March 14, by Certification Map Preparing to become a teacher is an intense experience. There are classes, student teaching and even fingerprint checks sent to the FBI. In this article you will learn about the Praxis PLT Exam, its format, and most importantly, how to prepare for a successful exam day. What is the Praxis? After or before you pass the PLT, you can take as many subject area exams as you want. As of the writing of this article, the majority of PLT Exams are administered on computer. As someone who took his Praxis Exams on paper, I can say from experience that this is a positive development. What is on the PLT? Though the four PLT Exams are unique in that they focus on different age groups, the structure of each exam is identical: Two hours long 70 multiple-choice questions Four constructed-response questions No matter which PLT Exam you take, expect to encounter questions on the following topics. Also included are the approximate number of questions you will answer about each topic. Multiple-Choice Questions 70 minutes Students as Learners: The first thing you need to do is take a full-length practice test under timed conditions. Once you score your test, you need to analyze the results. By doing this, the path towards improving your score will not seem as difficult. Besides, improving your score in just one subject area may push your final score up into the passing range. There are plenty of PLT Exam guides out there. If you are going to invest some money, I would recommend buying the official study guide published by ETS. If money is tight, used versions are a fine substitute. Just make sure the previous owner did not write all over the inside. When it comes to any standardized test, improving your time management skills can improve your score. On the PLT, it is important to remember the following: Guessing incorrectly will not lower your score. If you feel stuck on a question, guess and move on. The second bullet is truly one of the best pieces of standardized test advice out there. Getting stuck on a question wastes precious seconds. The exam gives you 70 minutes for 70 multiple-choice questions. Test Day Praxis exams are held on Saturday mornings, and usually take place at a local high school. If you are taking the PLT Exam, you cannot take any subject test exams that same day. Just like the SATs, it is important to show up to the exam center with the following: They will not search you for your phone, but if it goes off during the exam, expect that your proctor will ask you to leave. Do not let a ringing phone invalidate your score, along with waste your time and money. On exam day, reducing test anxiety can go a long way in improving your score. In my experience, one of the best ways to defeat test anxiety is to plan a fun activity right after the exam. As the exam ends at lunchtime, plan to treat yourself to some comfort food. You will need the energy. Final Thoughts From analyzing practice test results to getting a good sleep the night before the exam, there is a lot you can do to prepare for the Praxis PLT Exam. Though the PLT Exam is a challenge many teachers-in-training must face, it is a far from impossible one. You can always retake it. Thomas Broderick lives in Northern California. After teaching at an alternative high school for four years, he now works full-time as a freelance writer in the educational field.

Chapter 4 : PRAXIS Core Math Test Prep - Tutoring and Practice Tests

Additional test preparation resources are available for many Praxis tests. Check the Prepare for a Test page to see what materials are available for your test. 4. Plan and organize your time. You can begin to plan and organize your time while you are still collecting materials.

Most states require the test for Education students. The exact Praxis tests you will take depends on the grade levels and the content areas you plan to teach. Because the test is computer-based, take time familiarizing yourself with the process of Praxis. The reading and language arts section represents the majority of the questions with The social studies section has 55 questions, while science and mathematics each include 50 questions. Since this exam covers all of the major content areas, it is best to be prepared properly. Multiple Subjects Study Guide has practice questions to help you prepare. Education exams are expensive, so the best strategy is to spend as much time as possible preparing. A worst case scenario is having to retake the test in a few months because you failed due to inadequate preparation. You can avoid this scenario by spending some time with the practice questions and reviewing these tips. On the day of your Praxis exam, arrive early to the test center. To avoid any surprises, view this short video on what to expect on test day The testing center prohibits all electronic devices. They do not allow drinks or food either. Leave your phone in your vehicle and put it out of your mind for the next four hours. The Praxis exam is scored based on your correct answers. If you are unsure about an answer, make your best guess. There is no penalty for missing a question. Remember, you get credit for correct answers, you are not penalized for wrong answers. Missing a question based on a technicality or carelessness is avoidable. Some questions require more than one answer, while others require you to select a sentence, while others might require you to select an entire paragraph in a story. Never assume what the question is asking, read it carefully before answering. Since your Praxis exam covers all content areas, determine what grade level is implied within the question. For example, you would probably not give the same math advice to a kindergarten student as you would to an eighth grader. Read closely to determine which age group to the question refers to. Finally, if you are unsure about an answer, you are allowed to mark it and return to it later. Simply skip the problematic question and return to it later. Follow these tips and keep calm while taking the Praxis exam. Half of the battle is arriving to the testing center with a positive attitude. Watch the video so you know exactly what to expect. Spend time leading preparing for the exam by doing practice questions. After all, without preparation, you are actually preparing to fail. Scott Rozell is the Director of Tutoring, Inc.
