Chapter 2 : RC Shooting Tank | eBay

Tank Shoot The Tank Shooting Game for Android, iOS, Tizen Devices.

This myth was busted by MythBusters as they proved that in most cases it simply will not work. A real life fuel tank explosion was only possible when they used a minigun armed with incendiary rounds which, suffice to say, is generally unlikely. Even if against all odds, logic, and reason the fuel tank does explode, the result is rarely the spectacular car-flipping fireball that Hollywood promises. Avgas aviation gasoline, the super-high-octane blend used in piston-engined aircraft can blow up like this with a very Hollywoodish fireball, which is why airplanes since the s have things like self-sealing fuel tanks and inert-gas-pressurization for their tanks. This is about deliberately shooting a fuel tank. For vehicles that explode on any kind of incidental impact, see Every Car Is a Pinto. This trope also has some overlap with Bullet Sparks; see that page for the fairly limited number of ways this can be a Justified Trope. However, he does discuss it, saying that blowing up a car is a lot harder than movies make it look. Sin City had a scene in which the Old Town girls opened fire on a cop car with machine guns. Eventually, it blew up, implying this trope. At least they paid lip service to the reality by having him almost empty his clip with direct hits to the tank while his internal monologue hoped for one to spark. Francisco gets into a firefight with some perps and shoots a fuel tanker behind them. Subverted in that the girls were actually playing at shooting his tyres out, one by one This is how James Bond makes his escape in the opening sequence of Casino Royale, he shoots a propane tank with a handgun. He also does this at the end of Quantum of Solace with a hydrogen tank. That one gets a pass, though, as the building was already on fire. Jaws did it with a compressed air tank. Also busted by the MythBusters. Played straight and in slow motion by Morpheus during the freeway chase of The Matrix Reloaded. Strange, when you consider this is averted in the first movie, though that was with a helicopter and not a car. The only effect shooting the fuel tank had was an empty tank a few moments later. To a moving vehicle, from a moving motorcycle. Subverted in Last Action Hero. When Jack Slater enters the real world, he chases Benedict until Benedict hops into a taxi. When Slater shoots at the cab, he is surprised to find that it does not explode. Averted in Speed, when the cop trying to defuse the bomb by suspending himself near the undercarriage of the speeding bus accidentally stabs the fuel tank with a screwdriver Terminator Kyle Reese crouches down and fires his shotgun at the gas tank underneath a car in a vain effort to slow down the T in The Terminator. A gas tank does explode after a crash in Terminator 2: Played straight and averted at the same time in Terminator 3: Rise of the Machines. T fires rounds into the police cars, but only one of them explodes. All police cars have a serious amount of bullet holes in them after the shooting. In Terminator Salvation, he shoots a tanker with a shotgun in an attempt to stop a harvester. However it did cause the tanker to start leaking, and he then uses a flare on the puddles of fuel, which proved to be MUCH more effective. In Iron Eagle, Doug Masters blows up an oil refinery as part of his scheme to force the bad guys to release his father. Cluster munitions will make fuel tanks burn quite nicely. Might have happened in American Psycho; even Patrick seems bewildered at the explosion. Mr Smith is trapped in a garage by a large number of mooks, so he aims at the tank underneath a car and punctures it. Instead of fuel bursting into flames, the tank leaks oil which Smith uses to slide along the floor and shoot all the mooks. Showdown in Little Tokyo. After Kenner flips a car on its side with his bare hands, he shoots the fuel tank as he escapes to make it explode. Played straight in the poliziotteschi Italo-crime film "Italia a mano armata", even though it takes 7 bullets to make it happen. Averted in The Baader Meinhof Complex. Police corner two terrorists in a garage used for storing bomb supplies, including several gas cylinders. Though the police fire automatic weapons into the garage, nothing explodes. The assassination in The Jackal involves a remote-controlled gun in the back of a station wagon. A police sniper destroys the weapon and the vehicle, and everything around it by firing a shot into the fuel tank, then a second shot to ignite the leaking fuel after a sizeable puddle has formed. Justified in The Mechanic where the shooter lets the fuel spill out over the ground before igniting it with a shot from his pistol. In Drive Angry, Milton tricks a car of cultists into jumping over the top of him, and then shoots the fuel tank as the car is overhead. It explodes into a fireball. Subverted in that he had to use magic powers to actually make the barrel explode. The odds of actually starting a fire with a bullet are low to the point of virtual impossibility. Upon getting closer, he notices the rear-mounted fuel tanks, and decides to target those instead. The Iraqi tankers apparently did not drain them before entering combat, leading to the missile causing a huge explosion that blows the tank to pieces and knocks Burris flat on his ass from the force. Then he does it anyway. He just uses a regular. MythBusters busted it until they tried special rounds, and a lot of them. They had to detonate explosives under the cylinder to make the gas catch fire. Averted in season 4, though. The helicopter survives a massive firefight with several leaking holes in the gas tank, but never explodes. Children of Earth , when the bad guys are pursuing, Gwen uses this tactic to buy themselves some time. Subverted in Burn Notice. Shooting a gas tank with plastic bags full of acetone peroxide taped to it, on the other hand In another episode, shooting a propane tank merely results in a cloud of cold gas, unless there happens to be an open flame nearby He shot the arrow into the wall beside the window instead. Newkirk took the bow from him and did it properly. They decide to stage a car crash, and destroy the car so that the Police will think their bodies were incinerated in the explosion. When the crash leaves the car mostly intact, they try shooting the gas tank and using a grenade. A Discussed Trope , the characters had to figure out just the right part of the vehicle had to be shot in order to set it off. After a while, however, he tosses a lit cigarette into some nearby dry grass, and after the brush catches fire As Reese drives away from him in a taxi, a government assassin armed with a bolt-action rifle fires two aimed shots; one to puncture the fuel tank, the other to ignite it. The Transporter has a variant where Frank Martin rams a hydrogen-fueled car, then throws his car lighter out the window as he drives off, igniting the fuel. Cannon does this to his own car in "Girl in the Electric Coffin"; causing it to blow up and drive out the hitman who was taking cover behind it. She was only shooting at it to get the gasoline to trickle down towards them, which she then lit on fire Class Zero can exploit them to create a sizeable explosion by hitting them with any attack. Or even a melee weapon from the other eight members of Class Zero, although that tends to add to their casualties. The first Gears of War game has the player shoot propane tanks to light paths to get around the Kryll. The second one has the first battle against Locust take place near a pile of these, shooting these will usually clear the area of any enemy and you are far enough away from them when this battle happens, anyway San Andreas allows you to instantly detonate a car if you aim for the gas cap. Even if you can clearly see the rest of the tank, as on lorries, only the cap will set it off. Half-Life had a warhead that could be shot to explode and get a Nonstandard Game Over , and at least Half-Life 2 and the episodes have Exploding Barrels. In the train level in Star Fox 64 , shooting a fuel car will detonate all adjacent train cars. Flamethrower-wielding enemies in F. The principle is still the same: True Crime has an unlockable feature that allows you to lock on to gas tanks in Bullet Time for easier destruction. One of the more notorious elements of Modern Warfare and its sequel, albeit it will take several rounds. Badass Lance Troopers carry fuel tanks on their backs, which explode if you deal enough damage. Also seen in the original game, where Jakobs fuel storage tanks will explode if shot up enough. And the second game of the Tiberian series does this with less-explosive ammo crates. Among Thieves has a few sequences where Nathan shoots propane tanks in order to cause explosions. In Mafia II , shooting the fuel caps causes cars to explode reliably after 2 shots with any weapon. Shooting right next to the fuel cap, or into the fuel tank from any other angle has no effect. Inverted in " War of the Monsters ", where you can throw gas trucks to deal massive damage to your opponents, as well as lighting them on fire. This often has the side effect of setting the tank on fire which, with the current patch, will randomly damage modules, injure crew members and possibly cook the ammo for massive damage. Soviet tanks are especially vulnerable to this tactic, due to many of them mounting external fuel tanks. A viable tactic in Mass Effect games. In the first, there are little plasma, ion, and cryo tanks all over a ton of different battlefields, and an occasional big one with fuel in it. While facing Blood Pack Pyros in the second game, shoot the rather obvious tank with a lower damage weapon and will light then explode. Shoot it with a high powered weapon such as the Widow sniper rifle or zap them with an Overload or Incinerate tech attack and it explodes immediately.

How do tanks shoot? The Vietnam era M48A3 Patton medium gun tank had at least 4 triggers in the turret; one on each cadillac control for the gunner and TC; one manual on the breech; and one master blaster. The 3 foot long 90mm cartridge was shoved into the breech, the loader yelled "up" and the TC said "on the way" as he pressed the trigger. The M41 90mm gun was just like a large rifle; just shove in the cartridge, close the breech, and shoot. During the early days in Vietnam, the 90mm casing was actually brass, after the shell casing was made of cheap throw away metal. The 90mm empty casing is roughly 2 feet long. The M Sheridan tank in Vietnam fired caseless mm main gun shells; no empties ejected from the gun. The overwhelming majority had a lower-velocity and much less powerful 75mm.
