

Just use Schweser. The June Level I CFA exam is an extremely challenging test comprising of multiple-choice questions. It is vital that you not only have a firm grasp on the CFA curriculum, but that you are able to apply your knowledge and answer questions quickly and accurately.

I felt the questions on the exam were much harder than those in the schweser prep materials. The way the AMIR wrote questions, only one schweser note is never be enough. To drill inside the materials may be we have to go through the books Good luck all of those who are planning for the next round. Just wondering if there would be any people that will still use Schweser when there is a good study site here for free. Their online package is a complete garbage. We have enough to worry about Let them go to hell There are more than enough good study notes providers Who cares about Schweser Enough is enough with this He told me that more than half of his classmates fell the exam. I passed LI with textbooks and Schweser notes along with cfacenter practice exams. The Schweser notes were useful in a limited sense, as they gave me a concise summary of what the AIMR-mandated reading was. Kevin photoshop I can get full score with that! If two people using schweser and cfacenter both study for hours, they will have the same chance of passing. Schweser can be helpful ONLY if you have solid financial and accounting background because it is only an overview and there are not many detailed explanations. I read schweser notes. I felt they were too condensed. The practice questions online were too easy. So, anyone read it, must have previous background in finance or accounting and economic. Many people will fail. Some used Schewser, some Stalla, some analystnotes, some go through all the readings. Many failures will blame the notes. I have even heard people blame the required course materials i. I passed all three exams in a row. I also attended some courses expensive for the sake of getting some human conact - but they were pretty lame. I agree with Wassup - study hard! I relied on the text books and practice exams to clear Level I in Dec Mine is a sad story! While I am not here to criticize Schweser notes for being poor and so forth, I attribute my failure to pass the exam on both occassions to 2 major factors i. I work in an investment bank and I easily spend a minimum of 12 hours a day in the office!! On worst case scenario, I even clock the same number of hours or more on weekends. So I hardly have the time to flip through the notes, let alone grasp the concepts! I graduated with a degree in marketing management and Information systems. How in the world I ended up in an investment bank crunching numbers and evaluating credit proposals is another story all together. I found the notes to be helpful, even though there was a lot of room for improvement. I thought the practice exams made by Schweser were not really tough enough, the explanations of some of the answers could certainly be better. Schweser was posting updates and corrections to the notes till the very last day! I had gone in to the exam room confidently but came out worried. Thank God I did end up passing. If you start early enough and you spend aprox 10 to 15 hours per week this should be sufficient. I agree with tinaa. The test was not made for everyone. All you can do is study and work hard. I blam jen and tinaa for all my failures. I hope I pass this time Pinoyquant I want to see how bad it is. A mendicant person here would be happy to have that garbage. I read the Schweser Notes and AnalystNotes which I found of similar quality, took the questions at the end of the lessons and did the majority of the questions in the book. Schweser was very much how to calculate certain things. The real questions I thought were much less about calculations and much more about cause and effect, directional answers, etc. Just my opinion, but I will be steering clear of Schweser for my next try at L1 in June. I used the schweser extensively. I want to take it again in une and want to do it right this time. It seems using only one source of material is not enough Thanks to let me know Terminator I need guidance on what would be the best strategy in preparing for the exam in terms of study methodology, preparatory course provider, time required, etc. What about the Schweser for practising some questions for level II? Anyone has tested it? The problem may not be Schweser. The problem may be you are a moron! If you have no background, go get a basic degree 1st or read the CFA curriculum books. The Schweser notes are just, as what they say: Schweser seems not that bad if one had an MBA in Investments and already works as an analyst. I passed L1 without doing any exercises, but had not enough time to do L2 properly. The real problem is the CFA Institute and the ridiculous way they impose the exam. Why should one have so little time for it. Sometimes understanding the questions in L2 took up most of my allocated time, leaving not much time to figure out the answers. These people teach us ethics, but they cannot be held responsible for anything, only because we, or our employers are stupid enough to take their exams. Is this site even worth it? Is it similar to Schweser or are the questions harder? As a result, I failed. I think the best way to study is to start with the books and then look through the notes as a supplementary material. I used Schweser, passpro, textbook. I also work long hour. I did studied very hard and tried the Passpro mock exam. Not top score out of 6 mocks. After I mastered certain area than I forgot. Just so much thing in the exam! Would like to get some feedback from those who have used the CFA textbooks, is it helpful or does it make things complicated due to it being lengthy and detailed? June 07 Level 1 has 6 books which looks pretty time consuming to cover through all. Stop complaining about notes providers and focus on your study. They are both pretty expensive and i dont want to spend all that money on something thats summarised and assumes I already know this or that. I registered for Level 1 last week. I am a chartered accountant working as a Corporate Financier in London. If anyone is out there who can advise which notes to buy: I have already got hold of analyst notes. Thanks for the help. Use Analystnotes for the notes and the questions and exams. By the way Im a graduate in Finance and even then Im not using Shweser.
