Rosita and Elmo Read a Recipe (Sesame Street) is available for download from Apple Books. Apple Books is an amazing way to download and read books on iPhone, iPad, or iPod touch.

Learning to cook in English can be great fun but can your students read and follow recipes? There are lots of strange words and instructions to be found in recipes, not to mention strange ingredients. You will find recipes in magazines and newspapers that you have at home or visit your nearest charity shop to buy old magazines and recipe books that you can cut up. Aim to have one recipe per sheet of paper. Start collecting recipes now so that you are ready to do some of the activities listed below. When they have read one recipe they can swap with someone else and do the same again. Students can do this until they have read all the recipes or you can limit the time that they have to complete this task. Come together as a class and talk about the new words they have learnt. List these on the board. Drill right down in to the vocabulary - whisk, stir, beat, mix. What do all these words mean? How are they different and when would you use them? What would you stir? What would you whisk? Ask students to use these words in sentences and role play the actions for each. Keep a list of these words to play a game. See the next activity. Ask them questions about words that they have learnt in the recipes. You will have collected some from activity 1 to get you started. Ask students questions like: Wooden spoon If you put meat in the oven what would the cooking process be called? Roast The first person to say the right word scores a point for their team. They go to the back of the line. Keep playing as long as you have questions or time. The team with the highest score wins. Italian, Mediterranean, Middle Eastern, Chinese. Give examples of some meals for each cuisine. Find out if any of your students know the recipe to make any of these dishes? Students work in pairs to describe how they would go about making some of the dishes listed under a cuisine then swap partners and exchange recipes. Would you all make the dish the same way? Would it be an easy recipe to follow? Talk about time in recipes, oven temperatures and also whether you would have the meal as an entree, main course or dessert. Students could take their favourite recipe home and try to make it then report back to the class about how they went. Perhaps they could even bring in a sample for tasting! This is great activity for giving instructions and speaking in front of the whole class. Ask them to stand at the front of the room. They might also like to draw on the board as they talk about their recipe. This creates a bit of extra fun. List the festivals; Halloween , Christmas , Birthdays, Weddings. Break the class into as many groups as you have festivals. Ask each group of students to list the meals that they would cook for one of these festivals. Then ask them to write up the recipes for some of them. Then mix and match the groups so that you have at least one person from each festival represented in each of the new groups. Students can now compare meals that they would have at each festival and take turns to tell the group about their festival, specific meals and the recipes they have created. Students could also help you come up with these. Some examples of meals might be; spaghetti bolognese, meat pie, roast chicken, mashed potatoes. Ask students to describe how they would go about making these meals. They should list the ingredients first and then describe the cooking process. Students can then swap meals and partners and do the same again. Talk about the different options. For example; supermarket, grocer, butcher, market, delicatessen, fishmonger, market garden. You could make this into a quick game asking students to list down as many as they can think of in 2 minutes. The student with the longest list wins. Discuss what you can buy at each of these shops or places. Where would you go to buy exotic ingredients? Why would you go to one and not the other? Where do you prefer to shop and why? If you had the opportunity to work in one of these shops which would you most like to work in and which would you not like to work in? Why or why not? Ask your students to guess what each recipe is for! Iced biscuits are really easy with young ones. Just use coloured icing and lollies to make faces on round biscuits. Try fried rice with older students. All you would need is an electric wok or frying pan which is relatively easy to transport. Even just having breakfast together as part your morning class can be easy, prompt lots of discussion and be lots of fun. Students could bring different ingredients to share. Or why not go shopping together to buy breakfast food. A discussion about what people eat for breakfast can be very interesting too! Zoe , Abby Cadabby , and Rosita. Rosita plays the guitar. A new Rosita puppet introduced in , with much thicker fur especially on her head and upper lip. Rosita is a turquoise, bilingual monster who first appeared on Sesame Street in Season She is the second bilingual Muppet to recur on the show after Osvaldo the Grouch , speaking both English and Spanish. Contents [show] Rosita has often presented the Spanish Word of the Day , and features frequently playing her guitar. Her dad, Ricardo , served in the military and is in a wheelchair due to injuries related to his service. Wings Rosita originally had wings attached to her arms, reflecting her original concept design as a fruit bat. But mainly the big arms with wings were [designed] because she [used] to give very big hugs and to play the guitar. She was described to me as a "monster from the caves". I took it upon myself to reference a bat I also thought and hoped that it would have been characterized as a sign of female empowerment It was a sort of superpower built into her species. Add to that, it was a great solution to hiding the performers arms Another thought was that she would do great dance movements - like if she wanted to teach "flamenco". The wings were cut from the fur fabric in such a way to form pleats. One year, while I was no longer in charge of running SS for Henson, she had no wings. I was really pissed off and if I had the opportunity, would have had a meeting or two to defend their existence. I was so determined to make her different than the other monsters. The first day of Season It was Production at Sesame Workshop. What they told me was that the people in Merchandise took that decision. I really like the wings. It made her look like a different Monster. Like 20 years ago they wrote a very funny script. Prairie was helping Rosita with her flying and landing. At the end of the show Prairie was wearing a helmet because no matter what Rosita keep landing on her head. During the s and as listed in their profiles in The Sesame Street Treasury volumes 6 and 9 , it was Herry and Prairie who were often paired as best friends.

And why is it a must? Repeated reading means the child reads the same passage multiple times. Decades of research indicates that if you want your child to improve fluency and comprehension, they should not be going from article to article or paging through a book. Instead, they should read a body of content at least 3 times in a row. The more your child reads a body of text, the easier it is for them to decode the words and read the text accurately. Their familiarity with the text frees their mind to work on reading more fluently, with expression. And reading with expression, leads to improved comprehension. Achieving a higher level of fluency and comprehension in a body of text gives your child an experience of reading at a level that they can apply to new text. With Reading Buddy Software, every session your child will read a text three times. Your child will master the text, learn new words, and achieve an elevated level of fluency and comprehension that they can apply to future readings. You may have explained some vocabulary here and there, corrected an occasional grammar mistake, but essentially your child learned to talk by listening to other people talk. It works similarly with reading. In order to improve fluency and comprehension, your child has to listen to fluent reading. Most children who use Reading Buddy Software do one session per day. So a child using Reading Buddy Software hears a dramatic and fluent reading twice each session. Hearing these fluent reads is instrumental in helping them become more fluent readers. And improved fluency leads to better comprehension. But how to accomplish that is often misunderstood. Fluency is the ability to read words accurately, easily, and with expression. This is the first step to fluency. First, a child learns to decode words and pronounce them accurately. Because the more brain power your child has to invest in pronunciation, the less brain power they have available for comprehension. Last night I was talking to my husband while he was brushing his teeth. He understood everything I said while at the same time brushing and swishing. What would have happened if I tried to talk to my 9 year old while he was brushing his teeth? In fact, he can do it while thinking about something else. But for a 9 year old, brushing takes more thought. He has to concentrate. Before your child can find the meaning of the words, the words themselves have to be easy to read. Think about a public speaker. A good public speaker uses volume, tone, emphasis, cadence, and phrasing to convey meaning. A poor public speaker, on the other hand, is monotone. Their delivery is robotic. And without the verbal cues, their message is less engaging and harder to comprehend. Comprehension skyrockets once a reader realizes which words to chunk together and which ones to emphasize within each chunk. The same thing is happening today. Many schools, tutors, and reading programs fail to choose good content. Of course, the content has to be age appropriate and reading-level appropriate. Pretty much everyone gets that right. That just gets you in the game. To win, the content has to be truly engaging. The more captivating the content, the faster your child will develop reading competency. Now I want to temper my point. This is an important skill. Certainly, in order to succeed academically, a child must be able to read a variety of content, including the boring kind. But, for the most part, what your child reads should be riveting. So it would have been easy to get away with using mediocre content. I refused to do that. Instead, I spent over a year searching for just the right content for every reading level. And in the end, a lot of the articles and stories I wrote myself. The result is that kids enjoy using Reading Buddy Software. Let me give you some examples. Children who use Reading Buddy Software know the answer to that question. A lot of the dust in your home is dead skin. If your child read an article like that today, what do you think would happen? How great would that be? Your child coming to you excited about what they read. Did you know that you can go snow skiing in the summer? But if you were a child using Reading Buddy, you would know that Abner Doubleday did not invent baseball. The bottom line is that content matters. What your child reads will affect how much your child values reading. And practically speaking, that makes a big difference as to whether or not and how quickly your child progresses. Reading Buddy Software for up to 4 Users Reading Sessions minutes each divided into 4 reading levels for grades Every user can access any of the readings as many times as they want. Up to 4 Users. You can create separate accounts for each child.
