This scene reined for over a decade as these performers moved in-and-out of the area and on to great fame and success. Also at this time, bluegrass music was making a real buzz in the area. Leftover Salmon called new attention to the mountains outside of Boulder and began creating an attraction to a younger crowd. Together, they created a serious impact in what was to come. As a venue they made a step towards a higher quality of music and brought back new standards to this evolving scene. Michigan Mike moved from Boulder where he had been for just over two years in March of When he landed in Nederland, he felt the energy hit hard. It was here that he began throwing back yard festivals. This is when the new, younger scene really started to happen. A list of Artists who performed at The Top can be found by clicking here. The success of Top Of The Square brought welcomed competition from other bars in town. It was these people who helped evolve the scene faster then ever before This event brought even further recognition to Nederland. Stanley returned in June for some solo shows, and Mike convinced him to play with many of the Nederland Acid Jazz players. Perhaps because this new scene was so young and fertile, all of these new venues could not sustain. Audiences were being spread far too thin. They currently host great live music on a regular basis. A list of Artists who performed at The Tongue can be found by clicking here. I feel proud to have had an influence on this incredible lifestyle that we lead in Nederland. As this area grows and expands, I hope that I will be able to continue spreading the good of music in my town, and I hope to expand that joy onto people in other communities as well. I cannot give you a gig unless I know what you sound like.

They characterized the site as "defensible," describing the foot plywood and steel fence intended to keep out those without tickets. These included several alternate stages, a night-time rave tent, and a film festival sponsored by the Independent Film Channel held in a former airplane hangar. Reception[edit] The festival featured a diverse assortment of acts, and early reviews for many of the acts were positive. Critics particularly praised performances by: However, critical and public attention quickly turned to the deteriorating environment and crowd behavior. Added to this was the fact that the site, a former air strip, had been cleared of many of its shade trees. Participants were prohibited from bringing food and water into the venue, and were met with high prices inside the venue. Within a short time, some facilities, notably the portable toilets and showers on the site, were unusable and overflowing. He wallows in it. Hundreds of empty plastic water bottles that littered the lawn area were used as fuel for the fire which had spread to both stages by the end of the performances. After the Chili Peppers were finished with their main set, the audience was informed about "a bit of a problem. Many large, high bonfires were burning before the band left the stage for the last time. Participants danced in circles around the fires. Looking for more fuel, some tore off panels of plywood from the supposedly inviolable security perimeter fence. ATMs were tipped over and broken into, trailers full of merchandise and equipment were forced open and burgled, and abandoned vendor booths were turned over and set afire. It was dangerous to be around. The whole scene was scary. There were just waves of hatred bouncing around the place, It was clear we had to get out of there It was like a concentration camp. You wallow around in garbage and human waste. There was a palpable mood of anger. Most had crowd control gear and proceeded to form a riot-line that flushed the crowd to the northwest, away from the stage located at the eastern end of the airfield. Few of the crowd offered strong resistance and they dispersed quickly back toward the campground and out the main entrance. Six people were injured; there were no recorded deaths at the concert site. One individual, David DeRosia, collapsed in the mosh pit during the Metallica performance. The following afternoon, he was in a coma and a doctor had diagnosed him with " hyperthermia , probably secondary to heat stroke. The autopsy report ruled the death as accidental and listed the cause of death to be hyperthermia along with an enlarged heart and obesity. Members of the National Organization for Women later protested outside the New York offices of one of the concert promoters. Hey man, leave the kids alone. Yes, Woodstock was filled with predators: With attendance estimated at , there were many non-vendors who attempted to sell on a smaller scale on the paths to and from the concerts and camping areas. However, there were individuals who did. Jeff Beck was scheduled to perform, but had to cancel due to a "scheduling conflict. July 22, Thursday pre-show [edit].

Chapter 4 : Denver Entertainment/The Scene: The Denver Post

Give Jackson credit for at least giving her third album a shot of animation by never sticking to one place. But she tries a tad too hard to break free from the restraints undoubtedly placed on her as a young, black, female singer/songwriter, and in the process never quite nails a single track.
