Star Wars: Shattered Empire is a four-issue comic book miniseries published by Marvel Comics. Set shortly after Star Wars: Episode VI Return of the Jedi, Shattered Empire explores the galactic implications of Emperor Palpatine's death in the Battle of Endor.

Comic Books Star Wars: Synopsis Shara Bey at the Endor celebration. The Emperor and Darth Vader are dead, the second Death Star is destroyed; but the war is not over as the remnant of the Empire enact Operation: Meanwhile, Han, Kes, and their team take over an ISB black site and learn more details of Cinder, including the fact that Naboo is currently under attack. As Leia, Shara, and the Queen engage the Empire above the planet, Han and Nien Nunb arrive with part of the fleet to render assistance. Cinder continues to burn three months after Endor, but Kes and Shara are being mustered out of the Rebel Alliance within a week. Luke wants Shara to accompany him to Vetine where he intends to retrieve something the Emperor stole a long time ago. She disguises herself as ISB officer Alecia Beck and enters the base on the pretense of a surprise inspection. When their ruse their clever attempt to trick is discovered they fight their way out and manage to escape with the trees unscathed. Review Palpatine finds a way to be even creepier after death. Shattered Empire is a bit frustrating; not the story or art themselves, I think they are quite good. No, Shattered Empire becomes frustrating when you start thinking about what it should have been rather than what it was. It was 4 issues long, whereas most SW mini-series are 5 to 6 issues long. Well, it was marketed as part of the Journey to The Force Awakens so maybe they wanted to get the single issues and the collected edition out before December of Okay, but what you get in this book lends virtually nothing to The Force Awakens aside from trivia about Poe Dameron. We pick up right as the second Death Star is destroyed and Luke escapes in the shuttle and end three months later. Shara and Kes are well developed characters Shara more so than Kes and main cast heroes are handled quite well. The problem is that it tries to cover too much and comes off as a little disjointed. The first three quarters is various operations against the Empire leading up to the Battle over Naboo, and then the last quarter is the story with Luke and Shara retrieving the Force Tree. It feels like an epilogue; and then you get to thinking how much better this would be if it were 6 issues, or better yet, a novel Rucka is a novelist as well. You did your part Shattered Empire, now get some rest. Take an Ambien, fire off a couple of tweets, and hit the "no, wait!! Notes Shara is recruited by Luke for a special mission. Although not seen, Poe Dameron is mentioned and, according to other sources, is about 2 years old at the time of this story. Shara and Kes have been with the Rebellion since before the Battle of Hoth. The Mellcrawler was the name of his ship when we saw him in his pre-Rebellion days in the Princess Leia mini-series. Does this mean Poe will be reunited with his boyhood tree? Will we see his father still living there? Shattered Empire was collected in a trade paperback as well as a hardcover edition. The hardcover edition also collects the one shot C-3PO: Comic Pack Wish List: Shara and Kes of course. Judged by what it is, rather than what it could have or should have been, this is an excellent story.

For the first time in the new Star Wars canon, journey with us into the time after the end of Star Wars Episode VI Return of the Jedi! Writer Greg Rucka (PUNISHER, WOLVERINE, Gotham Central) and artist Marco Checchetto (AVENGERS WORLD, PUNISHER) take us past the destruction of the second Death Star - and into the chaos of a Shattered Empire.

It was actually a beginning. The Force Awakens publishing program, and picks up immediately after the Battle of Endor. The Empire was huge. You get out there and you shoot every last one of these upstart insurgents, these terrorists, and you make clear to them that the rule of law still stands. We see there, a hint that the Empire has no intention of going quietly into that dark night. And if we look at Endor as the end of the beginning of the Rebellion, which, I think, is probably the smarter way to look at it, then that is a natural progression. We never saw a macro view of the galaxy under Imperial control. Is Luke at that power level? The Story Group is incredible. They are really smart, passionate people, and have clearly put thought into it. Just not in starring roles. Issue 1 sort of stands alone. As it stands, we meet Shara in [issue] 1 during the Battle of Endor, and we come out of the Battle of Endor, and then we cover about three to six months total in the series following the Battle of Endor. In that time, Shara and her husband find themselves in some situations only incidentally in the path of the principals, and in other situations, working quite closely with them. All came to understand major truths and go through major changes. She was your friend. I want to know. Someday, somebody will write that scene. That scene is not in Shattered Empire. There is an insinuation that that scene has occurred. I tried very hard to respect the canon and the logical extrapolations of it. They had a cargo service that they ran and they had a newborn. Shara and Kes have something to fight for. When Star Wars is at its best, it carries that. And I have worked throughout my career at both places with artists and writers who grew up with these comics. They know them inside and out and they love them. They were their holy books growing up. Star Wars was always my religion. Star Wars was the mythology that I was most invested in. I take it remarkably seriously. I want to add to it in as constructive and as useful a way as I can.

Chapter 3 : Star Wars - Journey to Star Wars - The Force Awakens - Shattered Empire (TPB) () â€“ GetCo

Star Wars: Shattered Empire is a four-issue Star Wars comic book limited series, set immediately after the events of the film Return of the Jedi.

A Fanfiction made by the author of The Conquerors. Palpatine and Vader have been killed. The Empire is in tatters. And the New Republic is on the rise and the Jedi order is coming back. All seems to be going the same as it usually was in the E. It would seem that after several years since the Empire received an beating at Endor they decided to strike back. Out for revenge, the Empire desperately wants to reclaim what they own. That being the Galaxy at large. The only problem is they only control a small portion of what was once the Empire. Everything else is owned by the New Republic. At this point the Imperial Remnant acknowledges that it is not strong enough to fight the Republic head on. Instead they rely on Admiral Thrawn and his charts and maps of the Unknown regions. With this the Imperials set off with a plan to conquer new worlds in this region. With a new Sith Lord at the helm, Darth Satanus. The Empire hopes to strike back or die trying. Currently the Crossover includes: Can be read on FanFiction. Form the point of view of planets in the Unknown regions who never achieved space flight or exploration seeing the Imperial Remnant invade their planet seems like this. References to the past are constantly made. Specially to the Battle of Endor that started it all. Later we see the Empire recruiting students from Yokai Academy into their Stormtrooper corps. Given its a high school they fall into trope or at least Teenagers with Attitude. Given the Sith are around Force Chokes ensue. Satanus executes one Republic officer this way. We are still unsure if the stormtroopers are still humans or clones or mixed. Averted in the Second Chapter where Naruto and the other Shinobi out up a decent fight and repel the Empire albeit high casualties. Dawn of an Era: I takes place in the Star Wars E. More over in takes place in the New Republic era after the original Empire has been almost crushed and the New Republic is supreme. This takes place not during any of the actual film, but during the Star Wars Expanded Universe, which is now dubbed Legends. Satanus is in charge of the Navy yet is seen leading most of the battles the Empire has been in that we have seen. The first chapter has the imperials burst into a surprise attack on the Republic outpost of Polis masa. They were also not counting on Orcs or battle droids. Loads and Loads of Characters: Given the size of the crossover The Conquerors have planned it seems it will be this way. Satanus remarks several times that the empire is lacking troops and will take just about anybody they can put into a Stormtrooper outfit and threw on the battle field. One of the reasons he wants to conquer the Unknown Regions. General Veers who is well known from his role in Empire is still going at it. In chapter 4 on the Rosario Vampire planet. The Empire takes out Alucard this way after immobilizing him. Permission to Speak Freely: Satanus gives this to an officer criticizing him on Mustafar only for that to be a blatant lie and shot the officer through the head. Similarly it seems the New Republic is preparing for a conflict as well since the Empire has been quiet ever since Daala failed to destroy the Jedi Academy on Yavin. A rather interesting example where the Empire does this. Despite the Empire having walkers, Stormtroopers, and Droids armed with blasters the Shinobi still manage to repel them. Both Imperial and Republic remember the Battle of Endor greatly. The imperials are still bitter about it. The Remnant and the New Republic have been in what is basically an undeclared armistice for the moment. With the New Republic currently ignoring them for being not a big enough threat or problem at the moment but still wary of them and the Empire is concerned about how much of a threat the Republic currently views it seeing they could be crushed at any time. Stormtroopers still often call the New Republic the rebels. The New Republic is more prone to nicknaming their enemies with the Stormtroopers referred to as Stormies and bucketheads among others.

Chapter 4 : Star Wars: Shattered Empire: What Happened Between Jedi and Force Awakens

As Bey moves to intercept the shuttle, she is called off by Commander Luke Skywalker, who reveals he is piloting the commandeered Imperial vessel. While Skywalker makes a run for Endor, Bey covers him from attacking starships. Clear of enemy fighters, Bey tells Skywalker, "May the Force be with you. As the Rebels celebrate with the native Ewok population, Bey searches for Dameron. Bey locates Pathfinder General Han Solo, who is talking with Calrissian, and she asks where the team is. Solo directs Bey to one of the village huts, and Calrissian compliments her piloting skills. From the Ewok village, Bey and Dameron watch fireworks, discussing the unlikely victory, and future. Bey and Dameron express their feelings for each other, and they kiss. Bey volunteers to pilot the Pathfinder assault craft, and the Rebels—joined by some Ewoks—launch their attack. With the grounds clear, Pathfinders rush into the outpost while Bey waits in the assault craft, holding back worry for her husband. Some time later, Solo and Dameron emerge from the facility. Bey greets them, commenting that they had been inside for a while. Scattered Imperial forces continue their struggle to retain power, exhausting the weary Rebellion. Aboard the Star Destroyer Torment, Imperial Captain Lerr Duvat is met by "the messenger"—a red-robed sentinel droid bearing a posthumous message from Palpatine. Cinder, a contingency plan to destroy the Rebellion. Receiving further instructions, Duvat commands Lieutenant Gulin to set a new course, and the messenger leaves. Bey states that she had talked with Poe the previous week, but her husband has been on Pathfinder operations with Solo. Bey finds Organa in conversation with Mon Mothma. Bey introduces herself to Organa, and the two board a GX1 short hauler. On board, Organa informs Bey that they will be flying without escort, and they jump to lightspeed, en route to a pre-programmed destination. The Pathfinders regroup with Solo, and with the encryption-breaking protocol droid C-3PO, they enter the base. Bey deduces that Naboo could be under attack by an Imperial remnant. Organa requests ships and pilots, but Korro explains that the planet had been demilitarized years prior. However, Soruna reveals that there may be some starfighters available. Soruna, Bey, and Korro enter the hangar, discovering N-1 starfighters. Solo tells C-3PO to search for Imperial activity, specifically contingency plans, fleet movements, and counter-insurgency operations. C-3PO quickly learns of Operation: Cinder, and its targeting of multiple worlds. The protocol droid informs Solo of the widespread attack, telling the general that Naboo is one of the targets. Above the planet, the three spot the Star Destroyer Torment, and Bey volunteers to buy time for Organa and Soruna to destroy the satellite array. As the trio become overwhelmed, the Alliance Fleet—led by General Calrissian—arrives from hyperspace, ending the Imperial threat. Vergence, where they are happily reunited with Solo and Dameron. Imperial remnants hurry to fulfill Operation: Cinder, devastating countless Outer Rim worlds with their attacks. As the Duros leaves, Bey accepts his advice. The droid leads Bey to another hangar, where she finds Skywalker and an Imperial shuttle. Skywalker informs Bey that he is on a mission to Vetine, where there is something he needs to retrieve. The Jedi asks Bey if she is willing to be his co-pilot, and she agrees to help. Soon after, they enter hyperspace en route to Vetine. Skywalker elaborates on the plan, saying that they will enter an Imperial base using clearance codes obtained in the raid on Tayron, and that the goal is to take back something the Emperor had stolen. Exiting hyperspace, the two land the shuttle at the base, where they are met by Commandant Hurrion. When Hurrion asks who her companions are, Bey simply dismisses R2-D2 as a droid, and she claims that Skywalker is her security officer. They walk past the room, entering the inner lab, which contains two trees. Curious, Hurrion asks Skywalker why the trees are special, and the Jedi states that they are the only remnants of the Great Tree which had grown at the Jedi Temple. When Hurrion states that the Jedi are extinct, Skywalker reveals his identity, using telekinesis to throw the Imperials. When the Rebels reach the ramp of the shuttle, Hurrion orders his soldiers to throw thermal detonators. However, Skywalker uses the Force to send the bombs back at the Imperials, killing them. On the return flight, Bey confides in Skywalker, and thinking of her son and husband, she decides to retire. The Empire was huge.

Chapter 5 : Shattered Empire - Star Wars comic serie - Star Wars Timeline

Star Wars Shattered Empire is a mod based around the 30 year gap between Return of the Jedi and The Force Awakens, Bringing you the New Republic, Imperial Remnant, Restored Empire and First Order.

The Conquerors The Alliance thought the Empire was finished after the battle of Endor, weakened into remnants. It has simply just been lying in wait, building up its forces on other worlds preparing to strike against the Jedi and New Republic. Once more the Sith shall rule the galaxy. Takes place after the originals. Star Wars X-over with multiple series. A long time ago in a galaxy far, far, away Luke Skywalker has restored the Jedi Order to its former greatness. The death of Emperor Palpatine and Darth Vader has brought an era of relative peace and paved the way for the formation of the New Republic, the successor of the Rebel Alliance. However, not all is as it seems. A dark threat still looms in the far corners of the Galaxy. Like in the times of the Old Republic, they have simply been lying in wait, biding their time, waiting for the opportune moment. Soon the Jedi will discover that the threat of the great Sith Lords can never be extinguished. The biggest asteroid fragment of the former planet hosted a medical facility whose galactic histories claim to fame was the place where Padme Amidala gave birth to Luke and Leia Skywalker, and once a Rebel outpost where the Death Star plans were decrypted and sent to Princess Leia on Tantive IV. Those days, however, have long been over since the end of the Galactic Civil War. The medical facility was now also used as a research center for the New Republic as well as a military base to station their troops to keep justice and order in the unruly and dangerous outer rim regions. Most of the troops at this facility were stationed in the circular radar facility room. Its position was strategic in that the main hangar could easily be accessed from it if under attack or if they needed to get into their ships to fight off an invading fleet or jump to an outer rim planet that needed help defending itself, and in a worse case scenario go to the com center in the middle of the room, and alert the Republic fleet. That being said, the researchers and troops stationed there were thankful for the relative moment of peace in the Galaxy with the end of the Galactic Civil War. Truthfully some of the troops stationed there yawned, and were almost wishing for someone to be shooting at them to relieve them of their boredom and endless card games of Sabacc. Their wish was granted and their game disturbed when a blast resonated outside the facility followed by a tremor that it caused shaking the entire complex and knocking down a few unfortunate New Republic soldiers who were unfortunate not to have a table, chair, or wall to brace themselves against. The New Republic soldiers quickly composed themselves, picked up and loaded their weapons and took positions around the door that lead into the lobby and main hangar and the steep stairwell that could be used as an alternative route for the enemy. Now, the New Republic soldiers secretly took some joy in these surprise attacks from the remaining remnants of the weakened Empire. So it was with this mindset that the soldiers leveled their blasters at the door and stairwell, prepared to show the invading Imperials that they were no longer a threat or even a minor danger to the galaxy, and waited for the enemy to show their face, and waited, and waited, and waited, until about the five minute mark when the commanding officer went over to the window that covered a majority of the wall. Peering out the glass window the officer scanned for signs of an Imperial Star Destroyer or drop ship. Seeing nothing out there but the crater filled and rocky landscape of the planetoid, he put his blaster back in his holster and was about to declare it a false alarm until he heard a sizzling sound from behind him. Turning around he saw two adjacent doors that lead to the medical facilities, being cut open from the sides up from some kind of welding tool. He then remembered that there was a central hanger in the medical facilities they could use. No sooner did this happen, one of the infamous and familiar white armored Imperial Stormtrooper came out of the door, blaster at the ready, but was immediately shot down by a volley of blaster fire from the Republic soldiers. Another one came out right after him, but was cut down like his fallen brother, as was the one after him. The New Republic soldiers felt a boost in confidence easily killing the troopers with the narrow door and corridor having a bottle neck effect on them. This confidence considerably went down a few notches when the adjacent door on the left exploded into metal shards like the previous one, but this time spewing out B1 battle droids. The New Republic soldiers were no slackers in history and recognized these droids as the same models used in the Clone Wars years ago and were considerably shocked seeing them reactivated since all the droid factories used during the Clone Wars were thought to be destroyed. The droids took this opportune moment to open fire on the shocked and confused Republic soldiers falling several in front, with assistance from a new wave of storm troopers coming through the right doorway. Now the New Republic already thought it was strange and bad enough the Imperials were using reactivated battle droids, but this next sight was just too much. Currently coming out of the doors, taking the place of their fallen storm trooper and battle droid allies were, what appeared to be strange grey to brown skinned deformed and filthy humanoid beings, wearing mismatched armor and helmets of dura-steel. These ladies and gentlemen are Orcs. The Orcs that came out were holing in their hand, instead of the usual high tech blaster, rusty medieval swords and axes. The Republic soldiers hastily reloaded their blasters and fired upon them killing the remaining stormtroopers and battle droids, but it only seemed to anger Orcs who proved to have a high resistance to pain then most species. The Orcs paused momentarily the first time they were hit with the onslaught of fire, but shrugged it off and continued their relentless assault. The hail of fire continued on the charging Orcs who kept right on with the charge albeit with the price of several of them being taken out. The Republics soldiers had a look of pure dread plastered across their face when they realized that the charge could not be stopped. The remaining Orcs swung their axes and swords at the soldiers in front who were trying to block the attacks futilely with their blasters. Their weapons effectively cut through both the blasters and the soldiers. The Republic soldiers in front of the Orcs quickly reloaded once again and were about to unload it into the Orcs, until another wave of stormtroopers, battle droids, and more Orcs seemingly came out of the doors in infinite numbers all firing upon the Republic troops. The remaining Republic soldiers who were miraculously unharmed by the recent volley fled through the door leading into the main hanger, to gather reinforcements from their extra garrison stationed there. A figure then emerged from the right door making all the Stormtroopers, Orcs, and battle droids stand at attention. The figure was clad in black leather Sith robes, compete with steel tipped boots for whatever reason, perhaps intimidation. This was Darth Satanus, one of the few Sith children that Palpatine kidnapped because no women would go near him with a face like his. He nodded silently, despite what the Orc said the room told a different story. The smell of burnt flesh from the deceased filled the air; bodies littered the floor, most of them being Imperial casualties. However that would all change in due time, and with the new Emperor, the Empire and the Sith will once more rule the galaxy and avenge the death of Palpatine. The Com-link ear piece on Satanus started giving out static until the voice of general Veers; commanding liaison for this mission came clear from it, speaking to both him, and all the other troops who had portable coms put in their helmets or heads in the droids case. It was a glass dome in the middle of the radar facility room with three doorways leading into it, leading to the circular com-link that could send messages from this facility, across the galaxy. Satanus stood in the blind spot of one of the doors and waited. As soon as he sensed the current troopers, Orcs, and droids dead, he leapt through the door and ignited his light saber in mid-air. It ignited from both sides in a double bladed red saber which he brought down in a spinning fashion. The two Republic soldiers beneath him were immediately cut in half from the waist. Since seeing your fellow soldiers cut in half is not usually a good thing the Republic soldiers turned their attention to Satanus and began to fire at him but were either shot down by the droids and troopers or cut by the Orcs axes. The soldiers then realized that if they focused their fire on the apparent Sith warrior they would be shot down by the Imperials, and if they focused on the Imperials, the Sith would stab them in the back. The Imperials had accidentally, but effectively trapped the New Republic in their own com-station. The Republic soldiers who were very organized, quickly made sure that half there men focused on keeping the Imperial reinforcements out, and the other half to keep fire on the Sith warrior. The soldiers took positions in front of Satanus, slightly to his left and right flank, and opened fire on him. He swung the dual blade in the respective directions in a fluid motion, directing the blaster right back at the soldiers who ducked to avoid having their heads scorched off. Satanus took this time to use a force dash to close in on the soldiers and follow up with a few wide slashes taking care of them. He then turned around to find a Republic soldier hastily trying to work the com-link He jumped over the circular com-link landing behind the soldier and stabbed him in the back. One of the Imperial heavy troopers aimed his rocket launcher at the com-link and prepared to fire, until all those nights reading tactical galactic war strategies paid off and Satanus got a better idea. If you disable the communications, the New Republic will wonder why they lost communications with this base and become aware of our actions here. It was a commando droid, a droid programmed with thinking skills close to that of sentience, deadly assassin skills, and the ability to imitate the voice of almost anything. The commando droid waited a few seconds before responding, waiting for its voice modulators to activate. One of the three is carrying the access codes to proceed further into the base. Take out the officers and find those access codes. The Orcs and battle droids took the set of steep declining stairs, while the stormtroopers followed Satanas through the door leading to the hanger, with two flanking his sides. The door slid open revealing a short corridor with two Republic soldiers. He continued his march down the small corridor with Stormtroopers still following behind him. The door lead out to a closed-in balcony with a window overlooking the main hanger and stairs leading down to it, to the left and right. Looking out the window he saw the Orcs and battle droids currently coming out of a door below him to his left and engaging the Republic soldiers. In the middle of this room, just before where the ships were usually stored, was a raised platform with the three Republic officers giving commands to the soldiers below. Captain take your men down there and assist our troops and create a diversion, I will deal with the commanding officers. The Stormtroopers rushed to the aide of the Orc and droid garrison and joined them in the shoot out trying to turn the tide. Once at the top he threw his light saber at one officer, impaling and alerting the others of his presence. He used a force pull on one to send the officer flying through the air towards him, before finishing him with a quick saber strike. The last one drew his blaster, but before he could fire, Satanas drew his hand out in pinching gesture. The officer dropped his blaster and grabbed his neck with both of his hands, as he was lifted a few feet in the air. Satanas was using the infamously known Sith ability force-choke on him, a favorite of Darth Vader himself. Only about a handful remained. Most of the Republic soldiers in the base were killed in the previous fight with their extra garrison. Satanas and the imperial army back tracked through the Radar facility, making there way to where they originally entered. The central hangar was littered with the bodies of Republic and imperial casualties as well as scorch marks on the walls from their messy entrance. In the middle of the hangar was an imperial drop ship. Satanas inserted the disk into the drop ships computer sending the information to the imperial Star Destroyer hiding in the shadow of the planetoid. We can now clear the rebels out of this base before they can escape and warn their allies. He reached a medical room, tan colored with only a bed, where Padme gave birth to the Jedi twins. Behind it to the left and right are you witnessing a pattern here? Satanas took the one on the right and went down a set of stairs. At the bottom he emerged in a damp cavern where various medical supplies and weapons were stored. Ignoring this he continued on his way taking out soldiers on the way with assistance from the troopers, droids, and Orcs. Arriving at the back at this cavern he found a short inclining ramp made from rock, leading to the back hanger. He made his way up the ramp deflecting back blaster fire at the soldiers until he could get in close and disable them. Arriving at the top, he entered the hanger and found a trapezoidal Alliance Assault Cruiser, used to transport rebels during the Galactic Civil War.

Chapter 6 : Shattered Empire Tree: Whats It Mean For Force Awakens?

I was spurred on by playing the Battlefront II campaign and being reminded of some of the events that take place in these comics. I thoroughly enjoyed the second read-through, getting to see all of the classic characters from the original series back in action was great and the writing really made it feel like it was a continuation of Return of the Jedi. I read the individual issues of Shattered Empire as they were released but have finally gotten around to rereading it in one sitting in graphic novel form. I thoroughly enjoyed the second read-through, getting to see all of the classic characters from the original series back in action was great and the writing really made it feel like it was a continuation of Return of the Jedi. Not limited to the familiar faces, there are also a few new characters that tie into the new movies and other fiction here. Having kept up with a lot of the books and comics, it was cool going back and seeing many of the story threads planted here that have born fruit in other works. But none of it is strictly necessary to enjoy this story or the others. In addition to Shattered Empire, the graphic novel collection also includes the C-3PO one-shot that tells the story of how he received his red arm in The Force Awakens. Throughout the five issues, the artwork is great. Shattered Empire goes for a more screen-accurate look, which helps with the RotJ continuation feeling. C-3PO goes a little more abstract and messy, which fits with the story and is an interesting choice for a plot that focuses on mechanical creations. All told, I would definitely recommend this to any Star Wars fan looking to fill in the gaps between Return of the Jedi and The Force Awakens, especially for people who enjoy the original trilogy the most. Star Wars Fans Shelves: It also contains a bonus C-3PO comic. Return of the Jedi. The Rebels have won, but the empire does not simply vanish. The book deals well with themes of guilt for a soldier. How much is enough for one person to do? Where it really shines is the C-3PO comic, where it touches on the nature of will and memory. When he confronts a commander and group of Stormtroopers, he does not offer them a choice. Then when given the choice again to end a fight, he strikes out again, with a pithy one-liner. A clear give-in to a default comic book reader perhaps. A good collection, and the hardcover includes wonderful artwork, but the writing is far from a masterpiece.

Shattered Empire is a bit frustrating; not the story or art themselves, I think they are quite good. No, Shattered Empire becomes frustrating when you start thinking about what it should have been rather than what it was.
