

This GOD OF WAR walkthrough will be completed showcasing every level, mission, boss, and story ending. Review copy provided by Sony PlayStation. No compensation was provided for the creation of.

Can be bought from Urag gro-Shub in The Arcanaeum. Contents Edit In the Merethic Era , when Ysgramor first set foot on Tamriel , his people brought with them a faith that worshipped animal gods. Certain scholars believe these primitive people actually worshipped the divines as we know them, just in the form of these totem animals. They deified the hawk, wolf, snake, moth, owl, whale, bear, fox, and the dragon. Every now and then you can stumble across the broken stone totems in the farther reaches of Skyrim. Foremost among all animals was the dragon. In the ancient Nordic tongue it was drah-gkon. Occasionally the term dov-rha is used, but the language or derivation of that is not known. Using either name was forbidden to all except the dragon priests. Grand temples were built to honor the dragons and appease them. Many of them survive today as ancient ruins haunted by draugr and undead dragon priests. Dragons, being dragons, embraced their role as god-kings over men. Were they not superior in every way to the hordes of small, soft creatures that worshipped them? For dragons, power equals truth. They had the power, so therefore it must be truth. Dragons granted small amounts of power to the dragon priests in exchange for absolute obedience. In turn, the dragon priests ruled men as equals to the kings. Dragons, of course, could not be bothered with actually ruling. In Atmora , where Ysgramor and his people came from, the dragon priests demanded tribute and set down laws and codes of living that kept peace between dragons and men. In Tamriel, they were not nearly as benevolent. Whatever the cause, the dragon priests began to rule with an iron fist, making virtual slaves of the rest of the population. When the populace rebelled, the dragon priests retaliated. So it was the Dragon War began. At first, men died by the thousands. The ancient texts reveal that a few dragons took the side of men. Why they did this is not known. The priests of the Nine Divines claim it was Akatosh himself that intervened. From these dragons men learned magics to use against dragons. The tide began to turn and dragons began to die too. The war was long and bloody. The dragon priests were overthrown and dragons were slaughtered in large numbers. The surviving dragons scattered, choosing to live in remote places away from men. The dragon cult itself adapted and survived. They built the dragon mounds , entombing the remains of dragons that fell in the war. They believed that one day the dragons would rise again and reward the faithful. Appearances The Elder Scrolls V: Skyrim This book was taken from The Elder Scrolls series of video games or from websites created and owned by Bethesda Softworks , the copyright of which is held by Bethesda Softworks. All trademarks and registered trademarks present in the image are proprietary to Bethesda Softworks, the inclusion of which implies no affiliation with The Elder Scrolls Wiki. The use of such images is believed to fall under the fair use doctrine of copyright law.

Chapter 2 : The Hobbit: The Battle of the Five Armies () - IMDb

The Dragon's War on the Remnant Part 5. Written By: admin1 | February 12, | Posted In: The Dragon's War on the Remnant Part 5. Download. Other Sermons In This.

Dagur also heard rumors about Hiccups victory over the Red Death and how he had been training dragons. Dagur threatened Stoick with war if the rumors were true. At first, Stoick was able to convince Dagur that the rumors were false until Dagur demanded the treaty be signed in dragon blood. However, Hiccup, his riders, and their dragons were then able to fool Dagur by orchestrating a dragon attack on them. This forced Dagur and his Berserkers to retreat and to consider the treaty signed. It was here that he also encountered Hiccup and his riders "hunting" dragons. At first, Hiccup cooperated with Dagur until he revealed that Berk does not hunt dragons no more, but ride them now. However, Hiccup was able to defeat Dagur and left the Island with the other riders and their dragons. Dagur rejoined his men and his Captain, Vorg , said he would skin Hiccup for lying to them. However, Dagur said he would do it to both Hiccup and his Night fury. There, they dug at until two fishermen, Bucket and Mulch arrived , believing that they hit an iceberg. However, Vorg and his men attacked, trying to claim to their ship. Unfortunately, Vorg and his men were forced to retreat without the Skrill when Hiccup and riders drove them away. Hiccup and his riders then took the skrill back to Berk, hoping to keep it away from Dagur. Unfortunately, Snotlout and the twins inadvertently thawed the Skrill and it escaped. Hiccup and his riders then searched for it. Dagur and Vorg also searched for the Skrill. However, Dagur was forced to fall back when he was under attack by the riders. The Skrill was then shot down and crashed in the sea. It was then captured by Alvin and his Outcasts. Despite this setback, Dagur continued his obsession with killing Hiccup and capturing Toothless. In truth, he was setting a trap for Hiccup and his riders.

**If you enjoyed this video, please leave a like, favorite, & share. Thanks for watching!* Here is Part 5 of my God of War ( ) Gameplay Walkthrough Lets Play for the PS4.*

Well Spike, I did come here on a mission, and not even you can stop me. Whatever happened to those days Spike? Did you just grow up? Or did you just give up because I was stupid enough not to act earlier? Where would I go? How would you feel then Spike? Knowing why I went missing, and that you could have prevented itâ€¦ Rarity smiled. Remember what they say Spike, be careful what you wish for, for it might not turn out how you want it to. Rarity regained herself, shocked at what just went through her mind. How could I think such things? Spike is my friend, and I should accept his choice. He has the right to want to be just friends. Oh whatever happened Spike? Please accept me when the time comes. That is my wish. Rarity walked over to her bed, and dreamt of how she would live the rest of her life with Spike. He got out of bed and noticed Twilight was still sleeping. He patted her on the back gently, causing her to wake up. I promise not to interrupt, and take your time, I know this is really important for youâ€¦ and for me. He took a few deep breaths. He was now able to say what he would hope he would never have to say ever in his life. Thisâ€¦ may beâ€¦ the lastâ€¦ time we see each other. I wanted to give you a little speech in case that happens. They looked at each other straight in the eyes. Raising me, even when you had no idea how to do it. Raising me properly and helping me succeed and achieve as many goals possible. Loving me like a parent, no matter what I did right or wrong. Giving me advice whenever I sought it. You even protected me whenever I was in danger. They both hugged each other not wanting to let go. A little later, Twilight whispered in his ear. It makes me so happy that I mean that much to you. Ever since I got you as an egg, I knew I was going to raise you as best as I could, and after what you said, it sounds like I accomplished my mission. Spike you were the best student andâ€¦ son I will and have ever had. I always wanted to be there for you Spike, and for the most part I was. When I came back home, I felt horrible for that. I also want to apologize for not being there for you more often, I would often hang out with my friends and not include you. Will you please forgive me Spike? She started to think about the day. This is the day that everything led up to. Today was the day. Rarity decided to get some breakfast and eat it in her room, she had a lot to reflect upon. She hid around the corner not wanting to be seen by Spike. Oh Spike, I know how you feel. If only I had the opportunity to do that with my parents. Rarity grabbed some breakfast and walked back to her room. She enjoyed her breakfast and started to get ready for the events that were about to come. Knowing it would be best to get ready, they both got prepared for the events ahead. Not wasting too much time, they returned to the ground. They got in place in front of the soldiers and were greeted by the princesses. Good luck out there everypony. A lot of chattering, could be heard. They were all thinking the same thing, pray to Celestia that there will be a minimal amount of casualties. They arrived at their destination. They all waitedâ€¦ waited for the adversaries to show up. About twenty minutes later, they could see the dragons coming over the hill on the other side. They were waiting for the dragons to make the first move. A few minutes later, they could hear the dragon king giving a speech. Choose between one or both these songs: We fight to exact our revenge for all the future children we lost. We also fight for the families that lost their egg because some cruel pony thought it would be funny. Celestia waited until they reached the halfway point. She was having trouble keeping up with him, as he was flying a lot faster than she could run. Thankfully he stayed around the same area, so she could keep an eye on him. Rarity in turn started casting stunning spells on the dragons coming from the side. Whereas Spike and Twilight were using what they learned in practice and we doing quite well in the mess they were stuck in. Twilight, wanting to keep the two safe, used a death spell powerful enough to kill a dragon, only when necessary. She would use the stun spell she was told to use otherwise. The Pegasus soldiers would gang up on a dragon and knock him out with their quick agility. When the dragons would land, the earth ponies would take the opportunity to slit their throats, not wanting them to have an advantage over them. The princesses were using their stun spell to help keep things under control and helping to protect the Pegasi. It continued on for quite some time. The dragons were slowly being taken down, but not very easily, there were also a lot of pony casualties. Finally the dragon king joined in and helped in the fight. He started clawing through ponies, giving no mercy. The odds were starting to even again, and possibly the dragons might win. That is, until Twilight noticed where he was. It only took her a few seconds for her to align her horn and cast the spell. A direct hit in the chest. Everypony and dragon watched as the dragon king fell to the ground. Everypony and dragon stopped, the dragons decided to retreat, not having a leader anymore. One stayed behind and spoke. As for the dragon, he had another plan. He looked around and noticed there was a lone white unicorn. He charged his fire breath and threw it in her direction. Rarity was too busy being happy to have seen Spike was alright. Spike turned around and flew towards the others when he noticed the fireball. He flew as fast as possible towards it and yelled to warn the pony. He flew as fast as possible and yelled those words again. She screamed an ear piercing scream. Just as it was about to hit her, Spike flew in front. The fireball missed and hit the next thing in sightâ€¦ Twilight. Twilight fell on the ground, landing hard. The fireball hit her directly in the side of her chest, instantly killing her. Spike looked around and saw her. Song representing what Spike and Rarity are going through. In the corner of his eye, he noticed a familiar white unicorn running towards them. I know how much she meant to you. He threw a fireball distracting the dragon as he came from behind and grabbed him from the neck.

Chapter 4 : The Dragon's War on the Remnant Part 5 |

The Dragon War: Part 3 is a Rare quest and the third one to belong to the first saga ever of AdventureQuest.

It was only Ruffnut. Relaxing her stance, Astrid straightened and lowered her axe. Ruffnut laughed, and strolled up beside her. You can definitely be too careful. Ever since Tuffnut had up and disappeared, Astrid had become his substitute. If Ruffnut needed a partner for anything theft, arson, pranks, etc. She enjoyed spending time with Ruffnut and was glad they were such close friends. But sometimes, she just needed a break from the insanity. But Ruffnut just grinned and continued on. Usually they talk about the boring stuff that comes before the action stuff. At least, it was for Tuffnut who had never slept on a dragon before nor a pleasant dragon to sleep on. It was easy for Hiccup. He just laid back on Toothless and dozed enough to get rest but remained aware enough to flick the tailfin open or closed if Toothless needed him. He was literally flying in his sleep, which Tuffnut had found quite hilarious. He had not found it hilarious when he could only half sleep on Helfire. Tuffnut made both Hiccup and Toothless promise not to breathe a word of how exactly those few nights tailing the Berserkers went. But at last " finally " they stopped at a huge glacier. Thankfully the time of day was dusk so the dragons were able to sneak up close. Not too close, but on top of the same floating glacier that the Berserkers seemed so concerned with. The two humans ordered the dragons to stay back while they crawled forward on their bellies to the edge of the glacier. When they finally reached it Hiccup leaned slightly over the side to get a clear view of the sight below in the waning light. Hiccup shook his head. We have to rescue it and get outta here. The Berserkers outnumbered the four of them a hundred to one at least, but they did have two powerful dragons. They would need to defend a small area to control the flow of Berserkers, preferably the place below them with the Skrill. They could probably do it and hold their own for a little while. Or even remotely tamed. Could we sink the entire glacier!?! Hiccup jumped and gasped, jerking his hand close to him even though the arrow had already landed. Tuffnut followed a bit more slowly on Helfire. He landed between Dagur and the Skrill. Reaching up he unsheathed the sword from his back and growled, "You got lucky. But Hiccup plowed forward. Just know we can end this peacefully and quit this useless fighting. She most definitely did not expect to be up in the rafters. It was way scarier than spinning through the air on the back of an offended Night Fury Okay, maybe not as scary as that, but close. The boards were creaky, and Astrid felt like they were going to crack and drop Astrid and Ruffnut in the middle of the meeting. But Ruffnut was confident in the strength of the rafters and tiptoed across them with perfect balance and ease. Ruffnut stopped halfway across the room and turned around. She laid down on her stomach and gripped the side of the rafter with both hands. Carefully and slowly Astrid copied her so that the two of them had their heads together as they watched the vikings assemble below. They carried on conversations that were too quiet for Astrid to hear. Sure enough, the Chief stepped up and raised his hands and called for silence. When he spoke, his voice reverberated against the walls and filled the whole hall. To his right Gobber leaned relaxed on the edge of the oval fire pit. With the dragon attacks only getting worse and more frequent, Gobber and Stoick had decided to create a band of young, strong vikings who were constantly working together to find more effective ways of killing dragons. Snotlout, as the future chief of the Hooligans, had been chosen to lead them. They could be, but they declined. Snotlout was constantly offering them a "prestigious position" though. Anyway, as leader of their special dragon fighting force, Snotlout was allowed to join the special meetings. Astrid was getting more interested by the second. Everyone around the circle nodded in agreement. Then they both carefully sat up on the rafters. She knew the vikings were doomed. They had no idea what they were up against in the nest. All she could think was, I need to warn Hiccup. Tuffnut was rather impressed by Hiccup. First he made friends with the Monstrous Nightmare he was supposed to kill, then he flew off on it. Then he became a veritable legend in the Barbaric Archipelago with his Night Fury buddy. And now he would charge off to face Berserkers and he was seemingly unafraid of taunting them. All in all Tuffnut wished very much that he had made friends with Hiccup earlier. He was so cool! But back to the situation at hand. Hiccup was facing off the Berserker fleet and Dagur with Toothless. So Tuffnut thought it was best if he and Helfire took care of the Berserkers guarding the Skrill while simultaneously trying to free it from the ice. So show them how awesome you are and make them regret looking down on you, Mighty Dragon! One of them obviously the smartest of the group dropped his ice pick and ran for the row-boat. Two more stood frozen in fear, and the last two the stupidest of the group threw down their picks and drew their axes. Tuffnut just crossed his arms and enjoyed the show. Helfire lunged forward and shot a spurt of fire at the two motionless Vikings. One squeaked and bolted after the smart Berserker. Helfire turned his attention to the two vikings with axes ready and rose up on his hind legs. Towering over the two Berserkers, Helfire glared fiercely down at them. Both of the idiots raised their axes and charged Helfire, identical war cries springing from their lungs. Helfire snorted in derision and hooked one by the back of his vest with his fang and flung him back towards the Skrill. The other viking Helfire snatched up with his claw and tossed him in the air. When the Berserker reached the zenith of his flight, Helfire loosed a well-timed flame and it caught him square in the chest. The Berserker fell to the ground screaming and he, too, dashed after the smart viking. When he saw Helfire turn his gaze onto him the Berserker screamed and ran for his life. Helfire puffed out his chest and looked rather smug to have taught those puny vikings some respect. Tuffnut dashed past the Nightmare to the now unguarded Skrill. The ice had been chipped away enough that only a thin layer of ice separated the Skrill from the rest of the world. And it was blinking. Come over here and melt this ice! Out of great respect for your amazingness please blast this ice with your really hot fire! Tuffnut stayed down as the Skrill burst from the ice and flew straight up into the sky. Shooting to his feet, Tuffnut pointed to the Berserkers who were trying to overwhelm Hiccup and Toothless and shouted to Helfire. The Monstrous Nightmare whirled around and joined Hiccup and Toothless in the fighting, intent on putting these vikings in their proper place beneath him. Satisfied, Tuffnut looked around for the Skrill. Was it even still there? Suddenly a bolt of lightning, thin and weak as it was, struck one of the three Berserker ships in the mast. The wood cracked and burned, falling with a thump on the rest of the ship. Another bolt hit the side of a second ship. The Berserkers shouted orders and tried to see the Skrill to fight back. He saw Dagur grin insanely not like the Thorston grin, but really, actually insane at something past Tuffnut. Tuffnut whirled around to see he Skrill had landed behind him. It had just been unfrozen from a Thor-knows-how-long sleep and done some flying and shooting as soon as it came out. Although, the dragon seemed to be toying with them, going for respect rather than death, but it was working just fine all the same.

Chapter 5 : Prophecies of Nostradamus, Part 5 of 5: World War III

Just when you thought things were as crazy and desperate and messed up they can get - they get worse. Savage Dragon has crossed the line and things will never be the same again.

There is three total to find, and each offers a Dragon Tear so long as you set them free. Spoilers for dragon locations follow! Walkthroughs are not posted on this page to minimize spoilers. This first dragon can be accessed as soon as Kratos makes it to the Lake of Nine. But in order to get to Veithurgard, Kratos needs to open a massive golden gate. Do so by heading to Stone Falls and spin the wheel next to the orange spirit that gives you the Hammer Fall favor. Hop back in the boat and row toward the ruins of Veithurgard. Dock on the shore and take out the enemies that wait on the rocky beach. After you clear the area, climb the cliff to find a shop and a Lore Marker. Continue on, fight some wolves, then hop in another boat. Row up and dock on the right. Fight through the few enemies here. This beast is angry. Exit Theatre Mode Find the three shrines in the area and destroy them in order to free the dragon Otr. Use this guide to find them all. Mid- to late-game spoilers follow! Row north toward the two giant statues of men rowing boats. To their right is a ledge covered by vines and tree sap. Climb the wall and make your way to the large wooden door to find the next dragon. As with the other dragon, break the three shrines to remove the seal on the main anchor that keeps the dragon chained. For a complete walkthrough with detailed information on how to free this dragon, visit The Fire of Reginn walkthrough. The final dragon is in need of your help is in Konunsgard. You can only reach this location after unlocking the Hail to the King favor.

Chapter 6 : God of War Dragons - Where to Find Dragon Tears - God of War () Wiki Guide - IGN

After Twilight and her friends visited prehistoric Earth, it's time for the gang of 7 plus Alie to visit calendrierdelascience.com when there most deadly enemy accidentally ends up in Equestria as well then both gangs would have play part in the greatest war Equestria has ever seen.

For as in any civilization, when natural disasters occur, this is more prominent than military conquest. The ultra-secret weapons that are brought forth will shock and stun the world. The Antichrist will not hesitate to use bacteriological warfare, as well as conventional warfare, causing hunger, fire and plagues. The causative organisms will be more virulent than ever before and, hence, increasingly lethal. When the Antichrist is taking over Europe, nuclear weapons will wreak havoc like lightning strikes, and from them a "milky rain" will occur. Weapons currently beyond our imagination will wreak unparalleled devastation. Corpses will litter the landscape. The very earth will "cry out in pain. Entire dynasties will be wiped out. Before the Antichrist takes over a place, he will rain down death and destruction so that he can seize without opposition. He will travel far from his resting place in doing this. The aggressor will have broken a promise not to use nuclear weapons in warfare. Naval fleets kept in the area by other powers will be scattered in ruins from the violence of the blast. Radioactive fallout will have adverse effects on people, animals, and weather; and erupting volcanoes will turn the water of that part of the ocean a muddy red color. Because of this, bodies will appear to float in blood. Because of the blasts and earth changes, rivers will change their course, and political boundary lines based on them will be redrawn. He will get involved with the conflict as a way of trying to stimulate the economy from a depression. Mediterranean campaign and the battles of Gibraltar The Antichrist, during the Mediterranean campaign, will take over Monaco as a crucial strategic position to advancing toward Italy and southern Europe. The successor to Prince Ranier, apparently one of his sons, will be imprisoned after the takeover as an obstacle. The Rock of Gibraltar will be a strategic position, captured and retaken three times by various forces. Marines on naval battlecarriers will confront the Antichrist when he attempts to invade Europe in the area of Crete and Thessaly, but they will be outgunned and have to retreat, probably to Gibraltar. In the very fierce and bloody battle, the Antichrist will have to transfer many of his troops to a supply ship after a fighting ship is sunk. One that will continue to hold however is the alliance between France and the U. A force aligned with the Antichrist will send a bomb aimed at New York City. It will be spotted and tracked as it approaches. As proof of their loyalty, the French will be asked to retaliate, which they will do with several bombs and weapons. The response will be immediate. The American leader will use a hotline to communicate to the French Marshal, who will launch self-propelled bombs with "tongues of fire" against the aggressor. In this war, some of the bombs will hit New York and some will be diverted. The bomb referred to here will be prematurely detonated along the flightpath, saving the city. Many human lives will be spent when planes flying around the bomb, trying to divert or destroy it, are blown up. Bacteriological warfare strikes New York and London New York and in London will be hit with scourges from bacteriological warfare, a deadly "bug," either bacterial or viral or some type of disease-causing organism. It will be released into the atmosphere to affect the populations of New York and London. Because of separation and different gene pools, spontaneous mutations in the organisms will affect the two populations in different ways. It will appear to be two different diseases, even though it will have been caused by the same organism. As a result of this plague, the metropolitan infrastructures will break down. The people near but outside the cities will panic and shun the cities and refuse to deliver available food, effectively putting them into quarantine. The city dwellers will starve to death in droves. People will loot and raid stores, and soldiers will stab them off at bayonet point. The government will try to distribute the remaining food evenly, but the people will panic and call upon God to relieve them from their misery. Antichrist conquers Europe The Antichrist will take over Europe and begin to toy with the idea of establishing some kind of dynasty. Because of his background, he will be obsessed with power and attracted to the way that a ruling family line can have a major effect on the flow of history, manipulating society over a long span of time through familial line, far beyond the influence of a single individual. But his plans will not materialize because he will be overthrown by Ogmios, and his monstrosities will be counterbalanced with positive forces to heal the earth, directed by the Great Genius. The Antichrist invades Britain In his European campaign, the Antichrist will attempt to overtake Britain, particularly to seize its naval forces for further advances. England will resist and initially will fend off the advance, with support from the U. However, it is likely that the Antichrist eventually will overcome England, and the more passionate members of the underground will flee to Ireland and Scotland. The Antichrist will not succeed in overtaking the entire island. Northern England, Scotland, and Ireland will not succumb, possibly aiding the reunification of Ireland to fight the Antichrist. Patriotic and stubborn Irish and Scottish spirit will play a favorable role in turning the tide. The British prince, a member of the English royal house, will be eager to lead his troops into battle to defend his own and neighboring countries that have treaties with Britain. He will be outflanked and will have to retreat in disgrace. The crucial meeting on the naval carrier During WWIII and the great turmoil, an airplane will come in for a landing on the deck of an aircraft carrier. It will be from a nation foreign to the country that owns the carrier. The balance of political powers of the two sides involved will be very complex and delicate. The plane will be from a power "slightly more aligned to the other side," although still basically neutral. But to have any kind of contact with the country that owns the carrier will have severe political repercussions relative to the war, so the generals of the carrier will be reluctant to give permission to the plane to land. The plane will carry an important political or military leader, and an important emissary who needs to deliver important documents and messages. The situation will be very fragile and volatile. Some countries will have excesses of food, such as bushels of wheat, but the price will be so out of proportion that no one will be able to buy it. In countries where there is famine, people will resort to cannibalism to stay alive. The wheat in other countries will be stored in silos and rot because they cannot get rid of it and cannot sell it. The price of the wheat will be enormous, partly because it will be very dangerous to deliver or ship it anywhere during wartime. A very great drought will occur in the European continent during the time of the Antichrist. Fish will die as seas, rivers, and lakes boil. The Antichrist will be behind it. This event will not be the same but will be related to the boiling fish at the Dark Point. Two sites will be in distress from "fire in the sky". The extremes in weather during the time of the Antichrist will affect a battle. Extreme rain and hail will take by surprise two armies lined up to do battle. As an alternative plan to confrontation, they will try to fly planes above the clouds to drop bombs on the opposing forces, "fire and stones falling from the sky. The cataclysmic earthquake will trigger other earthquakes that will destroy large land areas. Famine and fighting will set in. Countries will fight with each other over surplus food; India and China will march to seize the corn and wheat fields of Russia and eastern Europe. Communications will break down. Religious leaders will lose credibility because of their inability to explain the earth changes. The climactic changes, caused by the detonation of the terrible weapons, will cause famines in scattered areas, and conditions will get worse. People will become virtually insane with the persistent lack of food, and will eat things like tree roots, and even seize newborn infants. The supreme commander will misuse some technology that has not yet been developed, causing his downfall. Russia breaks free of the Antichrist The Antichrist will seem all powerful and all conquering, and the situation will appear hopeless. But "his star will be falling" and his power will crack in crucial places. In particular, even though the Antichrist will have taken over all of Asia, after a period he no longer will be able to control Russia. Russia will break free and unite with the unconquered countries. The alliance will strike terror into the Antichrist, who will glimpse the beginning of the end and his potential failure. He will choose another field commander to continue his campaign, but the effort will fail. Rhodes and Byzantium, the site of his regional headquarters, will be engaged in the most intense fighting. The "northern pole alliance" will diminish his power by breaking down his chain of command, communication capabilities, etc. They will begin to lose some battles and see their power is not forever. The Antichrist will have taken over a large part of the world and will become complacent. Ogmios confronts the Antichrist, fate of world in balance A leader figuratively referred to as "Ogmios" will confront the Antichrist in battle. The outcome will be questionable for some time. During the time the Antichrist is in power, there will be constant skirmishes and battles between his barbarian forces and those still free of his tyrannical rule. Ogmios eventually will emerge triumphantly victorious over the Antichrist, but it will be a long, gradual, arduous struggle. Antichrist eventually dethroned The Antichrist will rule for "less than the revolution of Saturn," far less than the grand span of time he envisions. His reign will be temporary, because his power will be like building a fire with grass; it burns very hotly but quickly. His effect on history and his "time in the limelight" will be limited.

Chapter 7 : Dragon Wars: D-War () - IMDb

Dragon War Costs (hero vs dragon) - Part 2 July 8, July 8, The first thing we looked at when deciding between leveling up the Hero vs Leveling up the Dragon were the actual stats each had.

Dragon War - Part 1: I have regained a bit of the old writing spirit and have managed to finally get this darn thing done. As usual, please report any errors, typos, etc. Update to designs and previous chapters commencing! Princess Celestia sent me a letter about it just after the smoke started forming. Zoe cast another look skywards. Even before the smoke had started forming, the ponies had awoken to find Spyro where he was now: A dark underlying growl rumbled from between his bared teeth, crackling flames licking the sides of his jaws. The entire town was giving him a very wide berth; even the buildings seem to be leaning away from the dragon out of fear of facing his fiery anger. Inside the library, Spike suddenly heaved, cheeks bulging green, before he jumped to his feet and bolted for the nearest bathroom. Thankfully, Elora shook her head. She then glared at the mountain herself. Smoke blotting out the sun. Roars that purge the very souls from your bodies. Miles upon miles of scorched earth and blackened bones as far as the eyes can see. She held it out to Twilight. By the time everyone had gathered everything they needed for the journey they would be embarking on, the entire sky above Ponyville had been filled with a thick layer of smog, and the ash was falling so thickly it resembled snow. Tail swishing back and forth absentmindedly, Spyro waited with a surprising level of patience as he watched the others gather around, filling bags and pouches with food, potions, equipment, and other such supplies. As a dragon himself, he was the only one unaffected from inhaling ash crystals and therefore the only one not wearing a mask over his snout, allowing him to impatiently blow steady plumes of smoke from his nostrils. All the non-ponies in the area turned, with varying reaction, to see Twilight pacing back and forth in front of her friends, nose-deep in a large map she held in her magic and with saddlebags strapped around her barrel. No one speaks french here. To go to the mountain and convince him to leave! What was with this Celestia and sending the unqualified to do all the dangerous work?! Twilight and the girls were only teenagers! Young adults at best! And Twilight herself was the only one who had any training in anything related to dangerous magic, and that in itself was hardly qualified for dealing with dragons of all creatures. Certainly there was someone more qualified for this mission than a bunch of civilians?! His fairy seemed to share his feelings. She opened one eye to fix a searing glare at the now sweating unicorn. Zoe fluttered there for a moment, leaning back in exhaustion while given the loudest, longest, most infuriated groan Spyro had ever seen her give in her entire life and that was saying something. Twilight beamed like the sun itself. The girls and I can help you wi-! The echoes continued on long into the distance, leaving all six ponies staring at the fairy in wide-eyed, stiff-legged silence except Fluttershy, whose legs were shaking quite badly. Once she had their undivided attention, she fluttered down and landed in front of them, pacing like a military sergeant. The most powerful and dangerous single creature in the entire universe!! And make no mistake: But since you are, I want you to listen and listen good! Pinkie, what the hell are you doing! Do you at least have supplies this time around? The fate of your town is at stake here, and potentially much more if even one little thing goes wrong. Therefore I cannot express this enough either: You will not do a thing. You will all stay a good distance back and focus on pretending to be lifeless rocks and let those with true knowledge and true experience handle this. B-B-But we can h-help! Her way with wild animals could be a big help handling a-! And for her efforts, she had her own personal confidence and eagerness immediately shattered on the spot as she found herself face to face with the very angry and very murderous eyes of the very fairy who raised Spyro the Dragon himself. The Captain of the Royal Guard - Unicorn Division was currently sitting on the cot in his personal tent, adjusting the last straps of his royal armor while overlooking a strategic map of Ponyville and surrounding areas. In the same town his sister was currently living in. The recent turn of events had been nothing but trouble on his mind and emotions ever since it started just a week or so ago: Shining Armor himself had even asked Cadence about it, but she assured him that where Celestia had gone and why the sun was still down was a matter of utmost importance, and that she would be back soon enough. And she was right: First, the bloodied and beaten form on the long-lost Princess Luna, the mare claimed by Nightmare

Moon, draped over her shoulders. By the time Raven was done, the stallion was ready to commit regicide: What the Tartarus was Celestia thinking, sending Twily, a mere magic student barely old enough to be considered a mare, and a few mares her age into the Everfree Forest to defeat the Nightmare Moon?! Destined Element of Harmony bearer or not something that he felt both immense pride and blood-freezing fear over, his baby sister was sent, by Princess Celestia no less, to fight against the Queen of Nightmares herself?! This was a scenario everypony did not see coming, and one that left many in Canterlot Castle uneasy. The former alone was enough to convince the captain of the royal guard that this dragon was an exception of his kind, and the latter put the unicorn in an eternal debt of gratitude. Spyro protected his sister and saved all of Equestria from a terrible threat, and that alone was good enough in his book. Many expected the Alicorn of the Sun to be overcome with happiness: It was beyond the best-case scenario; it was an outright fairytale ending come true! And yet, in light of all this fortune, all Celestia had shown since returning from the forest was disgust. It was clear to everyone who looked into her eyes: Why did she despise him so? Was it because of the condition Luna returned in? Yes, that was a unfortunate result, but understandable: Luna had been possessed by a nightmare at the time; Spyro was left with no choice but to fight her, and given how dragons fought, wounds were unavoidable. Thus here he was: And somehow, he found himself doubting that was going to be enough. Suddenly, just as he had finished fastening the last buckle to his chest-plate, a loud blaring siren sounded across the camp; he looked up in surprise, the sound of stampeding ponies and barking orders coming from all directions around his tent. The alarm had been sounded, and everypony was scrambling to prepare for an attack. He barely had time to hop off his cot when the flap to his tent was all but ripped off as a panicked private barged inside, looking as if Tirek himself was on his tail. Behind them stood three lines of arcane archers, their horns fired up with numerous offensive spells, readying to shoot down anything that would try to fly or jump over the barricade. And Shining Armor took center field, standing on the path in front of the wall, magical grip lingering on his sheathed sword; his brow furrowed as the dust cloud grew ever closer, mentally preparing himself for whatever would come. With dragons, you could never be fully prepared. Celestia would not be happy to hear about that. And flying about it all, wings blazing red like the flames of a phoenix in the light of the sun, was the very focus of the sheer, unadulterated chaos that had taken Equestria by surprise and by storm: Spyro the Dragon himself. Shining Armor braced himself, unsheathing his sword partially in preparation for a fight. The dragon remained silent as the grave, looking down upon Shining Armor with a displeased glare, while the rest of his companions, Equestrian and otherwise, came to a running stop behind him. The ponies in the group looked confused, even surprised to see them, while the non-ponies were giving him and the wall of shields similar looks of disapproval. So this was it: Not at all what he was expecting of a dragon strong enough to defeat Nightmare Moon. They were eyes as sharp as swords and blazed with a power and savagery like fire; they were eyes that burned with the strength, ferocity, and sheer unbreakable willpower of a world destroyer. Shining Armor braced himself, readying himself for combat, as he began to draw his sword. All eyes were on her immediately, and the growing tension between captain and dragon was broken just as quickly. Despite his surprise, he returned the hug, quickly realizing that the last time he saw her she had been riding off to face Nightmare Moon herself. Twilight pulled herself away from the hug, looking up in confusion. Boar Bacon Buddies From France? Big Bang Buffalo Fire Fighters. Bianca rolled her eyes. Big Brother Best Friends Forever. Y-Yes, right; a question for another time, then. The purple unicorn turned to her brother in confusion. You do realize you guys are heading for a newly-built dragon nest, right? Why do you think the first dragon is on his way there for? And I, Captain of the Royal Unicorn Guard, have been instructed by her highness to see that order kept, even if I must force you back to Ponyville myself. Shining Armor braced himself for the eruption to follow, steeling his nerve and heart; there would be nothing to make him back down. Nothing that would make him break. So why are you morons here stopping Spyro from saving Equestria?

Chapter 8 : The Dragon War | Elder Scrolls | FANDOM powered by Wikia

It continued on for quite some time. The dragons were slowly being taken down, but not very easily, there were also a lot of pony casualties. Finally the dragon king joined in and helped in the fight. "Alright, let's turn the odds around." The dragon king started throwing balls of fire all directions, causing a lot of the ponies to quickly dodge.

Prelude[ edit ] During planning stages, the operation was known as "Anvil", to complement Operation Sledgehammer , at that time the code name for the invasion of Normandy. Subsequently, both plans were renamed. Army Chief of Staff. It was supported by Joseph Stalin at the Tehran Conference in late In discussions with Franklin D. Roosevelt , Stalin advocated for the operation as an inherent part of Overlord, preferring to have the Allies in the far west instead of at an alternative landing in the Balkans , which he considered to be in his zone of influence. The American military leadership and its British counterparts disagreed on the operation. Winston Churchill argued against it on the grounds that it diverted military resources that were better deployed for Allied operations in Italy. Instead, he favored an invasion of the oil-producing regions of the Balkans. A dual landing was soon recognized as impossible to conduct with the forces available. The expansion of Overlord from a three- to a five-division front required many additional LSTs , which would have been needed for Anvil. Another Allied amphibious landing, in Italy at Anzio , had gone badly. All of these resulted in the postponing of Anvil by the Allies. The Normandy ports had insufficient capacity to handle Allied supply needs and French generals under Charles de Gaulle pressed for a direct attack on southern France with participation of French troops. These factors led to a reconsideration of the plan. Then on August 4, Churchill proposed that Dragoon less than two weeks away should be switched to the coast of Brittany. Eisenhower, supported by Roosevelt, who with his election campaign four months away opposed diverting large forces to the Balkans, stood firm on the agreed plan despite long harangues from Churchill on August 5 and 9. They chose a location with no high ground controlled by the Wehrmacht , conditions that had led to heavy casualties after the initial landings on one of the beaches at Normandy. The choice for the disembarkation site was an area on the Var coast east of Toulon. A preliminary air campaign was planned to isolate the battlefield and cut the Germans off from reinforcement by destroying several key bridges. A large airborne landing was also planned in the center of the landing zone to quickly seize the high ground overlooking the beaches. Parallel to the invasion, several commando units were to take control of the islands off the coast. Their flanks were to be protected by French, American, and Canadian commando units. Within 24 hours, 50,000 troops and 6,000 vehicles were to be disembarked. The airborne landings would concentrate in an area near Draguignan and Le Muy , with the aim of taking these towns to prevent German counterattacks against the beaches. Given the advancing Allied forces in northern France, the Germans deemed a realistic defense in the south impossible. Blaskowitz was quite aware that with his scattered forces, any serious Allied landing attempt would be impossible to ward off. He planned to withdraw in secret, to include demolishing the ports, and to proceed in an orderly manner, covered by the 11th Panzer Division. He intended to establish a new defense line at Dijon in central France. The French Resistance played a major role in the fighting. As the Allies advanced into France, the Resistance evolved from a guerilla fighting force to a semiorganized army called French Forces of the Interior. The FFI would tie down German troops by sabotaging bridges and communication lines, seizing important traffic hubs and directly attacking isolated German forces. The majority of them were stationed on Corsica and Sardinia. The tactical bombers and fighters had to support the landings directly, while the strategic element had to bomb German targets deep into France. The strategic bombing started well before the landing, and targeted airports, traffic hubs, railroads, coastal defenses, and communication lines. As southern France had never been important to German planning, their forces there had been stripped of nearly all their valuable units and equipment over the course of the war. The remaining 11 divisions were understrength and only one panzer division was left, the 11th. Generally, the troops of the German divisions were only second- and third-rate. This meant that over the course of the war, the divisions were thinned out and soldiers were replaced with wounded old veterans and Volksdeutsche from Poland and Czechoslovakia. Numerous units were also replaced by Ostlegionen and Ostbataillone. These units were volunteers from Eastern Europe, mainly the Soviet Union, and had a generally low fighting morale. The equipment of those troops was in poor shape, consisting of old weapons from various nations, with French, Polish, Soviet, Italian, and Czech guns, artillery, and mortars. Four of the German divisions were designated as "static", which meant that they were stripped of all of their mobile capabilities and unable to move from their positions. The Luftwaffe, with aircraft, and the Kriegsmarine, with 45 small ships, played a negligible role in the operation. After the Fall of France, the Vichy French regime greatly improved the coastal defenses to appease the Germans. Along the coast, about 75 coastal guns of heavy and medium caliber were placed. After their military take-over in November, the Germans improved the coastal defense further by repairing damaged and outdated turrets, as well as moving in additional guns.

Chapter 9 : Dragon War Costs (hero vs dragon) - Part 2 - Gowcraft - Game of War Help, Guides, and Info

Fight other players with fierce dragons breed for war and destruction. Play War Dragons on PC and Mac to experience 3D battles in a far away land of might and magic. War Dragons gives you more than different dragons to breed, train, and send into the heat of battle. Each dragon has it's own unique personality, abilities, and class rankings.

Plot This section requires expansion. Just as Hiccup is about to be shot at by a wild Singetail , someone pulls him out of the way and drags him to a cave. Spitelout even has names for all the wild ones living on the island, and the worst of them all is fighting Toothless. Creating a diversion, the men manage to trap the wild dragon in a net trap. Hiccup looks forward to studying it while Spitelout would rather leave for home, saying revenge was all he really wanted. Hiccup convinces him to stay just in time to fight off other wild Singetails that are coming to save the trapped one. And Hiccup finally comes up with an idea of how to fight the Flyers without hurting the dragons. Meanwhile back in Berk , Stoick is looking for Hiccup but Astrid tells him how he flew off alone earlier. So he decides to talk to her about his plan instead. Tuffnut is getting more and more annoyed at Throk waiting on Ruffnut hand and foot, literally. At the same time, the Dragon Hunters and Flyers have completely taken over the Edge, and Viggo has retrieved the Dragon Eye in one piece. So the Flyers take to the sky to fight them off. Meanwhile back at Berk Hiccup finds Gustav there alone, who gives him the message from his father. The two then fly off to help. They fly past the commotion however, and to a nearby island where Spitelout and the trapped Singetail are waiting. When the Singetail lets out a cry of distress, the Flyer Singetails respond, leading them away from the Edge, and into the net traps Spitelout had set up. With the help of Spitelout, Hiccup, and Gustav, all the Singetails are freed from their Flyers but one, and with no traps left, Hiccup makes the ultimate decision to shoot to kill. When that dragon is set free, Astrid chases down Krogan and his Singetail , appearing to be the last dragon and Flyer combo. When the Riders take back their Edge, they and Stoick congratulate themselves for their victory in the clubhouse, and discuss what their next move will be now that they know Viggo and the Dragon Eye survived. Hiccup then reveals the Dragon Eye he had been working on, which is nearly finished. Trivia The dragon trap Spitelout used was called "The Jorgensen Yak Master" in the episode " Turn and Burn ", but Spitelout calls it the "Snaptrapper" in this one, which elsewhere in the franchise is actually a species of dragon. The events of "Turn and Burn" are referenced when Spitelout tells Hiccup why he needs to get revenge on the Singetails.