Ross Eckler's "Making the Alphabet Dance: Recreational Wordplay" is one of the classics of wordplay and recreational linguistics. Eckler was the editor of the top publication in this area, "Word Ways", for many years, and the consequent breadth and depth of his knowledge is reflected in the very high quality of each topic covered.

How are we all doing today? Right now, we are going to go into the gym and when you walk in you will see polyspots on the floor. We do not pick up and touch the spots right? When you hear the music playing, you must move around the gym floor avoiding the spots not stepping on them. When the music stops, stop and look at me what does stop mean. I will call out a body part. When you hear that body part called and the music begins, you must find 5 different spots and touch the called out body part to the spot. Please stay where you are. Raise your hand if you can hear me? Today we are going to learn different ways to move our body. Two weeks ago, can anyone tell me what we learned? We learned the pathways. Raise your hand if you know a pathway we used? Straight, Zigzag and Curved. First, I am going to begin by passing out a piece a paper to everyone. When you get your paper, you will see a shape on it. You need to stay in your own personal space, and make the shape that is on your card. Once you make that shape, please ask a friend if they would like to trade. Be sure you trade for a different shape. Once you have traded four times, we will move on to other shapes. Come get a new shape from me and find your own personal space in the gym. When making these shapes, we should not be moving. These shapes are stationary, not moving. Raise your hand if you can tell me the shapes we have just made? Which shape was easier to make? Which was the hardest? How do you think it would be easier to make the heart? Be sure that your shape is by your side and you are not touching it. Now I would like you to stand up with your shape in your hand and move around the gym in any pathway you would like. The two of you are partners for the day. The red line under the letter means that is the bottom of the letter. GO Change letters with a group near you lower case letter. GO Change letters with a group near you upper case letter. GO Change letters with a group near you upper. GO Change letters with a group near you lower. Now we are going to see who can make the most creative shapes with their partners. You can make a shape and hold it for 5 seconds and then make a new shape. One group is going to make a shape and hold it while the other group shadows or mirrors the shape. When you have mirrored two shapes with your new group, raise your hand, so I can come over and see how well you are doing. When you have finished, you may sit quietly on the line. The quietest person is going to be able to line up first.
