Background[edit] Japanese invasion and fortification[edit] On 10 December , three days after the attack on Pearl Harbor , Japanese troops plus laborers of the Gilberts Invasion Special Landing Force had arrived off Makin Atoll and occupied it without resistance. Lying east of the Marshall islands , Makin was intended as an excellent seaplane base, to protect the eastern flank of the Japanese perimeter from an Allied attack by extending Japanese air patrols closer to islands held by the Allies: The end of the Aleutian Islands Campaign and progress in the Solomon Islands , combined with increasing supplies of men and materials, gave the United States Navy the resources to make an invasion of the central Pacific in late Admiral Chester Nimitz had argued for this invasion earlier in , but the resources were not available to carry it out at the same time as Operation Cartwheel , the envelopment of Rabaul in the Bismarck Islands. The plan was to approach the Japanese home islands by " island hopping ": The Gilbert Islands were the first step in this chain. Marine raid on Makin[edit] Main article: The Japanese garrison only posted 83 to men under the command of a warrant officer. The Raiders killed at least 83 Japanese soldiers, annihilating the garrison, and destroyed installations for the loss of 21 killed mostly by air attack and 9 captured. The Japanese moved their prisoners to Kwajalein Atoll , where they were later beheaded. One objective of the raid was to confuse the Japanese about U. Makin was garrisoned with a single company of the 5th Special Base Force " men on August , and work on both the seaplane base and coastal defenses of the atoll was resumed in earnest. Its defenses were also completed, although they were not as extensive as on Tarawa Atoll "the main Japanese Navy air base in the Gilberts. The Chitose and rd Air Corps were detached and deployed here. While the Japanese were building up their defenses in the Gilberts, American forces were making plans to retake the islands. Initially both Nimitz and Admiral Ernest J. King , the Chief of Naval Operations, wanted to attack right into the heart of the Japanese outer defense perimeter, but any plan for assaulting the Marshalls directly from Pearl Harbor would have required more troops and transports than the Pacific Fleet had at the time. Considering these drawbacks and the limited combat experience of the U. With those advantages in mind, on 20 July the joint Chiefs of Staff decided to capture the Tarawa and Abemama atolls in the Gilberts, plus nearby Nauru Island. The operation was codenamed " Operation Galvanic. Smith , a veteran of World War I , who had assumed command in November He was one of the most highly respected officers in the U. Army of the time. In April , the 27th Infantry Division had begun preparing for amphibious operations. Unlike the other objectives, Nauru was an actual island, much larger in size and more heavily garrisoned. The 27th Infantry Division staff learned the change of target on 28 September, scrapped the original Nauru plan, and began planning to capture Makin. The garrisons at Tarawa and Makin were left to their fate. Turner left Pearl Harbor on 10 November The landing force, Task Group There were two tank barrier systems: The west tank barrier extended from the lagoon two-thirds of the way across Butaritari, was 12 to 13 feet 4. The east tank barrier, 14 feet 4. It was protected by a double apron of barbed wire and an intricate system of gun emplacements and rifle pits. Without aircraft, ships, or hope of reinforcement or relief, the outnumbered and outgunned defenders could only hope to delay the coming American attack for as long as possible.
