The section has been upgraded from a two lane to a four lane divided road to reduce congestion and increase traffic capacity to meet predicted growth from development in the area. The re-development of the shopping centre has resulted in the changed alignment of the Showground Road and Pennant Street intersection. The existing shoulder pavement at Kentwell Avenue is not sufficient to support current traffic loading to run two lanes each way. However as a temporary measure, the existing east bound pavement shoulder is strengthened to allow two lanes on East bound direction. This section of the Showground Road upgrade is expected to be completed by late . Once the road construction from Kentwell Avenue to Pennant Street is completed, the community will enjoy the benefits of the project which include reduced congestion, and increased traffic capacity to meet predicted growth from development in the area and improving safety at several intersections. What have we done? Reducing congestion Increasing traffic capacity to meet the predicted growth from development in the area Improving safety at several intersections. A second Voluntary Planning Agreement is currently being finalised resulting from changes during the detailed design phase of the project. Community engagement We consulted with the community and stakeholders on the concept design and Review of Environmental Factors in March . We received 16 submissions and overall there was support for the upgrade. Changes to the project Some changes to the project were made during the detailed design phase and an addendum Review of Environmental Factors was prepared. The following changes have been made to the project: Hills Shire Council has agreed that access between Showground Road and Kentwell Avenue be closed pending the future development of the Queensland Investment Corporation QIC land to the north Changes to the southern end of Kentwell Avenue have also been made to allow garbage trucks and emergency services vehicles to turn around. This manoeuvre will be banned. The addition of a new westbound lane on Showground Road will make this movement unsafe. Fourteen trees on the site will be removed to allow safe heavy vehicle access and for storage of material Fencing will be installed to secure the site Due to the narrow corridor width, we will now be providing a two metre wide footpath instead of a 2. The Hills Shire Council will consider options for connectivity between their shared paths as development continues along the corridor which may allow for a wider pathway in the future Final bus stop locations have been moved slightly to allow buses to stop safely within the road shoulders. Two new temporary bus stops on Showground Road, west of Carrington Road will be installed during construction to improve access to bus services on the western part of Showground Road. Bus stops will need to be consolidated during construction. Please refer to the map for the updated temporary bus stop locations Removal of 15 additional trees on private property likely to be affected by construction. Additional trees on Showground Road will require supervision by an arborist during construction and utility trenching to confirm if they can be retained Reconnection of power to nearby properties using private poles. Further information on the design changes is available in the addendum Review of Environmental Factors which is available on the project documents page.

Indigenous history[ edit ] The land that is now called Castle Hill was originally home to the Bidjigal people, who are believed to be a clan of the Dharuk people, who occupied all the land to the immediate west of Sydney. The best-known Aboriginal person from that time is Pemulwuy , a Bidjigal leader who led the resistance movement against settlers, including sacking farms in Castle Hill, before his eventual capture and dispatch by local law enforcement. European settlement[ edit ] The first European visitors to the district were led by Governor Phillip in April accompanied by an entourage. As Governor he needed to find new country for settlement and farming land for crops so as to feed a struggling infant colony. The majority of the convicts who worked the prison farm were Irish Catholics, many having been transported for seditious activity in The most notorious incident being the Battle of Vinegar Hill where around 39 were slaughtered. They were branded "politicals" and exiled for life, never to return. The first free settler in Castle Hill, a Frenchman Baron Verincourt de Clambe, in unusual circumstances received a grant of acres 81 ha in Overpowering their guards, they marched towards Parramatta, [6] having torched a hut at the prison farm as a signal to convicts at the Hawkesbury which they either ignored or did not see. However, disciplined British troops, Red Coats , vastly outgunned and outnumbered them. The main group headed west, pursued by the Red Coats and by a citizen militia, the Parramatta Loyal Society, under protection of martial law which comes of the Mansfield doctrine of posse comitatus. Opposite where the Rouse Hill Regional Town stands, although the exact location is lost to time, a twenty-minute skirmish happened where an unknown number were killed. Martial law was declared across the whole of the colony and was allowed to cloak the activities of the military and their militia as convicts were deemed "to be in a state of insurrection". Martial law continued in effect for seven days, throughout which muskets were heard by locals who wrote to King about the calamity HR NSW. The government-controlled newspaper reported only convicts were involved, but over left Castle Hill in the hope of joining with another 1, from the Hawkesbury plains. The population of the colony at the time was around 5., thus the panic that beset the administration and general population. Marsden , known as "the flogging parson", put about his old story that all the Irish wanted to do was to rebel and secure ships to sail home in, but what they wanted was a New Ireland, a free and democratic home for all. In later years the area became filled with market gardens and orchards which supplied Sydney. As Sydney expanded, the orchards disappeared and were replaced with a sprawl of suburban dwellings, retail and commercial establishments and light industry. Castle Hill Post Office opened on 1 January However, it was closed in , due to competition with buses, trucks and cars. Local landmarks include Castle Hill House circa on Old Northern Road, which has a local-government heritage listing; [8] the public school , Old Northern Road, also with a LG heritage listing; [9] the former parsonage , Parsonage Road; and the former church, Old Northern Road, now converted to commercial use. For much of that period, they worked several hectares of farmland at the site. In his work, Castle Hill went variously by the names of "Sarsaparilla" and Durilgai". White based several characters on his experience of local individuals in Castle Hill at the time.
