Choir is available for K-8, but I basically only have people signed up from K I am looking for good elementary choral music, as well as techniques and methods best applicable to elementary choirs. The music can be either secular or sacred. Thanks in advance for the help. September 6, at 1: Look at the Sheet Music Plus site for 2 part or unison music. You can often view the first page of music there and sometimes an MP3 recording. Find a book a folk music online and have students sing the unison melodies and even write in a second part where appropriate. Good luck in this endeavor. Repertoire for these students should be kept to an octave or less and be fun. You should emphasize beginning singing technique "breathing, standing still hard for this age. Warm-ups should be fun: For a brain exercise we occasionally do numbers: These are of course pitches in the scale. You could also do this in solfege, if that is easier or clearer for your kids. After that we do roller coasters: I have them watch my hand; sometimes I start from the top. Before vocal warm-ups we stretch: October 10, at 4: Ode To Peace " arr. Henry Leck Jibuli, Jibuli " Tanzanian folk song, arr. Ruth Elaine Schram Song of the River " arr. Spevacek Sansa Kroma " Ghanian folksong arr. Brymer Cameroon " Dorothy Masuka, arr. Micheal Scott Supercalifragilisticexpialidocious " arr. Cristi Cary Miller Freedom Train " arr. Jill Gallina Rounds Around the World " arr. Music Alone Shall Live " arr. Donald Moore Over the Rainbow " arr. John Higgins basically unison arr. Scales and Arpeggios " arr. Also! I really trust most of the arrangers of the pieces listed above. In addition, a good book of rounds and canons, such as Rounds for Singing and Teaching, is a good resource to have" rounds can be turned into concert pieces and they work well both unaccompanied or with a simple piano or Orff accompaniment. The book is a little pricy, but worth it. If you spend more than minutes or so on one piece, the kids start to get antsy! best to work on a little bit and get that secure, then move onto something else and come back to the first piece the next time. Good luck and have fun!
