Strange messages written in code are sent to LC and the Critter Kids. A long black limo appears in the schoolyard. Lights flash on and off at the Fox Hall mansion.

Color the cards and cut them out along the dotted lines. Spread all the cards out face down on a table. Mix them well and arrange them in rows. Taking turns, each player chooses two cards and turns them face up so that all the players can see them. If the cards match, the player may keep the cards then take another turn. If the cards do not match, the player should turn the cards face down again. The next player can then take their turn. The player with the most matching pairs wins. Critter "Go Fish" Print several copies of the critter cards. Use the cut-up cards to play Critter "Go Fish. Taking turns, each player chooses a secret critter card from the stack. Have the other players ask "yes" and "no" questions to guess your animal. For example, do you live in a shell? Do you have legs? Or use our Animal Guide to find some of your favorite animals. Include some interesting facts about each animal on the cardâ€”look for information on our website, such as in our Animal Guide. Punch a hole in the left hand corner of each critter card. Tie the cards together using either yarn or a key ring to make your own field guide. Bring these cards with you on your next visit to the Aquarium. Try to find all the animals in your field guide. If you have trouble finding an animal, be sure to ask one of our Aquarium Guides.

An easy way to create secret codes for kids is this build-your-own cipher wheel. One of the main tasks of spies is to exchange messages, while at the same time keeping the contents a secret from anyone who may intercept it. The activity of making a message unreadable for others is called "encrypting". If you want to make the message readable once again, you have to do "decrypting" the message. For both "encrypting" and "decrypting" you use the same code. This code is called a "cipher". On this page, you find the instructions for making a tool that helps you create your own secret code for kids! This tool is called the "Cipher Wheel", and it will help you do the ceasar cipher. Cipher Wheel Assembly Instructions If you want to exchange messages with others, create one cipher wheel for each: Print the two wheels you find below, on thick paper or paste it on thin carton. Cut out both wheels. With a sharp point, make a small hole in the middle of both wheels. Join the two wheels together small one on top of the big one with a split pin or cotter pin. First, write down your message. Only use letters from the alfabet. No numbers write them out , and no punctuations. For a "J" put in a "Y", and for a "Q" put in an "O". Rotate the upper wheel until the black triangle points to the character you have just selected. Make sure the triangle keeps pointing to the key character during the encryption of the message! Now, for each letter of your message, find that character on the outer wheel, and write down the letter that is exactly beneath it on the inner wheel. Secret Codes for Kids: Look at the first character of the secret message. This is your key. Rotate the upper wheel of your cipher until the black triangle points to that character. Make sure the triangle keeps pointing to the key character during the decryption of the message! Have fun creating your own secret codes for kids!
