Yet, with all that, we have barely scratched the surface of what Forever Florida has to offer. The diverse ecosystems, wildlife, rich heritage, a working cattle ranch and more are part of the experience. Throughout the year church, civic, school or scout groups can reserve the campground for a true Florida outdoor adventure. A low ropes course is available for corporate or private group retreats. Teach your organization the value of team building, leadership and determination as you master the challenges presented on the course. There is a remote but up-scale campground way back in the wilderness of Forever Florida for individuals, couples or small groups. Plus there are two more campsites in-between. Education is a large part of the Forever Florida mission. They provide Educator Resources designed to be compatible with Florida educational standards. They are also in the process of developing an On-line Interactive Eco Classroom. It will focus on the various Florida ecosystems and their relationships to each other and to us. They even serve beef that was raised on the Crescent J Ranch. Right beside the rustic tables in the restaurant is the gift shop which features artwork by local Florida artists along with suitable souvenirs of all kinds that help remind you of your time in the Florida wilderness. A Harvest Music Jam takes place in October. This year will feature the 10th annual Patrick Smith day, which honors the acclaimed Floridian author with a day of storytelling, arts and crafts, vendors, animal interactions and a special kid zone. Abundant Wildlife of All Sizes More? How about celebrating Thanksgiving or Christmas at the Cypress Restaurant; ringing in the New Year; or celebrating the season of renewal and new life by having your Easter Dinner at Forever Florida. You want even more? Tell you what, give the folks at Forever Florida a call. They will work with you to create any kind of special event. After all, this is a very special place.

Chapter 2 : Orlando Area Lake Homes and Land For Sale - calendrierdelascience.com

The Orlando Area, located in Central Florida, has the highest concentration of listings out of any of Florida's other metropolitan areas. With 76 lakes and lake communities, and more than residential and land listings, its overall market value totals more than $ million.

Etymology[edit] Fort Gatlin, as the Orlando area was once known, was established at what is now just south of the city limits by the 4th U. Artillery under the command of Lt. Fanning on November 9, , during the construction of a series of fortified encampments across Florida during the Second Seminole War. The site of construction for Fort Gatlin, a defensible position with fresh water between three small lakes, was likely chosen because the location was on a main trail and is less than yards from a nearby Council Oak tree where Native Americans had traditionally met. King Phillip and Coacoochee frequented this area and the tree was alleged to be the place where the previous ambush that had killed over soldiers had been planned. This name originates from the first permanent settlers, Issac and Aaron Jernigan , cattlemen who acquired land two miles northwest of Fort Gatlin along the west end of Lake Holden in July by the terms of the Armed Occupation Act. Fort Gatlin was briefly reoccupied by the military for a few weeks during October and November and subsequently a volunteer militia was left to defend the settlement. Jernigan appears on a map of Florida and by the area had become the county seat of Orange County. They were then transported to Ocala , but escaped. The most common stories are that the name Orlando originated from the tale of a man who died in during a attack by Native Americans in the area during the Second Seminole War. Several of the stories relay an oral history of the marker for a person named Orlando, and the double entendre , "Here lies Orlando. However, others claim Speer simply used the Orlando Reeves legend to help push his plan for naming the settlement after the Shakespearean character. Gore, promoted the Reeves legend in History of Orlando published in One legend has Reeves killed during an extended battle with the Seminoles after being field promoted after his platoon commander fell. Another version of the story has Orlando Reed, supposedly an Englishman and mail carrier between Fort Gatlin and Fort Mellon , allegedly killed while camping with his friends near Fort Gatlin. Rees owned a Volusia County sugar mill and plantation as well as several large estates in Florida and Mississippi. Subsequently, Rees led an expedition to recover stolen slaves and cattle. In , Rees also attempted to stop a peace treaty with the Seminoles because it did not reimburse him for the loss of slaves and crops. Cheney put forth a new version of the story in an Orlando Sentinel article. According to yet another version of the story Orlando may have been the name of one of his employees.
