This is the twenty ninth annual report to Parliament on how the Social Fund operates in Great Britain. The Social Fund scheme includes: help towards maternity expenses.

The discretionary Social Fund[edit] Community care grants[edit] Community care grants CCGs were primarily intended to help vulnerable people live as independent a life as possible in the community. The prime objectives [11] were to: In making a determination on a claim for a CCG the decision-maker DM must follow the relevant legislation including the Social Fund Directions , and must also take account of the national and local guidance, i. Budgeting loan Budgeting loans BLs are intended to help those on means-tested benefits to spread the cost of intermittent expenses over a longer period. It is an interest free loan. The Social Fund Directions make clear that the purpose of the loan is to help meet intermittent expenses which the applicant has difficulty in budgeting for. Buck identifies four periods of policy development. The effect of these changes in essence was to severely limit the discretion involved by DMs in making BL determinations. Crisis loans CLs [edit] Crisis loans CLs are intended to help those who have an urgent financial crisis; for example, in consequence of an emergency or disaster such as a fire or flood. CLs are interest free loans, but unlike BLs, there is no requirement for an applicant to be in receipt of one of the qualifying benefits. The Social Fund Directions [15] make it clear that the overall purpose of CLs is to help meet expenses in an emergency or disaster where there is no other means to prevent a serious health and safety risk to the applicant or their family. CLs are used not only to cover specific items needed in a financial crisis, but also to cover living expenses, for example, where there has been an interruption to the usual flow of benefit income. One significant policy development was to allow applicants to make telephone applications as an alternative to written applications in During the later stages of the parliamentary passage of the legislation, the Government conceded to the increasing pressure for some kind of external, independent review, albeit one which differed from the tribunal appeal model that had been a hallmark of the British social security system since the s. Community care grants, crisis loans and budgeting loans will be abolished. Community care grants, and crisis loans for items and general living expenses will be replaced by a new localised service, from April In England this service will be delivered by local authorities See Local welfare assistance scheme. The arrangements for Scotland and Wales will be determined by the respective devolved Governments. Crisis loan alignment payments and interim payments of benefit will be replaced with a single system of short term advances. Budgeting loans will continue for people on income related benefits until they transfer to Universal Credit ; and will then be abolished once Universal Credit is fully rolled out. Budgeting advances will be available to eligible recipients of Universal Credit - these will be a payment on account of benefit. This will eventually be replicated in Pension Credit. The role of the Social Fund Commissioner will be abolished at some point after April As well as concerns about the lack of ring-fencing, there are doubts about whether the funding to be transferred to local authorities will be sufficient to meet the needs of people in their areas. Chapter 2 : Social Fund (UK) - Wikipedia

A SUMMARY OF THE ANNUAL SOCIAL SECURITY AND MEDICARE TRUST FUND REPORTS. In , Social Security's reserves increased by $44 billion to reach $ trillion by the year's end.

The audit office began investigating the fund in March , and has just published a report that is highly critical of how it operates. What is the Social Investment Fund? SIF was created to support community projects across Northern Ireland, from improving employability, reducing fuel poverty and education and early years initiatives. It was set up in a way that meant steering groups - made up of community, political and voluntary representatives - not the government, decided where money would be spent across nine area zones. It is understood this was a unique design to allow communities to have a say in where the money was going, but it faced criticism over claims it lacked transparency and consistency. What has the audit office found? The report makes a number of findings that raise "serious concerns" about how SIF worked, it says. There was no formal application process for groups to submit funding proposals, and in some cases there are no records of minutes from meetings where key funding decisions around projects were taken. Guidance around the scheme from the Executive Office was "inadequate", there is "little evidence" that procedures were followed, there is no clear audit trail and a number of conflicts of interest were not declared, it adds. What are some examples of concern? The report also gives several examples of projects where it is concerned about the extent to which they represent value for money. The audit office said SIF funding was "unnecessary" in this case. But the Executive Office said SIF funding ensured the building would be in an accessible location to both unionist and nationalist communities in east Belfast, and that there had been over registrations since the surgery had opened. Minutes of key meetings were not recorded and there is no documentation to support why the project went from 27th in rankings, to fifth. What has the audit office said about its findings? Mr Donnelly, who gave evidence to the RHI inquiry, said in both RHI and SIF, there had been a lack of documentation in how key decisions were made and the design of both schemes was flawed from the start. However, as the audit office is independent of government, it has not made any determinations on the political aspects of SIF or alleged links to paramilitary groups. That led to calls from some political parties for all the money awarded through SIF to be examined in a "root and branch" review. Further political pressure built up after allegations that the assembly Speaker Robin Newton had been an adviser to Charter NI - he denied that, but apologised for not declaring he had a link to the group. Why have the SIF budget and timeframe slipped? As well as that, out of the 68 projects that got approval, less than half of them have been completed, while five have not started yet. The audit office concludes had a "realistic timeframe" been put in place earlier in the process, extra costs and delays could have been avoided. Its report does, however, say that once projects got under way, the process improved. It has made a number of recommendations urging improvements in transparency and good governance around the use of public money. The Executive Office said it recognised there were "shortcomings" in the early stages of SIF, but that it would provide a more detailed response "in due course". It welcomed that the report noted completed projects where outcomes to date are promising and value for money is likely to be achieved, they added.
