

Chapter 1 : MOAA - President's Club

How to Address a Retired Member of the National Guard? I am reading your book, and you cover the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marines, and Coast Guard. I have a question on the proper addressing of a Retired National Guard Command Sergeant Major.

The earliest classes carried the designation "Express" followed by the sequential class number. Later classes were simply designated by the fiscal year followed by the sequence number of the class within that year. These photographs cover the approximate period of to The names of A-1 pilots appear on this page. There are men pictured. Class photographs appear for of the classes listed. These five missing photos remain unaccounted for. Since the photos are the principle source for the names of people in each class, the names are also unknown for the classes with missing photos. To view the class photograph, click the class designator. Photos will open in a separate browser window. This should allow you to position the class picture above the other browser window which can allow you to see both the picture and the names of class members in the underlying window. If the class designator is NOT underlined, it means that the class photo is missing. Do you have a copy you would be willing to share? When I received the photos, I saw that the names were handwritten on the back of the photo and were listed in order of military rank which is most certainly not the same order as the people in the picture. If you can provide IDs on any of the individuals shown, please email me with the info. The names on the back of the photos and were difficult to read and some were written in pencil. Please help me correct the errors on this page where incorrect spellings occur. Names that have been properly identified are in blue type. If a name appears in black type, that means that a positive ID has not been made. Most classes have the members at least partly identified. If an identification is not known, "unknown" appears and at the bottom of that frame, the names from the back of the photo appear. It is from these names that the identification will most likely come. If there are errors with these listings, please notify SpadGuy immediately. To view pictures, click on the class designation. Once you have viewed the image, close the window and view another picture. If you have one of the missing photos, please consider sharing it for use on this page. There are instances where there are more names listed than the number of people who appear in the photograph. The person may have simply missed the photo session, or he may have been killed during training. A list of Hurlburt A-1 training fatalities appears on the Hurlburt Memorial page. There are two cases where there are more guys in the photo that are on the class list, and Some permanent party instructors are in some photos. Please help identify these individuals also. Names which appear in the second column are those of the person s who provided the identification. In some cases, I could read the name tags from the original photos. In this case, you will see my initials, Bh. Persons who are deceased from other than combat action either have the date of their death or simply the word "deceased" following their names. If you are aware of someone on this listing who has died, we would like to list the date of his passing. Please email me with the information.

Chapter 3 : United States Quartermaster Corps reports

Maj Gen John W. Maluda (USAF, Ret.) Director, Telos Corporation. Security Solutions keynote speaker in , General Maluda returns to the Security Solutions stage as Master of Ceremonies.

Military career[edit] John Walter Ripley was born on June 29, in Keystone, West Virginia and his family lived there until he was five years old. They then moved to Portsmouth, Ohio , where they remained for some years before finally settling in Radford, Virginia. John Ripley enlisted into the Marine Corps in at 17 years of age. A year later, he was appointed to the U. Naval Academy by the Secretary of the Navy. He graduated in with a Bachelor of Science degree in Electrical Engineering , and received his commission as a Second Lieutenant. In May , Ripley was transferred to 2nd Force Reconnaissance Company , and after training, he deployed to Vietnam with his platoon. In addition to numerous decorations for extensive combat experience at the rifle company and battalion levels, Ripley was awarded the Navy Cross for extraordinary heroism in destroying the Dong Ha bridge during the April North Vietnamese Easter Offensive also known as the Nguyen Hue Offensive. That action is memorialized at the Naval Academy with a large diorama titled "Ripley at the Bridge. His action, conducted under enemy fire while going back and forth for materials, definitively thwarted an onslaught by 20, enemy troops and dozens of tanks and was the subject of a book, The Bridge at Dong Ha, by Colonel John Grider Miller. He attributes his success to the help of God and his mother. When his energy was about to give out he began a rhythmic chant, "Jesus, Mary, Get me there". His body taxed to its extreme limits, his action is considered one of the greatest examples of concentration under fire in the annals of U. He earned the "Quad Body" distinction for making it through four of the toughest military training programs in the world: He was the first Marine officer to be inducted in the U. Army Ranger Hall of Fame. Ripley retired from the Marine Corps in after 35 years of active duty service. He received more than five awards for his acts of bravery in Vietnam. In June Col. Ripley testified against women in the military before a presidential commission [2]. He based his arguments on a defense of "femininity, motherhood, and what we have come to appreciate in Western culture as the graceful conduct of women. As a result of combat action, Colonel Ripley contracted a disease that in the summer of required a liver transplant. Nearing death, with little time left and already having received Last Rites twice, a replacement liver was located. The Commandant of the Marine Corps , who called Col. Ripley a living symbol of pride, sent a section of CHs helicopters from the Marine One presidential squadron to Philadelphia to retrieve the liver. After further coordination with the Washington D. Police to obtain a landing zone in the city, the liver was delivered in time for a successful transplant. In , he also became the very first Marine officer to receive the "Distinguished Graduate Award", the highest and most prestigious award given by the United States Naval Academy. It had been originally intended to be in honor of him, but he died a couple weeks before the ceremony took place. Ripley died suddenly on October 28, at his home in Annapolis, Maryland of undetermined causes at age 69 and was buried at the United States Naval Academy graveyard. He was survived by his son, Stephen, by his wife of 44 years, the former Moline Blaylock; a sister, Susan Goodykoontz who died in ; two other sons, Thomas and John; a daughter, Mary Ripley; nine grandchildren; and one great grandchild.
