Short Sunday service for travelling parties: being a simple devotional form of prayer and praise for the use of Christians on the Lord's day when circumstances may place them at a distance from home, and, for the time being, may deprive them of regular church services.

Editorial Team June 21, One of the best ways to celebrate retirement is with a retirement party. Retirement is a huge milestone and a great reason to celebrate. Throw a party for yourself, get a friend to do it for you. Celebrate a friend or family member with the best party planning ever! Not all retirement parties need to be galas. Think about local hangouts, parks or even a party in the office depending on what suits the person. Ready for your own retirement party? If possible, it is nice to invite associates from past positions as well as people the retiree interacted with professionally outside their own company – vendors, salespeople, etc. And, perhaps most importantly, invite the people the retiree will be spending time with in the future. It can be fun to mix these different groups. Nowadays party invitations are often sent via email using services like evite or punchbowl, but a fun variety of paper retirement invitations are also available. A luncheon during the workday A big gala on a Saturday night A sporting event on a Sunday afternoon After work drinks at a local hangout Dancing on the desks in the office There are no particular etiquette rules to guide a retirement party. The party can really be anything that suits the interests and personality of the retiree. The party should therefore reflect these endeavors. Still wondering how to plan a retirement party? Here are 7 retirement party ideas for what to do at the party: Speeches Most traditional retirement parties involve speeches that honor the contributions of the retiree. Usually the person throwing the party gives a speech, but you can also ask bosses, employees, friends or family to say something. Retirement speeches should highlight the accomplishments of the retiree. It is also nice to involve all the guests in a commemoration encouraging everyone to offer their own toasts or speeches. If you plan to do this, it would be nice to mention it in the invitation so that everyone has had time to think about what they would like to say or prepare specific remarks. Need some ideas for retirement quotes to include in your speech? Commemorate the Retiree Beyond giving a retirement speech, there are other ways to celebrate the retiree: Provide a blank book where each guest can write something about the guest of honor Video Interviews: Arrange a roast for the retiree. A roast is where a panel of friends or colleagues gently pokes fun at while also commemorating the honoree. Additional unique retirement party ideas could include: Collect photographs from the retiree's life and have them scanned and running in a loop on a television or computer. Have it playing throughout the party. Toast and Drink Up: Can you make up a special drink that celebrates the retiree? Call it by their name! What about having all of the guests dress like the retiree. This can be a touching and fun tribute and easy enough if the honoree had a particular style of dress – a police uniform or perhaps they wore something similar almost every day – a button down shirt and jeans for example. Create a Fun Theme for a Retirement Party If the retiree is lucky enough to be entering a life of leisure, you may want to celebrate their retirement with an event focused on their favorite hobby. A golf tournament A gourmet luncheon A picnic and baseball game Are grandchildren important to the retiree? If yes, then maybe you could plan a party that involves fun games for the whole family. If the retiree is someone who would enjoy a themed event, here are a few ideas. If they are relocating, you could plan a party around their new location. A Costa Rican party could have jungle decorations and everyone could wear Hawaiian shirts for example. A traveler might appreciate an around the world party with maps and food from all over the globe. Guests could wear attire from their favorite destination and offer travel tips to each other. You can decorate for the party by taking cues from the retiree's life or accomplishments. Devote different tables to different hobbies, jobs or roles from their personal history. Set up a wine tasting. Have everyone bring a bottle of something they really love. This is Your Life: There is not a lot of mixing of the two environments. Some of the best retirement parties mix the guest list and this gives a really powerful opportunity for people to learn about the retiree. It can be very touching for children and grandchildren to hear about the accomplishments of the retiree. Create a Fun Retirement Themed Playlist If you are having music at the party, you could create a playlist of songs appropriate to aging and retirement. Maybe make it a karaoke party with only retirement themed songs on the system! Some suggestions to get you started: The playlist could also be given out as a party favor. Smash the alarm clock! An important symbol of the workaday life is the alarm clock. It may be fun and perhaps cathartic to enable the honoree and other guests to use a hammer or mallet to smash an alarm clock to bits. Old alarm clocks can be purchased from the thrift shop. You can put them in a pillow case to protect everyone from shattered pieces. Just be sure to recycle the electronics appropriately. Goodbye to the Tie: If the retiree wore a tie or any kind of uniform for their job, maybe you could have a pillow or quilt made of the clothing. Nothing says celebrate quite like fireworks! For a memorable send off, give guests sparklers or "if safe and appropriate" arrange a real fireworks display. Pin the fishing pole golf club, sunscreen, book! on the retiree? Give a prize to the person who knows the most answers. Make it Easy to Keep in Touch One of the hardest aspects of retirement can be saying good bye to people you see on a daily basis. Help keep everyone in touch by: Setting up a blog or web site where the retiree can broadcast updates and easily here from friends and family. Make Sure Your Own Retirement is on Track Retirement really is a reason to celebrate, especially when you have a solid retirement plan. NewRetirement makes it easy to plan your retirement. The NewRetirement retirement calculator lets you quickly assess your current situation and then make changes and discover ways to improve your plan. Are you ready to celebrate retirement?

Taxiways , where planes "taxi" transfer to and from a runway Apron or ramp: Air traffic control[edit] Airport tower. Air traffic control ATC is the task of managing aircraft movements and making sure they are safe, orderly and free of delays. At the largest airports, air traffic control is a series of highly complex operations that requires managing frequent traffic that moves in all three dimensions. A "towered" or "controlled" airport has a control tower where the air traffic controllers are based. Pilots are required to maintain two-way radio communication with the controllers, and to acknowledge and comply with their instructions. In those cases, non-towered procedures apply when the tower is not in use, such as at night. Non-towered airports come under area en-route control. Remote and virtual tower RVT is a system in which ATC is handled by controllers who are not present at the airport itself. Air traffic control responsibilities at airports are usually divided into at least two main areas: Ground control[edit] Ground control is responsible for directing all ground traffic in designated " movement areas ", except the traffic on runways. This includes planes, baggage trains, snowplows , grass cutters, fuel trucks, stair trucks, airline food trucks, conveyor belt vehicles and other vehicles. Ground Control will instruct these vehicles on which taxiways to use, which runway they will use in the case of planes , where they will park, and when it is safe to cross runways. When a plane is ready to takeoff it will stop short of the runway, at which point it will be turned over to Tower Control. Conversely, after a plane has landed it will depart the runway and be "handed over" from Tower to Ground Control. Tower control[edit] Tower control is responsible for aircraft on the runway and in the controlled airspace immediately surrounding the airport. They coordinate the sequencing of aircraft in the traffic pattern and direct aircraft on how to safely join and leave the circuit. Aircraft which are only passing through the airspace must also contact Tower Control in order to be sure that they remain clear of other traffic. Airfield traffic pattern At all airports the use of a traffic pattern often called a traffic circuit outside the U. They may help to assure smooth traffic flow between departing and arriving aircraft. There is no technical need within modern commercial aviation for performing this pattern, provided there is no queue. And due to the so-called SLOT-times, the overall traffic planning tend to assure landing queues are avoided. If for instance an aircraft approaches runway 17 which has a heading of approx. For smaller piston engined airplanes at smaller airfields without ILS equipment, things are very different though. Generally, this pattern is a circuit consisting of five "legs" that form a rectangle two legs and the runway form one side, with the remaining legs forming three more sides. Each leg is named see diagram , and ATC directs pilots on how to join and leave the circuit. Standard traffic patterns are left-handed, meaning all turns are made to the left. One of the main reason for this is that pilots sit on the left side of the airplane, and a Left-hand patterns improves their visibility of the airport and pattern. Right-handed patterns do exist, usually because of obstacles such as a mountain , or to reduce noise for local residents. The predetermined circuit helps traffic flow smoothly because all pilots know what to expect, and helps reduce the chance of a mid-air collision. At controlled airports, a circuit can be in place but is not normally used. Rather, aircraft usually only commercial with long routes request approach clearance while they are still hours away from the airport; the destination airport can then plan a queue of arrivals, and planes will be guided into one queue per active runway for a "straight-in" approach. While this system keeps the airspace free and is simpler for pilots, it requires detailed knowledge of how aircraft are planning to use the airport ahead of time and is therefore only possible with large commercial airliners on pre-scheduled flights. The system has recently become so advanced that controllers can predict whether an aircraft will be delayed on landing before it even takes off; that aircraft can then be delayed on the ground, rather than wasting expensive fuel waiting in the air. Standard visual approach slope indicator There are a number of aids available to pilots, both visual and electronic, though not all airports are equipped with them. A visual approach slope indicator VASI helps pilots fly the approach for landing. VORs are also located off airports, where they serve to provide airways for aircraft to navigate upon. In poor weather, pilots will use an instrument landing system ILS to find the runway and fly the correct approach, even if they cannot see the ground. The number of instrument approaches based on the use of the Global Positioning System GPS is rapidly increasing and may eventually become the primary means for instrument landings. Larger airports sometimes offer precision approach radar PAR , but these systems are more common at military air bases than civilian airports. Once the pilots can see the runway lights, they may continue with a visual landing.

Short Sunday service for travelling parties [microform]: being a simple devotional form of prayer and praise for the use of Christians on the Lord's day when circumstances may place them at a distance from home, and, for the time being, may deprive them of regular church services.

The Saga of the Christmas Loser Late home after a night out, a youngster attempted to climb into his home down the chimney. He did not want to wake other residents in the Judson Center social services agency; also he had broken his curfew and wanted no trouble. In best Santa Claus mode he climbed onto the roof and let himself down the chimney; unfortunately he was too large, and he became stuck. The 17 year old began moaning and was heard and rescued. The youth suffered from minor scrapes and bruises. The chief asked his medicine man, but he too had lost touch with the reading signs from the natural world around the Great Lakes. In truth, neither of them had idea about how to predict the coming winter. However, the chief decided to take a modern approach, and the chief rang the National Weather Service in Gaylord Michigan. Consequently, he went back to his tribe and told the men to collect plenty of firewood. A fortnight later the chief called the Weather Service and asked for an update. As a result of this brief conversation the chief went back to the tribe and told his people to collect every bit of wood they could find. A month later the chief called the National Weather Service once more and asked about the coming winter. Anxious to unfreeze them, Mr Porter backed his car up to an open window so that the exhaust would warm up the house. A little while later and Porter, his wife and their three children had to be rushed to hospital suffering from carbon monoxide poisoning. This is what happened one freezing cold winter morning. Unable to start his car, George diagnosed the problem as a frozen fuel line which he thought he could correct by running warm petrol through it. He then tried to heat a two-gallon can of petrol on his gas stove in the kitchen. See more of our Loser stories. The latest cold spell which has brought chaos to parts of the UK has its funny side also. They could not help noticing that there was always a spare seat next B14 to them and they had a friend who would love to buy a season ticket, especially if all three could have seats together. One half-time Freddie went to the ticket office and asked if they could buy the season ticket for B The official said that unfortunately the ticket had been sold. Nevertheless, week after week the seat was still empty. Myra was going to the Christmas office party but needed a new party dress. Officers on patrol found the boy atop the 3. The child noticed the police car behind him and stopped immediately. When asked why he had begun ploughing, he said his father had complained about the state of the roads. He saw the key in the ignition of the vehicle and set off. Police retrieved the key to the loader from the child and returned it, and the boy, to his mother. The Tale of the Traditional Christmas Pudding Martha decided to move with the times and try the delights of microwave cooking. Whereupon, her devoted husband Archie went out and bought her a brand new top-of-the range Sharp Microwave oven. Christmas approached and Martha got out her Christmas pudding recipe and assembled the ingredients. Consequently she decided to substitute her normal cooking time of 50 minutes. As Martha was in the lounge watching her favourite T. Naturally, the Christmas pudding was a disaster, so much so, that Martha could not even prod it with a fork. In fact the black ball stuck to the bottom of the bowl and Archie had to get a screwdriver to prize it from its base. After a few days she could see the funny side, and Togo loved his new indestructible toy, which amused him until the next Christmas. Sarah new young bride calls her mother in tears. I bought a frozen turkey roll and he yelled and screamed at me about the price. It was the aeroplane ticket. As I looked I realised that in the queue was a good friend of mine. This yarn was sent in by John Bains: All of a sudden a teenager and ordered the manager to hand-over the not inconsiderable takings. Although the robber pulled the trigger, nothing happened, so unbelievably, he peered down the barrel and then fired again. This time it worked. His mission, as usual, was to take them for their radiation treatment at a nearby hospital. Since it was Christmas, one of the 12 offered to buy Jimmy a drink. So they stopped off at the Rose and Crown pub, and all had a nice drink. On the way out Jimmy detoured to the gents, when he came out of the loo, all the prisoners had disappeared. They had all made their escape. What could Jimmy do? Thinking quickly, he braked at a particularly long bus queue, and told the waiting people that he was a relief bus. Where-upon he picked up the first 12 and drove them to the open prison. This was a pre-arranged signal that some of the prisoners were playing up. Jimmy unloaded his passengers, he then beat a hasty retreat. All his grandchildren had everything they needed, so he decided to send them each a cheque check. On each card he wrote: Now, while Grandpa enjoyed the family festivities, he thought that his grandchildren were just slightly distant. It preyed on his mind into the New Year. Then one day he was sorting out his study and under a pile of magazines, he found a little pile of cheques checks for his grandchildren. He had completely forgotten to put them in with the Christmas cards. The Newtown School nativity play Scene: The inn at Bethlehem on Christmas Eve Joseph: Do you have any room at the inn? Two children are dressed as Mary and Joseph, and they are on their way to the inn in Bethlehem.
