

Current Miss New Mexico, Ashley Fresquez, said she was devastated to hear about the alleged corruption but happy that the contestants have a new executive director, Rhonda Haynes.

Edit The army was formed by Brigadier General Henry Hopkins Sibley during the summer of , recruiting from the eastern counties of Texas. As a result, the weapons used by the troops varied widely, including rifle muskets, squirrel guns, and double barreled shotguns. Arriving at the fort on February 13, Sibley first attempted to lure the Federals out into the open; when this plan failed, he then tried moving north of the fort to cut its supply lines. Canby , reacted by following Sibly north and attacking him at Valverde Ford. At this time, Sibley was either suffering from kidney disease or was drunk; early in the battle he was forced to turn command over to Colonel Thomas Green of the 5th Texas. The battle developed into a stalemate, which continued until late afternoon when the Union left counterattacked following a Confederate attack. This created a gap between the Union left and center; Green ordered a charge into the gap, driving the Union force back across the Rio Grande and capturing four cannons. Consequently he decided to contintue northward, crossing the border into New Mexico Territory and leaving Canby in his rear. Sibley continued northward, capturing Albuquerque on March 2 and Santa Fe on March 13 but failed to capture the Union supplies there. This forced the Confederates to live off the land, but were only able to find a fraction of the supplies they needed; in addition, the foraging alienated the local population. Scurry moved slowly northward to unite with Pyron. Slough was moving south at this time. That evening, in response to a message from Pyron, Scurry arrived with the main force and spent the next day observing the Union force, expecting an attack. After learning of the Union victory, Canby advanced northward in order to unite with the northern force and surround Sibley. Nearly out of ammunition and food, Sibley retreated back to Albuquerque with less than 2, men on April 8, a few hours after Canby arrived. Following the arrival of the force from Fort Union, Sibley decided to continue the retreat due to a shortage of rations, ammunition, and forage. Both sides bombarded each other with artillery until a sandstorm blew in, during which the Confederates withdrew from the field. During the campaign, the army lost approximately a thousand men, nearly half of which were missing or captured. Sibley was relieved of command of the brigade due to drunkenness and reassigned to directing supply trains. Three regiments of mounted rifles originally formed the army, and other units already in the territory were added as the campaign progressed. Captain William Hardeman Company B: Captain Andrew Scarborough Company C: Captain George Hampton Company D: Captain Charles Leseur Company E: Captain Charles Buckholts Company F: Captain James Crosson Company G: Captain William Alexander Company I: Captain David Nunn Company K: Captain Willis Lang Company C: Captain Denman Shannon Company D: Captain Dan Ragsdale Company E: Captain Reddin Pridgen Company I: Captain Ira Killough Company K:

Chapter 2 : Josephine Foard and the glazed pottery of Laguna Pueblo (Book,) [calendrierdelascience.com

The Miss Rodeo New Mexico Pageant encourages contestants from throughout New Mexico. Titleholders include Miss Rodeo New Mexico, Teen Miss Rodeo New Mexico and Princess Miss Rodeo New Mexico. During their year-long reign these ladies travel throughout New Mexico representing the sport of rodeo.

An Oregon National Guard patrol from C Company, 2nd Battalion, nd Infantry, moves up Paris Avenue in north New Orleans, to verify no people remain there in need of help or evacuation and to chart the boundaries of the receding floodwaters Sept. Air Force by Tech. Army and Air National Guard units from around the nation sent troops and equipment to the New Orleans area to help with the evacuation and recovery of the city following Hurricane Katrina and the flooding that followed when the levees were breached. Air Force photo by Tecg. Dey th Engineer Group Soldiers prepare to lift vaults that were washed away from Louisiana cemeteries. Angela Dohm prepares an injection site for a shot at a free clinic Sept. Air Force photo by Master Sgt. Morial Convention Center after assisting more than 4, people in evacuating from the area around the Convention Center on Sept. Air National Guard photo by Tech. Paul Gorman Army Spc. Doherty of the th Medical Company, Georgia Army National Guard, helps a man up from a school building near downtown New Orleans after being stranded by the flood waters that ravished the city. The huge bags of sand were used to plug the levee which burst during Hurricane Katrina and caused so much devastation within the city, leaving thousands either homeless or dead. Air Force photo by Senior Master Sgt. Jim Foard Second Lt. Photo by Tech Sgt Brian E. Shaun Withers The crew of a CH Chinook uses a water basket to collect and drop water in the efforts to squelch two house fires in downtown New Orleans, Sept. The Chinook was part of a joint military and civilian effort to assist firefighters on the ground fighting two blazing house fires apparently set by arsonists. Harold Cross, the adjutant general of Mississippi, holds a briefing regarding Hurricane Katrina operations. Photo courtesy of the Mississippi National Guard Maj. Landreneau, adjutant general of the Louisiana National Guard and Gov. Air Force Photo by Master Sgt. Valadie, Louisiana National Guard Public Affairs Office More than 17, people saved from flooding or other hazards, and 51, people airlifted out of the affected areas by the Army and Air National Guard. Members of the Oklahoma Army National Guard and agents from the Drug Enforcement Administration ride in a 5-ton truck performing block-to-block searches, Sept. The military and federal agencies are performing house-to-house searches, rescuing New Orleans residents stranded in their homes due to flood waters caused by Hurricane Katrina. Photographer unknown; courtesy Maj. Ryan Klein of Dayton, Oregon, uses spray paint to mark an apartment building, indicating that no survivors were seen or heard during a door to door external search by boat in northern New Orleans on Sept 15th, Members of the the 2nd Battalion, nd Infantry and the 41st Brigade, Oregon Army National Guard, deployed to New Orleans to participate in the search and recovery efforts in the wake of Hurricane Katrina. Air Force photo by Tech. Dey Jackson Barracks photographed at the height of the hurricane, August 29, Vadnais talks with Soldiers from the Alliance, Ohio-based B. This kind of scene typified the desperation of residents often forced to the highest points in their residences to escape floodwaters released by levee breaks in the New Orleans area, who sought to gain the attention of rescue helicopters flying in the area.

Chapter 3 : Scandal plagues Miss New Mexico pageant | KOB 4

Miss New Mexico USA Kristen Leyva, left, reacts as Miss New Mexico USA Ashley Mora, congratulates her at the conclusion of the pageant held at OÃ±ate High School on Sunday, January 28,

Chapter 4 : Remembering Hurricane Katrina - 10 Years Later - The National Guard

A $10, CASH scholarship is guaranteed to the winner of the Miss Rio Rancho Scholarship Pageant (an official Miss New Mexico/Miss America local preliminary), Saturday, November 17, at the Santa Ana Star Casino.

Chapter 5 : Miss New Mexico from Meet the Miss America Contestants | E! News

"In at the age of fifty-six, Josephine Jefferson Foard moved from the east coast to Laguna Pueblo in New Mexico, where she build her own house and a kiln for firing pottery.

Chapter 6 : Miss New Mexico

Miss Chica Latina is an avenue for young women in New Mexico and the U.S. to develop and ready themselves for careers, and life by being able to handle and conquer the phobia of standing before and speaking in a public venue. And, this is just the tip of the professional learning iceberg that a young lady can come away with by participating.

Chapter 7 : Foard - Family History & Genealogy Message Board

This field is for validation purposes and should be left unchanged. Submit. Cancel Contact Form.

Chapter 8 : Army of New Mexico | Military Wiki | FANDOM powered by Wikia

We and our partners use cookies on this site to improve our service, perform analytics, personalize advertising, measure advertising performance, and remember website preferences.

Chapter 9 : Miss New Mexico from Miss America Contestants | E! News

Almost two years ago she, with her husband and little son, went to New Mexico hoping to improve her health. Marta Kaley cousinmarta@calendrierdelascience.com Obit for Bessie J. Foard-Hobbs dau. of H.H. Foard born Howell Co. MO died Texas Co. MO.