Consider recognizing those who have performed acts of kindness or have made a positive difference in your life, neighborhood or community in one of these categories: Acknowledge all the good deeds you see throughout the year. There is no recognition too big or too small! This is a great way to praise the neighbor that plowed your driveway all winter, the youth on your street for running an errand, the local business that donated food or items to your event, or a group making a positive impact or advocating for what you believe in. All who are recognized for these voluntary acts will receive an invitation to attend our celebration and they will receive a certificate of appreciation presented by Coalition staff and other community leaders. The next Neighborlies will be held in the fall. Recognize someone Our Neighborhoods: At the core of what Northern Berkshire Neighbors nBn does is neighborhood development. It is our belief that strong neighborhoods are essential to having a healthy community. Neighborhood development can be as simple as plugging in your coffee pot and informally gathering with your neighbors monthly or as advanced as forming a neighborhood association that tackles neighborhood-based concerns and projects, such as road safety and beautification efforts. Currently, nBn supports the following neighborhoods: UNO Community Center Facebook The Community Outreach Volunteer Training is a free 6-month training offered once a year in mid-February to anyone that lives in northern Berkshire that is interested in helping their neighbors, making a difference and becoming more engaged in their community. As part of the training, participants will learn about many of the health and human service providers and community organizations in the northern Berkshire region; engage in workshops and training on topics such as styles of leadership, accessing local government, public speaking, conflict management, and other related topics; complete a project that addresses or meets a community need. A letter of interest is required to register for the training; however, no prior education or experience is necessary. For more information on this training, click the "Contact nBn" tab and send us a message. Neighborhoods throughout the northern Berkshires participate in this nationwide crime and drug prevention event. National Night Out is held on the first Tuesday of August and is designed to: Residents throughout North Adams are asked spend the evening outside with neighbors, police, fire and ambulance. Neighborhoods throughout North Berkshire joined the North Adams Police, Fire, and Emergency Departments to host a variety of special events such as cookouts, games, contests, music and more! This is a collective of actions, art, programs and community events developed to enhance the lovability of North Adams. The group develops opportunities to interact with the city itself, spreading a sense of whimsy and fun into local culture and community identity, and bringing together residents from across North Adams in new and exciting ways. The Initiative works to execute a wide variety of projects, which include art exhibits, pop up activities, competitions, multimedia pieces, community events, and whimsical enhancements to both the physical city and the culture of North Adams. Members of the Initiative are drawn from many sectors and areas of the City to get the broadest range of stakeholders possible, and to incorporate as much expertise as possible.

Chapter 2 : Northern Berkshire Community Coalition |Northern Berkshire Community Coalition

Northern Berkshire Neighbors (nBn) nBn is a neighborhood development program of the Northern Berkshire Community Coalition. Our goal is to create greater citizen awareness of how active participation in one's neighborhood and community events contributes to one's personal health and to the health of the community.

The medical van service has a similar logo designed for it. Ambulance service President Robert M. Bruce Shepley worked on the ambulance in its early years and said it had a profound affect on the direction of his life. He was a operating room and flight nurse. Patrick Carnevale brings greetings from the governor. Richard Alcombright, former mayor, tells who important the ambulance has been to his family. Mayor Thomas Bernard praised the expertise and professionalism of the service. Chief Amalio Jusino, left, and Meaney pose with A. Enchill, aide to Sen. Adam Hinds, who brought a resolution from Hinds and the state Senate. Deborah Clapp, executive director of Region 1 EMS, speaks of the changes and challenges for rural medical services. The closure of the private Mohawk Ambulance Service prompted a dedicated group of directors and about a dozen emergency medical technicians to form a new nonprofit to service the city and its environs. Some 40 years later, its workforce is closer to and it covers most of North Berkshire and a wide swath of Southern Vermont. It ended with the unveiling of its new moniker: Northern Berkshire Emergency Medical Services. The new logo centers the Mount Greylock Veterans Memorial and its beacon on a mountainous terrain with an orange and gold maple leaf behind. The EMS division has a heartbeat, the van transport service a winding road. The rebranding effort was a result of the merger with Village that was effective on Jan. The financially struggling Williamstown ambulance service was facing closure last year but was brought under the management umbrella of NAAS through a collaborative effort with the town of Williamstown and Williams College, which provided the financial backing. Emergency services officials admitted that organizations tend to get territorial over coverage but Village and NAAS were connected between personnel who had worked at both organizations and a collegial professionalism. He complimented the expertise and professionalism of the combined medical service. The community is fortunate to have us. General Manager John Meaney Jr. There were several other speakers who shared their recollections and congratulations. Bruce Shepley, a nurse and early squad member, recalled how difficult communications were at the time the service began. There was no but rather bulky radios and antennas. Sometimes it might be a pediatrician, other times a surgeon. The new logo puts Mount Greylock front and center; a heartbeat and a star of life differentiates EMS from the transport services. The coins with the old logo were passed out to guests. A lot of it was common sense, though there was a little trial and error in there. The service had to add on another 2, square feet in and purchase more ambulances. It provides back up service for Adams, Cheshire, and Savoy. Former Mayor Richard Alcombright shared his story of the "grave crime scene," when his mother had fallen trying to move a crockpot with a pot roast. When he asked her if he could tell the story, his mother had nothing but praise for the EMTs. The service also received resolutions and congratulations from U. Elizabeth Warren, state Sen. Adam Hinds, and state Rep. Two new ambulances with the new name on them were also unveiled in the courtyard. We show up at celebrations and tragedies and everything in between. We show up so our readers can learn about pivotal events that affect their communities and their lives. How important is local news to you? You can support independent, unbiased journalism and help iBerkshires grow for as a little as the cost of a cup of coffee a week.
