Ainhana had carefully remove the infuser and I pour in the pearls, listening as they gently hit the glass. I dare not let it run for the full five minutes - I find the perfect brew is made in three. The pearls now unfurl, the green leaves now floating. The clear water turns into the colour of the finest champagne. It is a pleasure that is most welcome, indeed! Teeming with the fires of the Phoenix itself and caressing my tongue with floral sweetness. A delicious moan escapes me as I relax in my Summer Throne. My breathing is calmed as I look at the horizon with redolent eyes. The choirs sing as I drink such fine ambrosia! By a cup of Pearls, mine own eyes feel inspired, as I think of the lovely vision that is the Phoenix that is born of the lotus. Adieu, stresses of Court! Adieu, plagues of doubt and anger! Thy Queen is now jocund dove. In such a golden hour, we shall become Dream Children, to be lost in gardens of distant China. Cleansed by the light, and life for my fields of my fair gardens. This blend cleanses the fire of my heart. This blend casts out sorrows for me to drink beauty. The Phoenix merges with me, for I am the star of the morn that graces my Aurelinaea! Such a blend of elegance in my tongue, a heavenly euphony. Final part of my Jasmine Pearls free verse! Thank you so much for reading! I really hope you enjoyed it!

Rouging of the Lamb B Sweet Mother of pearl struck a ruby eyed reef then quickly sank into the deep, just shy of the cay of life. Ancient pictures tempered fawn curiosities.. Daddy must have been moon rock lonely because he only saw the soft, silky pretty not the pyrite heart soul licked by cold, cold fires A much to young, to cuddle a half orphan, kind of bride. I spent a healthy wedge of childhood treading a rolling ocean of dorsal fin coldness: Everyone would drift into the living room to frolic away the evening but I was chained to her electric chair At times I sat so long the food would harden into the face of mother of pearl, her sweetness trapped between rows of bitter things.. Most of the time wrecking ball mom won the food battles. Rarely did the boy under the bed come out on top. Chalk one up for the half orphan The next day I shuffle home from school She quickly leads me under the kitchen table and to my ,deep green, horror.. I saw "hitting stars" for the first time, wham I swear a cluster of explosions went off inside my head.. Carving a man out of a paper lamb was a long and painful sort of task. In a way I felt lucky because, for a moment, I thought she was going to rub my nose into the regurgitation, Just like the time she rubbed the nose of my best friend for pissing up her new bride carpet. By the way, daddy the swing shifter was oblivious to these rougings Anyhow, that was many years ago Every time I visit, I fantasize about rouging her You know, carve an old step bride into an under the sink child. Unveil those wrinkled whips disguised as mommy hands, for the whole rosy eyed world to finally see. So instead I offer her an atlantic ocean-cold hug instead.

Her last few poems, filled with survivors guilt, which has not been recognized at the time, are addressed to her mother: My mother taught me to feel, to love, My mother taught me to cry, to laugh. My mother taught me goodness and beauty, But fate snatched her away suddenly. Since she was taken I have no rest. You caressed me, loved me, like in the old days. The two of us talked and you told me everything, How you thought about us there, how you were worrying. My body may be a worthless worm, But my soul from yours will never be torn. Years were passing and the horrible curse came true. They locked us millions in cattle cars, And even to you, so faithful to the Almighty, The murderers denied immunity. Watching you my eyes were weeping. I wanted to follow you everywhere " even At the price of my life, I thought then. But on a horrible night, as our train Slowed down and stopped in the open plain, They stole you from me, my only treasure. And yet, I could continue on further. When the snow fell, I worried about you only, You were by my side at every step. When I got tired, you led me ahead, You stroked me, you held my hand. This is how I survived the dreadfully big struggle And I returned to the old abode. Since then I always search to find you, to reunite, I expect you morning, noon, and night. I always knew how much I loved you. My soul has never left you, followed you even then. And down here, lifelessly, I play a farce " I mime, This world is no longer mine.
