Salz was held at St. She was one of the highly respected residents of Richland township. There was a large number at the funeral services. Samuels passed away at his home, Iowa Avenue. And as it is so often the case, the deceased was just entering upon life with the brightest prospects before him, being but twenty years of age. His illness was of five months duration. Harold Samuels was of a disposition that makes friends quickly and holds them ever after. As day clerk at the New West hotel, he came into contact with many persons from out of the city and the sadness that is occasioned by his untimely death will not be confined to Iowa City and the old home in Illinois. The young man leaves his father, mother, and one brother Claud Samuels, clerk at the St. James hotel to mourn his loss. The body was taken Saturday morning for Marseilles, Illinois for interment in the family lot of the cemetery there. Returns From Sad Errand C. Samuels, clerk at the St. James hotel has returned from Marseilles, Illinois, where he accompanied the remains of his brother, Harold Samuels who passed away Friday. Sanger, aged 16 months. Katherine Saueressig was born near Perkins Grove, on August 30, Her parents were Gabriel Pohl and Elizabeth Pohl, nee Erbes, pious Christians, who had their child brought to the Lord in Baptism, at an age, and under whose care she enjoyed the benefits of a Christian training. The deceased did not continue to make her home on the farm after this. Five years ago last October, she moved to town, where she and her sister, Miss Mary Pohl, have since lived together. Of the six children born to her and her husband during their married life, two died in infancy, and one of the greatest sorrows of her life, was the loss of her son, Phillip, who died at the age of 22 years, about 16 years ago. The other three children with 6 grandchildren, remain to mourn the death of a loving and devoted mother. Saueressig, and John Carl Saueressig. She has one brother, John Pohl, of Mendota, and three sisters Mrs. Elizabeth Schoenneshoefer, of Lostant. The deceased was of strong constitution and until several years ago, had very little illness and sickness to endure. When she was afflicted shortly before the death of her husband, she gained relief by means of an operation. Her health after that was quite good for some years. But the dreaded disease of cancer again made its appearance about two years ago. Since then her health and strength have gradually left her. Slowly she saw the end approaching, and not with fear and worry, but with longing and hope she made ready to meet it. And finally her longing was fulfilled and her hopes realized. Since Saturday she grew weaker, and on Monday it was evident that she was soon to be relieved. She lingered until almost midnight, when at a quarter of twelve the Lord came and took her weary soul away. Peaceably, without suffering, without a struggle she slumbered into eternity. Her age was 62 years, 8 months, and 22 days. Peace be with her. Copied as written in: At the age of six, he accompanied his parents to this country, the family settling near Knox Grove, Illinois, where the father purchased a farm. Here our subject grew to manhood and lived his entire life. At the age of sixteen, he was confirmed and became united with St. In , he was united in marriage with Kathrina Pohl. Six children blessed this union, of whom three sons preceded the father in death. A man of industry and thrift, especially interested in and attentive to the welfare of his family, whom he dearly loved. Through his death the community has lost an honest, good friend and trustworthy neighbor and citizen and his family, a good and true husband and kind and loving father. He had been a sufferer from a complication of diseases for the last few years. He was of the nature, which bears all bravely and he suffered patiently and without complaint or murmur. He leaves to mourn his loss, a devoted and sorrowing wife, a daughter, Mrs. Truckenbrod, and two sons, William and John, also two sisters, Mrs. Mary Baker, of Bernich, Germany. Tex Avery introduced a new character in his cartoon short Egghead Rides Again, released July 17, 1938. Many cartoon historians believe that Egghead evolved into Elmer over a period of a couple of years. Egghead shifts from having a Moe Howard haircut to being bald, and wears a brown derby, a baggy suit, and a high-collared shirt. More recently, he also made a cameo appearance at the end of Looney Tunes: Back in Action and was also given in his own story, which starred him alongside Pete Puma, in the Looney Tunes comic book. Whether intentional or coincidental, this was the end for the Egghead character. Bryan, was hired to provide the voice of the hero dog character. Barrier notes, "Elmer Fudd was not a modified version of his fellow Warner Bros. The rabbit drives Elmer insane. In the interim, the two starred in A Wild Hare. He is much more recognizable as the Elmer Fudd of later cartoons than Bugs is here. In his earliest appearances, Elmer actually "wikes wabbits", either attempting to take photos of Bugs, or adopting Bugs as his pet. The rascally rabbit has the poor Fudd so perplexed that there is little wonder as to why Elmer would become a hunter and in some cases actually proclaim, "I hate wittle gway wabbits! Elmer in Rabbit Fire. In Rabbit Fire, he declares himself vegetarian, hunting for sport only. In a few cartoons, though, he assumed a completely different persona—a wealthy industrialist type, occupying a luxurious penthouse, or, in one episode involving a role reversal, a sanitarium—which Bugs would of course somehow find his way into. In another cartoon Mutt in a Rut he appeared to work in an office and had a dog he called "Wover Boy", whom he took hunting, though Bugs did not appear. Several episodes featured Elmer differently. Elmer Fudd is a well-known entertainer who, looking for a new partner for his act, sees Bugs Bunny after passing caricatures of many other famous actors Al Jolson, Jack Benny, Eddie Cantor, Bing Crosby who, like Bugs, are also out of work. Elmer and Bugs do a one-joke act cross-country, with Bugs dressed like a pinhead, and when he does not know the answer to a joke, Elmer gives it and hits him with a pie in the face. Bugs begins to tire of this gag and pulls a surprise on Fudd, answering the joke correctly and bopping Elmer with a mallet, which prompts the man to point his rifle at Bugs. The bunny asks nervously: According to this account, the common Elmer-as-hunter episodes are entirely staged. One episode where Bugs "lost" in the hunting was Hare Brush. Here, Elmer has been committed to an insane asylum because he believes he is a rabbit though it is also revealed that he is a millionaire and owns a mansion and a yacht. Their hunt is cut short when Bugs is arrested by a government agent as Elmer Fudd is wanted for tax evasion. Elmer Fudd has occasionally appeared in other costumes, notably as Cupid. The Cupid Elmer plots to get even with Bugs, using his love arrows to make Bugs fall in love with an artificial rabbit at a dog track. The result is comic mayhem; a steady game of one-upmanship that ultimately leads to matrimony. He became a heavy-set, beer-bellied character, patterned after Arthur Q. However, audiences did not accept a fat Fudd, so ultimately the slimmer version returned for good. Instead of being the hunter, Elmer was the victim of unprovoked pestering by Bugs. Susanna made just for this cartoon complete with the phrase "V for Victory", with Bugs joining in just before starting to hassle Elmer. He made a later appearance in an episode of The Sylvester and Tweety Mysteries as a Russian version with a simple name "Boris" who owns another comedy club in Russia. Elmer-speak He nearly always vocalised consonants [r] and [l], pronouncing them as [w] instead a trait that also characterized Tweety Bird when he would talk in his slightly raspy voice. That characteristic seemed to fit his somewhat timid and childlike persona. Part of the joke is that Elmer is presumably incapable of pronouncing his own first name correctly. Occasionally Elmer would properly pronounce an "r" or "l" sound, depending on whether or not it was vital for the audience to understand what the word was. Usually, Elmer mispronounces the "r" and "l" by substituting the sound of "w". Later appearances Elmer Fudd made appearances in several television specials in the 1950s and 1960s, and some cameo roles in two of the Looney Tunes feature-film compilations. Elmer would also appear frequently on the animated series Tiny Toon Adventures as a teacher at Acme Looniversity, where he was the idol and favorite teacher of Elmyra Duff, the slightly deranged animal lover who resembles Elmer in basic head design, name and lack of intellect. Elmer also had a guest starring appearance on Histeria! Elmer made another appearance on Histeria! Elmer appears as part of the TuneSquad team in Space Jam. In one part of the game he and Yosemite Sam shoot down the teeth of one of the Monstars dressed in black suits while Misirlou is heard in the background. Elmer took on a more villainous role in Looney Tunes: Back in Action , in which he is a secret agent for the Acme Corporation. In his scene, Elmer chases Bugs and Daffy through the paintings in the Louvre museum, taking on the different art styles as they do so. At the end, Elmer forgets to change back to his normal style after jumping out of the pointillist painting Sunday Afternoon on the Island of La Grande Jatte by Georges Seurat , allowing Bugs to easily disintegrate Elmer by blowing a fan at him. He was also shown with short blond hair. He appeared in most of the songs. An even more villainous Elmer appeared in two episodes of Duck Dodgers as The Mother Fudd, an alien who would spread a disease that caused all affected by it to stand around laughing like Elmer a parody of the Flood in Halo and the Borg in Star Trek. In Loonatics Unleashed , his descendant, Electro J. Elmer himself also makes an appearance in the form of a photo which shows he presumably died at the hands of a giant squirrel. He was again voiced by Billy West. He later had a brief cameo appearance in "Fish and Visitors" as a weather forecaster briefly exclaiming about the rainy weather and doing his famous chuckle at the end. Later on, Elmer Fudd reports that EnormoCorp went out of business due to the worst business decision in the history of business decisions caused by its CEO Daffy Duck who succeeded the previous CEO Foghorn Leghorn who retired where he went with the "Proceed as Planned" choice instead of the "Delay the Merger" choice when he mistook Pete Puma as the new muffin man. As a result of this, Elmer mentioned that 10, of its workers are now out of a job and states that experts fear that the world economy could collapse. Elmer Fudd later joins the other characters in the Christmas song called "Christmas Rules" at the end of the episode. That short was going to precede the film Happy Feet Two , [7] but was instead shown with Journey 2: Elmer Fudd appears in Looney Tunes: Rabbits Run voiced again by Billy West. He appears as a spy working for the Mexican general Foghorn Leghorn. In the story, Elmer is a bounty hunter that originated from the country side before he moved to Gotham to make ends meet. He considered putting the shotgun away for good when he fell in love with Silver St. Cloud , but she was killed by hitman Bugs "The Bunny". Bugs confesses to killing Silver, but avoids death by telling Elmer that Bruce Wayne hired him to do it. The three are shocked to find Silver in the bar herself, where she revealed that she left Bruce and Elmer because of their dangerous lifestyles and had Bugs fake her death. The story ends with all three of the men requesting a glass of carrot juice from Porky. In , Bryan died aged 60, and Hal Smith was selected to replace him as Elmer, but after just two cartoons were recorded by the new actor, and another was made in which Fudd has no lines and therefore no voice, the character was soon retired. He was never credited onscreen, because Blanc had a clause in his contract that required him to receive a screen credit and, perhaps inadvertently, denied the same to other voice performers. He admitted in his autobiography that he found the voice difficult to get "right", never quite making it his own. Other voice actors Besides Arthur Q. Bryan , other actors have voiced Elmer: Danny Webb or Cliff Nazarro as Egghead; â€"; sources differ.
