His family are members of the Church of Ireland. His rise to fame began as one of the early successes of Channel 5 , when he won an award for his performance as the stand-in host of a late-night TV talk show usually presented by Jack Docherty. Father Furlong was often seen taking charge of the St. The Independent Television Commission I. Also in , Norton was listed in The Observer as one of the funniest acts in British comedy. Though Norton is Irish, the bulk of his television career has been in the UK. Norton has subsequently presented the three follow-up series: On 7 July , Norton presented at Live Earth and undertook a trip to Ethiopia with the Born Free Foundation to highlight the plight of the Ethiopian wolf – the rarest canid in the world. The format is very similar to his previous Channel 4 shows. In December , the panel show Would You Rather? In January , Norton asked listeners to his Radio 2 show to help find his car, shortly after it was stolen. It was filthy by the way. Norton and Winkleman also hosted the Contest in Glasgow, Scotland. On 5 December , it was announced that Norton would also take over from Wogan as the presenter of the main Eurovision Song Contest. Puckov in the American comedy spoof film Another Gay Movie. Norton was involved in a high-publicity advertising campaign for the UK National Lottery as an animated unicorn , the stooge to a character based on Lady Luck played by Fay Ripley. Paul Colton , hosted an evening with Norton involving 90 minutes of interview, questions, and answers with an audience of more than people. The event, part of the West Cork Literary Festival, was sold out. He lost half of his blood and nearly died. Norton said he did not think the attack was homophobic, as he was by himself at the time. He was hospitalised for two-and-a-half weeks before eventually recovering from the attack. Norton has two dogs, a labradoodle called Bailey and a terrier called Madge, which he adopted from the UK charity Dogs Trust. The keys to his Lexus were taken during the burglary. He appealed for the return of his car during his BBC Radio 2 show the following day.

Some of the surprises, such as the wine-tasting, have been arranged through ideas submitted by viewers, stating where they will be when the show is recorded. This section was seen in an extended weekend repeat, called Graham Norton Uncut, and was also made available as a downloadable podcast. As well as showing the "Cooldown", it also included previously unseen parts from the original episode. If there was a third guest, they were usually introduced later in the show. If the two guests are connected in some way for example, Dustin Hoffman and his wife, they were the only ones introduced at the start. If musical guests were involved in the show, one of several things happened. Some performers, such as Enrique Iglesias, were on stage from the very beginning. Others, such as Gareth Gates came on stage about 5 to 7 minutes before their performance for a short interview. Also, some musical guests only performed during the end credits and participated in the Cooldown section of the programme. However, all bands performed during the credits and were interviewed in the Cooldown segment. A typical show consisted of one big celebrity name, a comedian sitting in the aforementioned comedy chair and a well-known musical personality who would all be introduced after the monologue. Sometimes three guests are introduced at the top of the show with the musical guest brought in about 10 to 15 minutes before the end of the show. Norton and his guests listen to the stories and if Norton gets bored, he "pulls the lever" or occasionally a guest "pulls the lever" and the chair falls backwards, dumping the speaker from it. Series [edit] The first series began at 10 pm on 22 February on BBC Two and was originally slated to end on 24 May after 13 episodes. However, the series proved such a hit that it was extended for an additional six episodes. The show made its North American premiere on BBC America on 2 June, one week after what was supposed to be the final episode of Series 1 before its extension. Unlike the previous series, each episode premiered in the United States only nine days after the initial UK broadcast. Series 3 began its run on 17 April. For series 3, the "Cooldown" segment had been dropped, and the show was just the full uncut minute version of the show. The show continued to be broadcast in a minute version on Thursdays at 10pm with Graham Norton Uncut, the uncut version shown on Sundays at around 11 pm in a minute version. As of now, there have been 21 series of the show. At the end of the final show, a photograph was taken of all the crew on the sofa along with Norton, and a caption reading "Love, thanks and goodbye to The London Studios". Episodes are usually shown a week after their original UK airing on BBC One, while re-runs from past seasons are shown overnight or during the day. Episodes are usually shown a week after their original UK airing on BBC One, while re-runs from past seasons are shown overnight or during daytime. In the United States, the show started airing on Saturday nights in June. In 2011, the show moved to a Friday night time slot, which airs new episodes a week after the BBC airing.
