A 25 second sample from "Open Your Heart" featuring the chorus backed by percussion. Problems playing this file? In the song, "Madonna yearns for a man to open her lock with his key. And yes, that means exactly what you think it does. According to him "it was a tune people could understand and latch on to, which is what makes a pop song memorable". The single was on the chart for nine weeks in total, [28] and was certified silver by the British Phonographic Industry BPI on December 1, Madonna portrays an exotic dancer who befriends a young boy, played by child actor Felix Howard. The video was shot in July and was released in December It was produced by David Naylor. He wanted to have a "naive and sweet" feel with the portrayal of a boy waiting outside for Madonna. They built the set from scratch, including the frontal part with the ticket booth. Although it looked fake, Mondino liked it saying "I like the fakeness of it. So the wig was kept for the initial scenes of the video only. Inside Madonna starts singing the song from the center of a carousel that revolves to display her to the gaze of the customers who are sitting safely in their cubicles. The bluish and dark lighting reveals her look as a mix of actresses Marlene Dietrich in the movie The Blue Angel [44] as well as Liza Minnelli as the character Sally Bowles in the Bob Fosse -directed musical film , Cabaret. At one point in the first segment of the video, she is filmed dancing but the camera is almost still and the motions of the dance are confined within the small range of the camera. As the screens inside the viewing booths open and close, the camera slices the shots of Madonna each with its own angle and duration. Madonna at one point takes off her gloves like Rita Hayworth in Gilda and points towards one of the wooden paintings. It collapses and she blows on her finger. She looks down into the cubicles to make eye contact with the men but they are unable to return it. With these scenes Madonna portrays her holding power over the men and the ability to pursue them. Madonna represents an assertive woman searching for a lover who can accept her as a human being. As the final chorus breaks into dance grooves, Madonna comes out of the theater and gives the boy a quick kiss on his lips. Both are clad in loose-fitting gray suits, which gives Madonna an androgynous look. They stroll away playfully in the sunrise, reminiscent of Charlie Chaplin and Jack Coogan in The Kid with the old boss pursuing them and shouting "Come back, come back, we still need you" in Italian. Only when she disappears from the carousel and reappears to run away from her patriarchal boss with the young boy, then the music and visuals become comparable. Pop as Commodity said that the underlying message in the video is that though Madonna sells sexuality, she is free. Their escape together avoids Madonna the sexual overtones that would have been stronger if she would have escaped with an adult male. At the same time, the portrayal of Madonna as "porno queen object" is deconstructed by the escape at the end of the video. It started off with then young dancer Chris Finch, imitating Felix Howard from the video. Howard did not receive a working license for the tour hence Finch was taken for his part. He went on to become an integral part of most of the songs performed on the tour. She wore the same black pointy corset and fishnets as in the music video. Two different performances of the song on this tour can be found on the videos: Live from Italy , filmed in Turin , Italy, on September 4, This time, it included a hunky dancer watching from a distance as Madonna entered the stage with her hair stretched into a topknot and fake blond ponytail, which was replaced by short peroxide tangles in the European leg of the tour. Showing off the satin pink bodysuit and her monocle chain, Madonna performed the song on a chair. Playing a dominatrix role, Madonna got on top of one of the dancers before carrying off an exhibitionist dance routine with the chair as a prop. As Madonna finished a performance of "Frozen " in the Geisha inspired segment of the show, she sat in a cross-legged position in front of the stage. The musical intro for "Open Your Heart" would start with a dancer in a Japanese costume dancing behind her on a raised podium. Madonna forgot the lyrics at the Vegas show and refused to sing the song in Boston ; she performed "Express Yourself" instead.

Background[ edit ] Hot on the heels of their single "Sight for Sore Eyes" and a Top 5 album Bizarre Fruit and a sold out UK Tour, M People released this single in a slight reshuffle, as "Search for the Hero" was meant to be the second single but the band were re-editing the Bizarre Fruit version to a more radio friendly edit so "Open Your Heart" was released instead. The band had been on holiday together over the New Year break in Grenada, while dance mixes of this single had been released early and on UK radio, Pete Tong had been rotating several mixes on BBC Radio 1. Critical reception[ edit ] Billboard wrote about the song: First single from the imminent "Bizarre Fruit" album has already won the hearts of M People die-hards at club level, and it sports a hook that takes up instant residence in the brain upon impact. Maestros Mike Pickering and Paul Heard blur, with notable finesse, the timeline dividing current house music trends and vintage Philly soul, while singer Heather Small continues to evolve into a smoky-voiced diva who may remind some of a club-minded Anita Baker. Their best since Moving On Up. The single climbed from number 11 into the Top 10 at number 9 where it peaked, providing the band with their seventh consecutive top 10 hit in just two years since the release of How Can I Love You More. It spent in total four weeks in the top 10 and a total seven weeks on the Singles Chart. The Bizarre Fruit album also underwent a resurgence in sales, re-entering the Album Chart Top 10 at number 8, so the band once again recorded simultaneous single and album Top 10s, being at numbers 9 and 8, respectively in the first week of February like the last two singles. Airplay[ edit ] Generally, radio support for the single grew relatively slowly, despite being serviced to radio in the first week of , which is traditionally a very quiet time for single releases. Also predecessor Sight for Sore Eyes had remained in the airplay Top 20 two three months after entering. In the three weeks prior to airplay the single entered the chart at No. Only after physical release did the single enter the Airplay Top 10 and peak at number 5. The single stayed in the chart for 13 weeks but peaked lower than any of the other Bizarre Fruit singles; Sight for Sore Eyes: It also contained an exclusive re-mix of previous single Sight for Sore Eyes done bone by Producers: For the first time, specifically for a remix, Heather went back into the recording studio for Brothers in Rhythm to re-sing both the verses and chorus in a different arrangement. The band had done all this during the promotion of "Sight for Sore Eyes" in the autumn of Artwork[ edit ] The artwork for the single is a heart shaped tin can that half opened against a caustic bronze background. Photographed by Jason Tozer, it continues the metal artwork theme as seen on the artwork of previous single Sight for Sore Eyes with the corrugated metal sheets and the barbed-wire pear on the artwork of the Bizarre Fruit album. Live[ edit ] They also performed this song in a stripped down acoustic version on various occasions, most notable when they performed their M People special with Jools Holland in March Music video[ edit ] The video was filmed over two days: Produced by Matthew Amos, this more adventurous offering showed the band in an elevator moving between floors and watching clubbers come in and out of the sliding doors exiting onto another dancefloor. Band members Mike Pickering , Paul Heard, and Shovell are in amongst the crowd dancing while Heather stands still singing in a red Oriental-style dress on the other side of the viewing glass, as people dance around her and then leave or even disappear as quickly as they arrived. As the video continues, the camera is continuously panning from right to left encircling the body of the elevator moving from the front where you can see the people dancing to round to the back where you can see the mechanisms in the lift shaft.
