Lewis who can lead doubters to a true understanding of Jesus. John Blanchard is that author. We give the book away by the hundreds, and we have seen many former doubters come to know Jesus as their Lord and God through reading it. The finest book I have ever read explaining who Jesus really is. Carefully reasoned, rooted in the Bible, and written in a popular, easy-to-read style, this book will prove thrilling for the Christian and very convincing to the sceptic or unbeliever. Brian Edwards, preacher and author. In this superlative book John Blanchard has greatly increased the debt we already owe him. Alec Motyer, theologian and author. The presentation of biblical evidence is both masterful and attractive. Beneath this easy, readable style is a rich fare of the meat of the Word. The Banner of Truth. Another excellent book by a great communicator! A carefully argued presentation of biblical doctrine. This is a work of believing scholarship, yet both arresting and thrilling. John Blanchard deals with this vital subject in a manner which is exciting to the believer and challenging to the unbeliever. Anything by this prolific author is well worth reading. This is a brilliant book and one which could be of enormous benefit to Christian and non-believer. Dr John Blanchard is an internationally known author, evangelist and Christian apologist. Some 18 million copies of his publications are in print in over 60 languages. Add to basket SKU: John Blanchard Books Share on:

Chapter 2 : Meet the Real Jesus | HEAD & HEART Ministries

Meet the Real Jesus has 11 ratings and 2 reviews. Tom said: Very thorough, cookies-on-the-lower-shelf exposition of who Jesus is and an earnest call to m.

From Our Point of View During two millennia of its existence, the Christian Church has either been under direct attack, or has had to deal with excesses, heresies, renegades and all forms of private agendas. Particularly from the mid 20th Century, various forms of extreme and bizarre theatrical religious expression have misled huge numbers of people. Many of these truly sincere people were unable to detect that those they were following were shrewd, smooth opportunist imposters peddling counterfeit religion with a few Christian features added to gain acceptance. We anticipate that most people reading this paper will not have been part of the bizarre, so-called revivals we have referred to. Nevertheless, the influence of these gravely mistaken endeavours has extended incredibly widely throughout Christianity. Their erroneous doctrines have seriously impacted upon the Faith in the most unexpected places. Quite apart from that, in the mind of the general public, they have brought Christianity into considerable disrepute. Jesus warned His followers of the need to be constantly on the lookout for false prophets, false messiahs, and false teaching. Despite His warnings, many Trojan Horses have been welcomed into the Christian camp and permitted to spread their destructive and infectious diseases with very serious consequences. Much damage has been and is being inflicted on a badly wounded Church. His life, teaching, His passion, death and resurrection, are a momentary brief glimpse into the unveiling by the Messiah of His teaching and mission. Here we find the contexts in which our Lord acted and gave His teaching. Here we find the truth about our Lord which enables us to evaluate the many questionable representations we come across in society today. This helps empower us to reject confidently the false religious movements which sometimes all but drown us in a sea of confused, even bizarre caricatures of Christianity. Take a look for yourself for the Real Jesus in Sacred Scripture and let the false representations expose themselves as man-made devices for the manipulation of huge numbers of sincere people seeking God and His blessings. The task of forming a complete overview of the life and teaching of Jesus is indeed a huge one. It is a process which cannot be hurried. Rather, we work at it, day by day, piece by piece. We invite you to join us, week by week, in reflecting on a short passage from a Gospel account as assigned for the following Sunday worship in the Three Year Lectionary. Our guidelines to help you are made available on-line. It could not be easier! Following this approach, we find we can encounter the living Lord Jesus going about His daily life and mission. This is always a joy and great encouragement, and helps us dismiss much of the misguided and anti-Christian propaganda beamed at us ceaselessly in modern society. You may like to read about aspects of meditation in general. We have several short articles by way of introduction. They are listed on our page: Amongst all of the above is a very special article: Daily meditation on remembering the Word, and resting in Christ the Word. Some people may prefer to go straight into walking through one of our listed Sunday Reflections on a short Gospel text. We have listed some documents which are very straightforward and need no introduction.

Chapter 3 : AHC G Meet The Real Jesus - Hebrew Catholics

Meet the Real Jesus Jesus encounters intro: Our church started praying every night during the season of Rosh Hashanah Ever since then, our church meet nightly for powerful prayers and revival services.

My scope was limited to the very popular and straightforward claim that prior to the 4th century, the four Gospels were not considered authoritative. And if he was not who he claims, then it proves the Christian religion is false. Therefore, so it goes, let your conscience be at ease for you will not face him in judgment. There is no threat of Hell. However, if he is who he says he is, then the opposite is true. That is my concern for my readers. My study of and exposure to the historic Jesus reconstructionism has shown me that like the inquisitive child there will always be another question asked. In rapid fire, the next question is posed before the previous one was fully answered. The curious child that I imagine is an information junkie, a sponge, her young synapses firing at peak efficiency and her memory cells absorbing knowledge. It smacks of the skeptic. The skeptic asks questions not to gain knowledge but as a tactician with a destructive goal in mind. I write that not to be provocative but to appeal to what I think is an obstacle to truth. The skeptic has made up his mind, not because of, but in spite of the evidence. I see this sort of thing often in my workplace. The results of my investigation can have relatively severe consequences. My findings may cause a production line to shut down for long periods, which costs the company a lot of money. The bottom line is that some problem exists and it will eventually implicate one department or another, or even the customer. One way that plays out is for conclusions to be made before I have even begun the investigation. Management may implement a change to a product or process based on speculations made in a meeting room with no input, no facts, from the investigation! Sadly, such reactions can cause more damage than they try to avoid. The best approach is always to let the evidence lead you to the conclusions, to the true point of failure. With truth on your side, then you can have confidence of implementing a legitimate fix to the real problem. In the end, everyone benefits. It sounds simple, but when the consequences are high and emotions get involved, the right process can be short-circuited. Perhaps the historic Jesus debate is like that. The skeptic is faced with too great a consequence and has made up her mind to present a solution to a fictitious problem, irrespective of the evidence. Nag Hammadi is an archeological treasure for sure. It reveals a great deal of insight into second century thought and culture. But for modern man to implement a change, to re-write the events of two thousand years ago makes no historical or logical senseâ€”when we know the first documents of eyewitness testimony were written between thirty and sixty years removed from the events and extant copies have proven to be an extremely reliable, continual historical legacy of those testimonies. Let me recommend to my readers some of the books I read in my Professional Doctoral studies that were the foundation for this blog series: Jesus and the Eyewitnesses: Bauckham is a Cambridge scholar and Professor Emeritus at St. Andrews University in Scotland. His book explains, largely from the writings of Papias, that the four Gospels were written in a manner consistent with 1st century culture of eyewitness testimony. Because of that void, professional historians went through a phase akin to postmodernismâ€”you cannot know anything for sure. But the profession is returning to its senses and affirming that yes, there are ways to discern the past with significant confidence after all. Perhaps the search-for-the-historical-Jesus movement was caught up in that milieu. I think this a key book, but bewareâ€”it is loooong and technical! Unearthing the Truth Behind Alternative Christianities. Bock really is the go-to guy when it comes to all things Nag Hammadi. Bock has been called upon to respond to these popular and erroneous publications that storm popular culture. If you are persuaded by these things, please read Dr. The literature found in Nag Hammadi does not warrant a re-write of Christian history, but rather affirms it. Indeed, the personal stakes are high. While I have tried to present a reasonable defense for the traditional Jesus, the issue transcends merely winning or losing an argument. Take My yoke upon you and learn from Me, for I am gentle and humble in heart, and you will find rest for your souls.
