Murder and the First Lady has ratings and 42 reviews. A young woman who is in Mrs. Roosevelt's employ is suspected in the murder of her boyfriend. Mr.

She was born in the village of Mbongweni, [24] Bizana, Pondoland , in what is now the Eastern Cape province. She was the fifth of nine children, seven sisters and a brother. Her parents, Columbus and Gertrude, who had a white father and Xhosa mother, [25] were both teachers. Columbus was a history teacher and a headmaster, and Gertrude was a domestic science teacher. Gertrude died when Winnie was nine years old, resulting in the break-up of her family when the siblings were sent to live with different relatives. Her first job was as a social worker at Baragwanath Hospital in Soweto. Mandela was arrested and jailed in , and was not released until They finalised their divorce in March with an unspecified out-of-court settlement. I am determined to get rid of the marriage". In fact, I am not the sort of person to carry beautiful flowers and be an ornament to everyone. Her case was dismissed by the Mthatha High Court in , [36] and she was reportedly preparing to appeal to the Constitutional Court at the time of her death, after failing at the Supreme Court of Appeal in January Due to her political activities, she was regularly detained by the National Party government. She was subjected to house arrest, kept under surveillance, imprisoned, and banished to the remote town of Brandford. She organised a creche with an NGO, Operation Hunger [43] and a clinic in Brandford with Dr Abu Baker Asvat , her personal physician, [44] campaigned actively for equal rights and was promoted by the ANC as a symbol of their struggle against apartheid. In the context of the global struggle for the release of political prisoners in our country, our movement took a deliberate decision to profile Nelson Mandela as the representative personality of these prisoners, and therefore to use his personal political biography, including the persecution of his then wife, Winnie Mandela, dramatically to present to the world and the South African community the brutality of the apartheid system. Sono claimed that Winnie Mandela had labelled her son a spy, and had said she was "taking him away". Even if he is dead, let Mrs Mandela give us the remains of our son, so that we must bury him decently. Paul Verryn , [60] with Richardson claiming that Winnie Mandela had the youths taken to her home because she suspected the reverend was sexually abusing them allegations that were baseless [17]. The four were beaten to get them to admit to having had sex with the minister. Negotiations that lasted 10 days, by senior ANC and community leaders to get the kidnapped boys released by Winnie Mandela failed. According to Heslinga, Richardson admitted during an interview that Moeketsi discovered he was an informant, and that he killed the child to cover his tracks. Truth and Reconciliation Commission South Africa The final report of the Truth and Reconciliation commission TRC , issued in , found "Ms Winnie Madikizela Mandela politically and morally accountable for the gross violations of human rights committed by the Mandela United Football Club" and that she "was responsible, by omission, for the commission of gross violations of human rights. The TRC also found that she was responsible for the abduction of, and assaults on, Stompie Sepei, and that she had attempted to cover up his death by claiming he had fled to Botswana. She then adopted the surname "Madikizela-Mandela". Also in , she lost her position as the head [83] of the ANC social welfare department, amid allegations of corruption. Archbishop Desmond Tutu as chairman of the commission recognised her importance in the anti-apartheid struggle, but exhorted her to apologise and to admit her mistakes. In a guarded response, she admitted "things went horribly wrong". Both had pleaded not guilty. Madikizela-Mandela was sentenced to five years in prison. The judge overturned the conviction for theft, but upheld the one for fraud, handing her a three years and six months suspended sentence. She offered her home as shelter for an immigrant family from the Democratic Republic of the Congo. In the interview, she attacked her ex-husband, claiming that he had "let blacks down", that he was only "wheeled out to collect money", and that he is "nothing more than a foundation". She further attacked his decision to accept the Nobel Peace Prize with F. Among other things, she reportedly claimed Mandela was no longer "accessible" to her daughters. She referred to Archbishop Tutu, in his capacity as the head of the Truth and Reconciliation commission, as a "cretin". She suffered from diabetes and had recently undergone several major surgeries. Roodt, Andre Pieterse, and Paul L. On viewing the film, Madikizela-Mandela told Harris it was "the first time she felt her story had been captured on film". Gugulethu okaMseleku, writing in The Guardian, stated that the film had returned Winnie Mandela to her rightful place, recognising her role in "the struggle" that, "for South African women Mandela won the Robert F. Winnie Mandela spoke in front of an approximated 2. The Million Woman March is the largest gathering in the world of women anywhere ever, in one location during the 20th century and the first grassroots mass assembly specifically for women and girls of African descent and to produce over a million attendees.

Margaret Jones and Patrick Durkin. Sarah Danby, George Kingston and Will Tarrant settle down for a quiet evening in their respective homes. But a chance remark by Tom Danby brings them together for a shattering series of revelations which hurts each in turn. A Little Goodwill Director: N J Crisp Cast: Most men with small businesses know that when the time comes to retire they can sell up with a tidy profit. Sarah investigates what seems a straight-forward grievance and uncovers a dubious racket in the process. Radio Times, May 16, A major headache is created for Furness Council from a very unlikely quarter. When Sarah suggests Albert Tunncliffe, a happily-married park keeper, as the man to be featured on a recruitment poster, it seems an ideal choice. But the fascinating thing about life is that nothing is ever quite what it seems to those willing to look a little further than the surface of things. This episode also creates an ethical problem for Sarah where and when to draw the line. Radio Times, May 23, The Noble Tradition Director: George Kingston feels that the Furness Labour Party are trying to bulldoze through a scheme for comprehensive education. He gets together a Save-The-Grammer School petition. He is suspected of being the vandal who has been wrecking the school recently. What is important is why? Radio Times, May 30, Like most northern towns, Furness urgently needs new factories to provide jobs and opportunities. When an American Trade Delegation comes to look over Furness as a possible sight for a new plant, the red carpet is laid out in no uncertain fashion. But what happens when the pretty teenage daughter of the industrialist is accused of a petty crime? And what happens to the new project either way? Radio Times, June 6, King Of Furness Director: From the fireman on the footplate of a railway engine, via the Library Theatre, Manchester, managing a troupe of Spanish dancers on a tour of one-night stands in church halls through the Scottish Highlands and the Hebrides, to Sergeant Blackitt of Z-Cars to Will Tarrant of The First Lady, is the pretty unusual progress of Robert Keegan. He became interested in acting after the war and was much involved in amateur dramatics for many years. I had to keep changing them. They kept interfering with the acting". When he became a professional he met Henry Livings at the Oldham Repertory and Livings promised him a part in the play he was writing. He is enjoying The First Lady very much - "everyone is so professional" - but he has no yen for real-life local politics. Radio Times, June 13, Even George Kingston agrees with the choice and the voting is unanimous - or practically. Yes, But Who Am I? James was playing a north-country car-salesman-cum-con-man engaged in selling the same derelict car to three different innocent buyers. James got the part. He has also directed two productions. He has a record collection, and his house, like that of many hi-fi fanatics, is built round his extensive equipment; there are speakers in every room. But his interest in music extends well beyond merely listening: When asked if there is any further aspect of the stage or television that he would particularly like to try his hand at he replies, "Anything. Radio Times, June 20, The position of foster-parents is not an enviable one. Sometimes the child may be left with them for years, and brought up as one of their own, before being removed from their care. In this situation is it any use authority telling them not to get too attached to the child? Can you bring up a child without regarding it as your own, and should you? A row develops which even extends to the Welfare Committee, headed by Sarah Danby. But this boy is old enough to chose for himself. Which set of "parents" will he choose? This episode was delayed due to the broadcast of the Apollo 10 Manoeuvres. There are always good sound financial reasons for the demolition, but once the building has gone, it has gone forever. Ed Robson, a Furness contractor, wants to pull down Furness Hall, a much loved building of distinction, and replace it with an office block. Only Sarah opposes the scheme and the matter seems settled. Then a strange ally turns up. School caretakers are not always the most popular people in a school. Often it is a thankless job, unappreciated by either boys or staff. When Sarah applies for a temporary job as a music teacher, she finds that he practically runs the school, bullying and overriding all opposition. But Sarah Danby is the last person in the world to stand a bully and the stage is set for a clash of temperaments that blows up to a major battle with no quarter given on either side. From this episode transmission nights was on a Thursday. The village of Bakley is threatened by subsidence and the villagers need to be rehoused. But the Bakley Colliery Band is more than a brass band, it is a way of life - a life that will die if the band is dispersed. And Sarah has reason to be sentimental about brass bands. A Time Of Fear.

Reviews Murder and the First Lady Eleanor Roosevelt, 1 Jerry An interesting whodunit that also features a fun what-if scenario. Susan Jo Grassi The very first in the series. Roosevelt even though I was only a child when she died. Her son, Elliott, did her justice in the books he wrote about her. They bring back an era that few of us remember but is recent enough for all of us to have heard of. I have read several of the books in the series but could never find the first three. I have them now and look forward to reading the other two. Helene Slowik an interesting look at the world of the White House written by someone who was there. Ellen Moore I liked this book. Elliott Roosevelt painted a good picture of his parents while they were living in the White House. I found the descriptions of persons like J. Edgar Hoover very interesting. The cooperation of several important persons with Mrs. Susan This was a simple, fun little mystery. Not much to it, but it was interesting to watch Eleanor Roosevelt meddle in the mystery, and to see her interactions with other historical Washington figures e. Lisa Towards the end the story line seemed to be on replay. Overall it really was a good story. It was interesting to catch a glimpse into social standards and life during the FDR era. Jim Babcock I loved it! Eleanor has always been an interesting and inspiring figure, and now this series adds another playful side to her. Pamela Rush-Hodgeborn, a British citizen, is accused of taking part in the robbery of jewels from the Earl and Countess of Crittenden, friends of the Roosevelts. Mrs Roosevelt does not believe the jailed girl is guilty, nor does the Countess. Helped by the DC police chief and a Scot Patsy A young woman who is in Mrs. Roosevelt is certain that the young woman Pamela is innocent and with the help of a few officials, sets out to prove it. Gambling, greed, politics, bribery, lies, extortion, blackmail, conmen, strong armed men, deception and disguises are all employed by the thieves, the innocent, by two governments, FBI, Scotland Yard, DC POLICE as The Who done Kathy Great puzzle of a mystery and I so enjoyed all the historical characters Ellen First Lady Eleanor Roosevelt becomes embroiled in a murder mystery when one of her staff members, Pamela Rush-Hodgeborne, is accused of murder. Somehow, the bottle of bitters was laced with cyanide and Pamela is immediately arrested. Although she protests her innocence, no one but Mrs. Rusty Pamela Rush-Hodgeborne, employed by first lady, Eleanor Roosevelt, is arrested for the murder of her boyfriend, Phillip Garber. The two were implicated in a jewelry robbery in England. However, when he dies after taking a few sips of his favorite drink, an old fashioned mixed by Pamela, she is jailed. It starts as one mystery, but then includes other unsolved mysteries and new mysteries; it was well-written which, sadly, tends to get books bonus points from me. I liked the mystery, being surprised at the end with the identity of the culprit. The book, written in , seemed a bit dated, but it kept my interest. I will definitely read more from this series. Hillary I thought this book would be really cheesy. The idea of a first lady being an amateur sleuth seemed pretty ridiculous, but when I found out that the author is the son of Franklin and Eleanor Roosevelt, curiosity got the better of me. I was pleasantly surprised. It truly kept me guessing until the very end. An unexpected fun read. Amy My mother, an avid reader with my taste in books, gave me two of Mr. Linda Good detective yarn with Mrs. This was a strong start to the series and I enjoyed the story. It was also fun to see real people from history making cameo appearances because they were meeting with the President. Roberta A fun how-it-might-have-been mystery since it involves familiar historic characters. I live near Hyde Park and have met several of the Roosevelts, including Elliott. There is the feeling of getting an inside peek at the first family and glimpses of the "real" people around them. Jennifer An interesting idea of Eleanor Roosevelt as an amateur detective. Dana So much fun. Though it is a bit scratchy, try and get the Recorded Books audio version. Super amusing and well done. Dana Using his mother, who just happens to be Eleanor Roosevelt , as the protagonist detective in his murder mysteries keeps them interesting and historically informative and very funny at times! Leslie Goddard A fun mystery with Eleanor Roosevelt tackling the detective work of solving a mystery. Eleanor Roosevelt first in series ; first lady investigates murder when her English assistant is accused; various people from the era show up in the book Rachel It was a fun read, not the most intellectual writing, but a fun little
