

Chapter 1 : San Francisco Museum of Modern Art - SFMOMA

Central San Francisco - Districts 4 & 5. The geographic center of San Francisco is Twin Peaks. Just west of Twin Peaks is District 4 (Twin Peaks West), a lovely community of peaceful, upscale neighborhoods, full of homes designed by notable architects - including a mid-century modern Eichler development in Diamond Heights.

Some 2, reveler-supporters came to have a ball at the ball—a fabulous, international, festively attired mix of all ages and types: VIPs, museum dignitaries, directors, and curators; artists, designers, and gallerists; collectors and art lovers; techies; and the old guard and the new. You may recall my coverage of the reopening celebration. The company of an even larger segment of young San Franciscans was solicited to attend The Post-Modern Party and enjoy gourmet nibbles and drinks, dancing, and live performances. With close to 1, expected for dinner, the cocktail reception was standing room only. Before heading to the dinners that took place on two separate levels, reception guests enjoyed drinks and nibbles. Guests received either pink or green bracelets, then followed matching glowing orbs to find the dining venue to which they were assigned. Hadi Tabatabai and Rosana Castrillo Diaz. Denise Bradley Tyson and Robert Bradley. Dennis and Leah Hearst. It takes a fashion icon to pull off hot pink shoes! In a town where untucked tee shirts and hoodies prevail, I was pleasantly surprised to see most men wearing jackets. Harrison Watkins and Cory Danielson. Google co-founder Sergey Brin and Nicole Shanahan. Emily Wheeler and Chrisa Pappas, wearing Valentino. Michael Morrison, Kathy Lowe, and Michelle. James Fleming and Genevieve Brisebois. Helen Christakos and Costa Sapuntzakis. Society photographers Ando Caulfield and Devlin Shand, getting into the party mood. Shirley and David Parks. James Rogers and Ismael Acosta. Vanessa Jean-Baptista and Lena Gikkas. This unique jacket certainly caught the eye of many. Honoree Chuck Schwab with wife Helen Schwab and their daughters and sons-in-law: The bright fabric covering everything in sight, together with brilliant yellow Gerbera daisies on the tables, made quite an impact. Sara Williams had fun with the edible floral dessert toppers. Anne-Sophie Deneve and philanthropist Vanessa Getty. Guests dined family-style on a feast that included salmon, quinoa and black bean salad, steak, and creamy polenta, and they were entertained by rapper Le1f and DJ King Most. Who could resist taking a selfie against the striking backdrop? Alton Irby and Daru Kawalkowski. Art collectors and patrons Pam and Dick Kramlich with friends. How clever to provide a way for younger fans to come to the party, introduce them to the museum, and perhaps inspire them to become members. Guests enjoyed sets by rapper Le1f in the "Mood Room. The rainbow PixCBooth photo ops wall was a huge hit, with stylish party-goers lining up to get the perfect Instagram shot. Gallerist Jessica Silverman and Sarah Thornton. Diane Adams and Claudia Ross. The Swedish electronic group Little Dragon was the musical highlight of the evening. Little Dragon drew the entire Modern Ball crowd to the main stage for the finale performance. Hats off to SFMOMA for creating a wonderful event that not only benefitted the museum but also offered such a happy experience to its supporters. The largest party of the year was a giant-sized success, with guests leaving only reluctantly when it shut down at 1 a.
