Chapter 2 : McLaren Hits 15, Cars Production Milestone

Milestone sports cars by Alberto Martinez, , Haynes edition, in English.

At first the cars were assembled from imported chassis and mechanical parts with bodies sourced locally. Cork[ edit ] In , a plant opened in Cork , Ireland, initially for tractor manufacture, but from cars were built as well. This factory was the first to be purpose built by Ford in Europe. The company of Henry Ford and Son Limitedâ€™Fordsonâ€™ was officially incorporated on 17 April , starting its life on the site of an old Cork racecourse. Its first registered office was at 36 South Mall , Cork. Dagenham[ edit ] Although the Manchester plant was served by the Manchester Ship Canal , Ford decided that access to a deep water port was required and in a new site was chosen by the River Thames at Dagenham , east of London. These shares were heavily over-subscribed. There was considerable investing interest from America as US investors had had no previous opportunity of investing in a Henry Ford business. The new chairman, Sir Percival Perry â€™ , had been, and now was again, central to the development of Ford in Europe. The two men first met in in Detroit. In Henry Ford chose to run operations from Detroit, Perry was determined to run all European business himself. Perry resigned in May The improved Fordson tractor is not yet in production but it is hoped to deliver the first tractors completely manufactured at our Cork works within the next month. This was at the height of the Depression and the Model A was too expensive to tax and run in Britain and very few were sold, only five in the first three months. In all, 73, cars, trucks and tractors had been built at Cork up to that time. The associated companies[ edit ] The original plan was for Canada, having the benefit of imperial-preference tariffs , to manufacture components for Ford assembly plants in the British Empire. Dagenham was to do, and did, the same for assembly plants in Europe but in , mired in the financial depression, both France and Germany announced their intention to impose heavy new tariffs on imported components. In France urgent arrangements were made with Mathis for their plant to be leased by a joint-venture to be known as Matford and devoted to the full manufacture of Ford or Matford products. There were consequential exchanges in shareholdings between Dagenham and Dearborn and other shareholders. In Ferguson arranged production with Standard Motor Company.
