It is the 3rd movement from The Piano Sonata No. 11 in A major, K. The last movement, "Alla Turca", popularly known as the "Turkish Rondo", is often heard on its own and is one of Mozart's best-known piano pieces; it was Mozart himself who titled the rondo "Alla Turca".

Movement Title[ edit ] I just changed "Minuetto" and "Marcia alla Turca" back to "Menuetto" and "Rondo alla Turca", which is how it was before and how it is in my version of the sheet music. They both mean march. Alla Turca is a Turkish March. The reference is to the real or fancied resemblance to the marches of the Ottoman janissaries , something of a fascination in Austria or central and western Europe at the time. So yes, standing alone in a musical context, "Alla Turca" would have then and may still be understood as implying either a march or something connected to a march. But "Marcia" and "Alla Turca" were and are far from "basically synonymous". Notably since one means march and the could other apply only to Turkish and pseudo-Turkish marches, but more to the point: The suggestion that "Marcia alla Turca" is wrong because it is as redundant as "Turkish March March" is absurd: The extent of redundancy in "Marcia alla Turca" is merely a matter of being complete enough to make clear to the less well informed that the Turkish style of march rather than dance, serenade, or hookah-trance music is being invoked. And to rule out, for the more clearly thinking, its being what "Alla Turca" could equally well describe to choose an example at random [wink] , a rondo reminiscent of a Turkish march. The criterion in this case is the commonly accepted name, "Rondo alla Turca". But avoid the unencyclopedically vague language "actually wrong". But describing a clever but straightforward choice of title as "inspired" is unnecessary and confusing. Boldly edited in instead: Jazz musician Dave Brubeck named his own famous Turkish-influenced work with a nearly parallel title, " Blue Rondo a la Turk ". Hello, anonymous - Well, it would seem that this is a fact not about the rondo, but about Civilization II. Why not enter it there? Be sure to confirm your observation first; it would really be bad to put something into an encyclopedia if you only "seem to remember" it. I hope this helps. After all, if nothing else it is in the Truman Show at least the third bit. The official NMA score is linked. Provide a movement and measure number for the part you are talking about. Kostaki mou talk Statement in lead[ edit ] The lead says "All of the movements are in the key of A major or A minor. The movements all start in A, but the trio in the minuet and trio of the second movement is in D major. The editor of this page does not know how to spell improvisational. The third movement is related to the first one, because its beginning can be seen as an additional variation of the theme of the first movement, varied in the Janissary style. Can I just remove this? The main argument against regarding the first theme of the Rondo as a variation of the Theme in the first movement is that the first half of the Rondo theme clearly moves to the dominant key E minor and ends there, whereas the corresponding section in the variation Theme ends in the tonic A major, and A minor in the minor-key variation. Another thing is that, at this time in musical history, it was quite uncommon for links between separate movements of a sonata or symphony to be put in. Beethoven made a tentative step in this direction occasionally, but it was mainly later composers like Liszt, Franck, Saint-Saens, Scriabin, and lots of late romantics, who did this in a big way - not Mozart or others of his era. Doniago insists that the following 2 sentences constitute original research and must be removed from the article: The theme of the first movement was used by Max Reger in his Variations and Fugue on a Theme by Mozart for orchestra. I think that is an unnecessarily narrow view of WP: Both assertions may not rise to the level of self-evidence that "Paris is the capital of France. However, an inspection of the respective primary sources the scores or recordings to the permissible extent mentioned in WP: I suggest to restore that section. Additionally the first sentence should have sourcing that establishes that the usage is significant in some manner. Otherwise why is the usage there any more important than any other usage? And why is it important that another piece of music is not based on this piece? These are questions that sources would help to answer. Is it reasonable to request that some manner of significant link be established between a work whose title directly refers to Mozart? Rather, in accordance with WP: IPC and to avoid any potential original research issues, we focus on the references that garnered third-party attention, which we establish via sourcing. Out of how many? Where can we find good images of these pages? Can we add such images to this article? Where can we find an analysis of the differences between the various editions of the score? Where can we find performances of the original version? It has been performed, but not recorded, by Zoltan Kocsis. Additionally, the musical form of the third movement is not a rondo. It is a compound ternary form with a bridge C between each of the ternary forms and a coda F:

Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart's Piano Sonata No. 11 in A major, K. , 3rd Movement. The last movement, Alla Turca, popularly known as the Turkish Rondo, is often heard on its own and is one of Mozart's best-known piano pieces. It imitates the sound of Turkish Janissary.

Menuetto Since the opening movement of this sonata is a theme and variation , Mozart defied the convention of beginning a sonata with an allegro movement in sonata form. The theme is a siciliana , consisting of two 8-measure sections, each repeated, a structure shared by each variation. The tempo marking is Andante grazioso walking pace, gracefully. It is in the key of A major. Menuetto[ edit ] The second movement of the sonata is a standard minuet and trio movement in A major. The minuet is 40 measures long, and the trio is Mozart himself titled the rondo "Alla turca". Beginning of the third movement Section A: This section , in A minor, consists of a rising sixteenth-note melody followed by a falling eighth note melody over a staccato eighth-note accompaniment. It is eight measures long. This section introduces new material in a melody in thirds and eighth notes before varying the A section with a crescendo before falling back to piano. A forte march in octaves over an arpeggiated chord accompaniment. The key changes to A major. A piano continuous sixteenth note melody over a broken-chord accompaniment. A forte scale -like theme followed by a modification of section D. A forte theme consisting mostly of chords arpeggiated and not and octaves. There is a brief piano restatement of the theme in the middle of the coda. Relationships to later compositions[ edit ] The theme of the first movement was used by Max Reger in his Variations and Fugue on a Theme by Mozart for orchestra. Until then, only the last page of the autograph survived. The paper and handwriting of the four pages matched that of the final page of the score, held in Salzburg. The original score is close to the first edition, published in In the menuetto, the last quarter beat of bar 3 is a C-sharp in most editions, but in the autograph an A is printed.
