A place that's known. [Michael Pearson] -- Michael Pearson is a seeker of places, and his avenue to them is his own imagination. His quests, intense and introspective, take him to real terrains.

Tirana , capital of Albania There is no rule that is used all over the world to decide why some places are called "city" and other places are called "town". Some things that make a city are: Although many cities today have only been around for tens or hundreds of years, there are a few which have been so for thousands of years. Cities can have millions of people living in and around them. A centre where business and government takes place. The first case is often described as the financial capital , such as Frankfurt in Germany. The second case is true for different levels of government, whether they are local or part of a larger region for example, Atlanta , Georgia , or an entire country for example, Washington, D. Cities which contain the government of the region it is in are called capitals. Almost every country has its own capital. Special powers called town privileges which have been given by the government of the country , or its ruler. This was done especially in Europe during the Middle Ages. Having a cathedral or a university. This rule is found in the United Kingdom. The smallest "cathedral cities" are St. In American English, people often call all places where many people live cities. This picture shows the "City of London". The sizes of cities can be very different. This depends on the type of city that it is. Cities that were built hundreds of years ago and which have not changed much, are very much smaller than modern cities. There are two main reasons. One reason is that old cities often have a city wall, and most of the city is inside it. Another important reason is that the streets in old cities are often narrow. If the city got too big, it was hard for a cart carrying food to get to the market place. People in cities need food, and the food always has to come from outside the city. Cities that were on a river like London could grow much bigger than cities that were on a mountain like Sienna in Italy , because the river made a transport route for carrying food and other goods , as well as for transporting people. London has been changing continually for hundreds of years, while Siena, which was a very important city in the s has changed very little in years. Modern cities with modern transport systems can grow very large, because the streets are wide enough for cars, buses and trucks, and there are often railway lines as well. In the US, the word city is often used for towns that are not very big. When the first European people went to America, they gave the name "city" to new places. They hoped the places would be great cities in the future. For example, Salt Lake City was the name given to a village of people. Now, years later, it really is a big city. In modern times many cities have grown bigger and bigger. The whole area is often called a " metropolis " and can sometimes includes several small ancient towns and villages. The part that is officially known as the "City of London" only takes up one square mile. The rest is known as "Greater London". Many other cities have grown in the same way. These giant cities can be exciting places to live, and many people can find good jobs there, but modern cities also have many problems. Many people cannot find jobs in the cities and have to get money by begging or by crime. Cars , factories, and waste create a lot of pollution that makes people sick. Urban History is history of civilization. The first cities were made in ancient times, as soon as people began to create civilization. Benares in northern India is one among the ancient cities which has a history of more years. In Europe , in the Middle Ages , being a city was a special privilege , granted by nobility. Cities that fall into this category, usually had or still have city walls. The people who lived in the city were privileged over those who did not. In the United Kingdom , a city is a town which people have always called a city, or which has got the name "city" status by royal charter a special paper from the king or queen. Cities usually get this because they have a special number of people or are important. In the past, cities got that name if they had a cathedral or a university. Cities that became cities because of their university generally grow because more people move there to be educated at the university colleges. The university cities of Oxford and Cambridge are famous throughout the world. The largest city is Shanghai, while the fastest growing is Dubai. The smallest city in the UK is Wells. The capital of the Malaysian province of Kuala. The capital is Kuala Lampar. These cities have more than 10 million people:

Contents [show] About The town is described as a "dump" and is also referred to as a "craphole" by Red. It has been said that it has no movie theatres or public pools of their own since the town is said to be small, although this is sometimes contradicted by other occurrences, such as the town having its own mall, library, courtyard, hotel and a motel , police and fire department and a police academy. Most of them have stayed with them at least once; Hyde stayed for most of the series after his mother skipped town and he was living on his own. She then went to stay with Donna. Bob as well needed some place to stay when Midge kicked him out. Donna would also come and spend the night with Eric in his bed. Most of the scenes were shot in the basement, and most "circle" scenes were shot there as well. The set is very different from how the actual house is supposed to be. The way the actual house is set up is the Pinciotti house on the right of the driveway, you either go in through the sliding doors to the kitchen or you can take a left from the porch to go down the steps to the basement. You can also take it to the front door and on the the porch, which, if you take a left, goes straight to the driveway. The name of the street it faces is never given, however the house number on the street is There is a piano, flammable curtains, white couch, glass windows, vases, and expensive items. Only the front porch is seen and a bit of the interior of the house. But due to Kelso getting kicked off the police force, he takes the job as a security job at a Playboy club in Chicago. Jackie then moves in with Fez and realizes she has feelings for him. One of the rooms was tricked away from Kelso by Fez making Kelso believe the "best" room had evil spirits in it. The landlord, Fenton , lives below them. So, red goes awry with his mischief, and makes a big mess in their apartment. While Jackie was living with Fez, one day she was going to relax at home and take a bath. All the major characters attended this high school, except for Donna after she leaves to go to Our Lady Of Perpetual Sorrow for senior year. Some fans assume that the high school is located at So. There are not a lot of episodes that take place at PPHS, but there are a few members of the faculty that are mentioned, or have appeared on the show, including the guidance counselor Mr. Old Maine A grammar school that the gang attended until it was burned down by arson. It was said to be burned down by Hyde, but he claimed that he was out of town that week. The gang then visited there on the episode "Halloween. Kelso lied about his age because he failed the 1st grade because he said he refused to write in cursive; "That stuff is hard! He was also predicted that he would be the smartest man -- in his cell block; Eric was the one that smashed the diorama and blamed Hyde; causing Hyde to develop his bad reputation and be labeled as a "bad seed. Kelso attended the Academy to become a cop, though he temporarily transferred to an academy in Waukegan, Illinois after he accidentally burned down the one in Point Place during a flare gun practice gone awry. Annoyed with his sudden obedience of the law, they shaved his mustache to make him look like Adolf Hitler. Businesses The Auto Parts Plant An unseen, unnamed plant where Red works in the beginning of the series, but later closes. Afterwards, Red is laid off. Both Red and Kitty went on dates on Friday nights there during their courtship. While Kitty became attached to the small-town charm of Fatso the Clown, Red believed they were just there to eat burgers. Fatso the Clown is stolen by the gang in the eighth season and is summarily destroyed accidentally by Fez. The restaurant was once owned by Jack Burkhart , before he went to prison for bribery. While the pilot depicted it as being a toned-down version of a cowboy bar, subsequent episodes presented it as a s-style soda fountain. Earlier episodes depicted it as containing a small pinball arcade primarily featuring the Williams pinball game "Travel Time", . The Hub also had fake wood paneling and what appears to be a large peace sign painted on the wall behind the jukebox. As the series progressed and video games rose in popularity, the machines were removed and replaced by a Space Invaders cabinet a change the manager made after Fez told him that kids like space invaders better , and the Hub was painted, replacing the wood with a simple white wall. The Hub is a normal hangout for the gang, and is spotted somewhere in the location of an alley, seeing as if you look out the front glass window, there is a building adjacent from its position. The Hub also has a policy: It is the only store open on Christmas Eve, when Kelso comes looking for a Christmas present for Jackie and ends up playing Pong with Red, seeing how Red is so bored. Then, Price-Mart comes to town and Bob cannot compete with it, as it runs him out of business, and Bob throws a huge barbeque in honor of him wanting to be a big shot before everyone finds out it closes. Ironically, this is the only time Red drinks with them here the coworkers are presumably hated by Red but are friends with each other and apparently hang out and eat here. Red also takes Eric there for a drink after Eric and Donna break up. The town hippie, Leo, is the owner, and his assistant is Steven Hyde. The Photohut is painted blue on the outside, and in. It is filled with racks of cameras, film, light bulbs, etc. Fez once worked there, thinking that he was in control of the Photohut, making Hyde and Leo wear sweatshirts that read "The Fotohut is Phabulous. When Leo disappeared in a Season 5 episode Tommy Chong was actually arrested for selling illegal substances, Steven, Jackie, Kelso, and Fez found that everything in the Photohut was missing. The Church has no central religion, seeing as it has no priest though it did have the youth pastor, Pastor Dave, and no Church iconography. Though it is attended by Bob and Midge Pinciotti; established Catholics. It is also where they hold the Christmas Pageant, where Eric and his friends came together to make the Nativity Story. It was really funny! Red is an assistant manager, and Eric is a stockboy. Red fires Eric after Eric admits he and Donna are engaged, and Red quits after he suffers the heart attack on the finale of Season 5. In the season 4 episode, "Forgotten Son", Red is hired to make a training film for all future stock boys, and Kelso was to play the stock boy. However, he proved to be quite unproductive, having a different approach at the film, as he wanted to do something along the lines of "Grease. Kelso apparently vandalized the clown statue. Point Place Public Library Brooke, the girl Kelso got pregnant at a Molly Hatchet concert, works there, dedicating herself to the books. The gang can be seen here, but mostly Kelso, wanting to get close to Brooke and the baby. Hyde, Kelso, Eric, and Fez all thought it was a just a parking lot for drinking beer in and a wall for leaning against and for Fez, peeing. The library has a whole assortment of books, including every issue of Playboy. Eric once wanted to check out some Playboy and wanted a guy to check it out for him, but instead got Brooke, who refused to let him take them. She told him "to go out, buy some flowers, and thank God an actual live woman lets you touch her. And for your information, the secret treasure is hidden inside the grandfather clock! Ah, what a loser. There is a whole rack of tapes behind the counter, and has a back room, but little is known about it. As said by Jackie, she owns a record store, since she was the girlfriend of Hyde, in which he replied, "No, I own a record store. Eric vandalized it before knowing Red bought it, thinking it was a fun prank by spray painting out "ler" on the word "muffler" so that the sign would read "Nobody Likes a Loud Muff". The title is ironic, seeing as Eric never worked at the Muffler Shop, only visited with Kitty, though Red had offered Hyde a job there. His shop got more attention than ever, and even Donna saw Bob there buying a calendar. The shop ideally closes down in the eight season, Red selling it to a big chain of muffler shops, then retires. The Sleepytown Lodge A nearby lodge that is just "three puke-holes" away from the Hub. The Starlight Motel A motel Red and Kitty went to on their wedding night and on their anniversary 25 years later. This is the place where elderly men, including Red and, twice, Steven Hyde hang out and hide from their wives. It is also known for having a sauna, where Hyde gets uncomfortable when the old men open their robes. The Truck Stop At the edge of town. Eric ends up there while filming his movie. He finds Leo when he gets out on the side of the road. Holiday Hotel A hotel in Point Place where the high school job fair takes place. It is here that Kelso gets involved with the Point Place Police Academy during the job fair and in the interim takes a job as a bus boy for the hotel. Eric is in need of cash to support his family and make money to marry Donna and wins the title of waiter in a competition against Kelso. Nurses conventions and weddings are frequently held at the Holiday Hotel. Presumably based on Holiday Inn. The jewelry store is where the character Fenton is introduced, and it is mentioned he worked at the lingerie store before that. There is also a bridal store where Jackie goes every week to try on wedding dresses. Midge thinks the mall is a great place to wear White Shoulders perfume. Le Motel Donna and Eric rented a room here once, but she got too drunk off the mini-bar in the room, that she began to be loud, and the person in the neighboring room hit the wall to signal for them to be quiet. It ends up being a huge mess. This French motel is also where Casey Kelso takes Donna. During which, Eric is worried and thinks that Casey and Donna are going to, "do it". Point Place Hospital The town hospital where some of the major characters are sent for suffered injuries. Kelso is sent there after an allergic reaction to eggs he drinks raw eggs to try and impress Jackie. Hyde is sent there after accidentally being pushed off the water tower by Donna. Red is sent there after his heart attack at the end of season 5. Leo is sent there after a car accident where Fez drives into some crates which fall on top of Leo. Kitty Forman, in the beginning of the series, works at the hospital, and later quits. She soon wishes to go back and works there throughout the rest of the series.

Chapter 4 : Oak Ridge Boys - I Know Lyrics | MetroLyrics

In fact, some of the most beautiful places it in the world are lesser known and lesser talked about. Here, we've put together a list of 19 incredibly gorgeous spots in the world, most of which are off the beaten path.

But some places are famous for one specific food -- something you can only authentically eat in that one place. The list is completely delicious. Check out the first 25 foods below, then click over to AskMen for the rest! Tacos -- Austin, Texas Cheap, nutritious and delicious, tacos have long been a staple of Mexican cuisine, and thanks to their proximity to the border, those culinary delights have made their way north, in a big way. Food trucks have become a way of life there, servicing students, tourists and the late-late-night dining crowd. Philly Cheesesteak -- Philadelphia, Pennsylvania The exact provenance of this sandwich shop staple is hotly contested, but few doubt that it had its roots in Philadelphia, nearly years ago. The ingredients are modest -- cheese, sliced steak and bread will do -- but the taste is out of this world, particularly if you find an authentic sandwich shop willing to take the time to actually cook the meat rather than just reheat it. Your taste buds will thank you, even if your arteries decide to go on strike. We have the large Jewish population to thank for the bagels and smoked meat, which any proud Montrealer will declare are the best in the world. The first is derived from the sap of maple trees, which can be distilled to create maple sugar. Sold either in tooth-rotting blocks of deliciousness, or melted and poured over snow to create a sticky, frozen treat, maple sugar helps Canadians survive their long winters. The second food is called tourtiere, a traditional French-Canadian meat pie. Pork, beef and veal are common fillings, but venison, rabbit and salmon are sometimes incorporated as well. Its historical and cultural importance, combined with its versatility -- it can be served in stews, pastas, sandwiches or in any other imaginable format -- have made it an iconic food in Seattle. Toasted Ravioli -- St. It is generally served with marinara sauce and cheese sprinkled lightly on top, and may or may not contain meat. The San Diego dish known as carne asada fries is a perfect example: Add french fries, of course! Deep Dish Pizza -- Chicago, Illinois While New Yorkers and Chicagoans rage on over which city has the better pizza, we get to enjoy the best of both worlds. Crab Cakes -- Baltimore, Maryland You may have had crab cakes before. You may love crab cakes. Crab has been a staple food of Baltimore for as long as there has been a Baltimore. Hot Browns -- Louisville, Kentucky This open-faced sandwich made with turkey and bacon was invented in Louisville, nearly years ago, where it was first conceived as an alternative to late-night ham-and-egg suppers. Chili Rellenos -- Albuquerque, New Mexico Chile Rellenos is a traditional Mexican dish, first made in Puebla, but it has taken on a whole new level of popularity in Albuquerque, where it is served with Monterey Jack cheese and green or red chile sauce. Apart from the beautiful ocean views and many golf courses, tourists come to PEI for the seafood, and particularly the lobster. The Half-Smoke -- Washington, D. Famous in Washington, the half-smoke might appear, to the untrained eye, to be a simple hot dog. Even President Obama has been known to take time out of his busy schedule to visit the best half-smoke joints in the city. They serve hot dogs with a Japanese twist, by including variations on traditional Japanese foods like tonkatsu, teriyaki or yakisoba. Strips of beef are deep-fried and coated in a sugar-and-vinegar sauce, and flavored with ginger, garlic and hot peppers. But the real gem is the donair sauce, a blend of evaporated milk, garlic and vinegar that has to be tasted to be believed. Clam Chowder -- Boston, Massachusetts There are many variants on clam chowder, but none more famous than Boston clam chowder, made with potatoes, onions and clams, and served at a thicker consistency than other chowders. The Horseshoe Sandwich -- Springfield, Illinois A candidate for least healthy meal on this list, the horseshoe sandwich is a large slice of bread or hamburger patty topped with meat, topped with french fries and smothered in a cheesy sauce. Waffles -- Bruges, Belgium Waffles are loved the world over, but Belgium, and Bruges in particular, have a special claim to this delicious treat. Belgium waffles are noticeably lighter and crisper, with larger pockets, than their European and American counterparts. Head over to AskMen to see the rest of the list!
