ordered online to be shipped straight to your front door. If you ever have any questions or comments about Box Hill or our Maryland crab cakes, use our contact form here.

Reginae Group The Easter cactus was at one time placed in Schlumbergera, but has flowers which are different in structure. Distribution, habitat and ecology[ edit ] The distribution of Schlumbergera species is discontinuous within the red area. Schlumbergera species grow in habitats which are generally relatively cool, shaded and of high humidity. Most species require cross-pollination to set seed. The exceptions are S. Birds have been observed removing seeds which had stuck to their beaks by rubbing them on tree branches, where the seeds might be able to germinate. Segments may also break off from the stems and take root, thus enabling plants to propagate vegetatively. Schlumbergera truncata was in cultivation in Europe by , and S. The two species were deliberately crossed in England by W. Buckley resulting in the hybrid now called S. By the s, a substantial number of cultivars cultivated varieties were available in a range of colours and habits, and were used as ornamental plants in "stoves" heated greenhouses and in houses, where they were popular for their autumn and winter flowering. Many cultivars were selected seedlings of S. By the early part of the 20th century, the genus had become less popular, and many of the early cultivars were lost. New plants were produced by crossing among the species and existing cultivars of S. Treatments which induced mutations were also used. The result was a wide range of flower colours which had not been available before, including the first true yellow to be sold commercially, S. Breeders aimed for plants which grew strongly, were upright at the point of sale rather than pendulous, had many flowers or buds, and were adapted to living as house plants. The hybrid of S. Reginae Group; one of the first cultivars was S. Buckleyi Group, viewed from below; rounded rather than pointed edges of the segments, pendant more or less regular flowers and pink pollen. McMillan and Horobin have listed hundreds of modern European, North American and Australian cultivars, which they put into a number of cultivar groups: The Buckleyi Group contains all cultivars with at least some features clearly showing inheritance from S. There is considerable variation within this Group; McMillan and Horobin introduced subcategories: The Reginae Group contains cultivars known to be derived from hybrids with S. The Exotica Group is used for the small number of hybrids involving S. Attempts have also been made to classify cultivars by colour. A difficulty is that the flowers of many cultivars exhibit different colours depending on the temperature during bud formation and growth. The availability of iron to the plant has also been suggested to affect flower colour. In Europe, plants are mainly sold later in the year, in the period before Christmas. A single Dutch grower de Vries of Aalsmeer , the Netherlands was reported in as producing 2,, plants per year. The earliest English common name was "Christmas cactus". In Europe, where plants are largely produced for sale in the period before Christmas, this remains the most widely used common name in many languages for cultivars of all groups e. This is also the name used in Canada. The name "holiday cactus" has been used to include both Schlumbergera and Hatiora cultivars. Truncata Group; still upright and therefore more convenient for selling When grown as house plants, Schlumbergera cultivars are said to be relatively easy to care for. McMillan and Horobin describe in detail their cultivation in both commercial and domestic conditions. Their specific recommendations include: It is recommended that plants should be grown in relatively small pots; half-height pots are suitable. Watering - They are more tolerant of drought than many house plants, but can be damaged by both under- and over-watering. Keeping the growing medium just moist throughout the year avoids either extreme. Light - They can be damaged by exposure to more than small amounts of sunlight. Members of the Buckleyi Group, such as the old-fashioned Christmas cactus with pendant flowers, are more tolerant of high light levels than members of the Truncata Group, such as most of the modern cultivars. Too much light causes stems to take on a reddish colouration; however, very low light levels will prevent flowering. Day length is important in controlling flowering; continuous darkness for at least 12 hours is necessary to induce bud formation. Lower temperatures slow this process. The advice sometimes given to withhold water to produce flower buds has been shown to be incorrect. Propagation - Both commercially and in the home, propagation can be achieved by using short pieces of stem, one to three segments long, twisted off rather than cut. Cuttings are allowed to dry for 1â€”7 days, forming a callus at the broken end, and then rooted in an open growing medium. The upper view shows bright red new cladodes forming, the centre shows maturing growth, the lower view shows two aerial roots extending down

Pests and diseases[ edit ] In cultivation, these plants have been described as "remarkably free from pests and diseases". Two significant insect pests are aphids on young shoots, buds and flowers, and root mealybugs which attack below soil level. Stems and roots can be rotted by diseases caused by fungi and similar organisms; these include infections by species of Fusarium a fungus , and Phytophthora and Pythium both water moulds. Approved chemical treatments can be used in the case of insect attack or these diseases. Symptoms vary with the species, but a loss of vigour is usual. Cactus virus X has been isolated from S. There is no treatment for virus diseases; it is recommended that infected plants be destroyed.

Although it nearly never starts until tomorrow. So Max decided to make his own Easter Parade. Ruby and Max are going on an Egg Hunt. But Max keeps hiding them over and over. Ruby and Louise are doing the hippity hop dance while Max and Roger are playing football. After the interruptions, they finally remembered their steps. Ruby is making a bird bath for the birds but Max wants bath toys in it. But Ruby never wants him to because they scare them away. Super Max saves the World: After the interruptions, Max had finally saved the world. Ruby and Max decided to deliver the fliers to the Bunny Scouts. Max always think the toy planes can help deliver cupcakes to their best friends. Getting Crabby at the beach: Ruby was collecting some seashells but never noticed that Max has a mischevious crab he found at the bottom of the sand and is finally dug to a tidal pool. Baby Huffington always loves loud toys instead of quiet toys. After they missed the fireworks, the fireflies pretended to be one. Ruby and Louise are having a fashion show while Max decided to be a pirate. Grandma thinks having Max wearing a pirate suit is OK and puts the parrot on his shoulder. Ruby is practicing on the piano for her talent show. Until now they decided to make a song of those animals. Ruby and Louise are going on a safari while Max kept playing with toys that distracted them. Later, they find a hummingbird on the bush and took a picture of it. Ruby and Louise are making special ingredients such as Avocado scrub, Orange Coconut splash, Strawberry Manicure and Banana Peach Conditioner while Max decides to play in the mud, but was forced to be a customer of the shop. Ruby and Louise are creating a home for a chameleon but Max takes away the rock, twigs and leaves, making the chameleon change color everywhere he goes until he got back in its case. Ruby and her friends throw a party for Ruby to celebrate her 7th birthday. Max wants to eat the cake, but they have to play party games first. After the games, Max finally got a chance to eat the cake. Ruby and Louise are making a present until Max got covered in wrapping paper making him the perfect gift.
