

Chapter 1 : Airbrushing techniques, spray paint art style

The Sign Painter's Secret has 8 ratings and 2 reviews. Luisa said: Here's a good read-aloud for your Revolutionary War studies. Philadelphia is the set.

Let me ask you a weird question. Have you ever been totally fascinated by just watching someone paint? Like maybe you were walking down the street, maybe on a vacation, and you saw someone sitting on the ground with spray cans all around them, creating amazing art on a piece of paper while the perfect music was playing in the background. And it was like the experience of just watching the painting appearing on the blank paper or canvas just completely mesmerized you, totally captured your attention. And everything else in the world just disappeared for a moment. And as you watched and watched and watched, you just found yourself knowing in a deep place that this was something you wanted to do. You could feel how amazing it would be to be able to paint that quickly and confidently and to have that much fun while you were doing it! Feel the thrill deep in your belly as people lined up to purchase your work! Airbrush galaxies and waves. They pay for years of art school to learn to do what others have already done. Many get stuck in creative ruts and stop learning and growing. Is it possible that learning to paint could actually be easy, flowing and fun for you? Is it possible that there are new ways of earning money with your art that you may not have considered? Something that you can use right NOW to completely revolutionize your own airbrush and acrylic painting techniques. But first I have to take you back in time to an art show in Mexico city in filled with hippies, counter culture artists, famous art critics and all kinds of unusual folks. Maybe because he was Mexican and maybe because his medium was spray paint. But in my opinion, he should be honored as the founder of an important group of techniques, actually, a whole new school of art. His name was Ruben Sadot and he was the very first spray paint artist of Mexico. Ruben Sadot, self portrait He used to tell his disciples, the ones that eventually created that grand exhibition without him: One day like every other, he was working with traditional acrylic painting techniques but also happened to be using some spray paint cans. There also happened to be some old newspapers around. The wind picked up a sheet of newspaper and it blew onto his fresh spray paint, moving the paint in such a way that it created a beautiful mottled effect that he had never seen before. It was so incredible, so deeply fascinating That he completely forgot about everything he had been trying to paint before and he just knew immediately that this was part of the new direction in which he had to go. Right away, he purchased more spray cans and began the creative journey which ultimately led to an infinity of new techniques and approaches practiced by his students and their students today. Time passed and the students went in their own directions and taught their own students the secret techniques of spray paint art. Most made their living painting on the streets, some preferred to exhibit in galleries. Many traveled within Mexico and some flew to Europe and the US among other places. The trademark of their style was to paint complicated scenes quickly and with great flair. The good ones could paint anything you asked them to within 20 minutes and have stunning quality. Of course there were many low quality knock off, rip off painters as well, an unfortunate reality of anything financially successful is it will be copied badly and often. Up till now, their techniques have remained secret and isolated in the spray paint and street art world, but a revolution is happening and I want your help in getting the word out about it! The same kind of paint used by most acrylic artists and airbrush artists everyday! For the first time in history, YOU can now do all the amazing spray paint art techniques you see here with your same regular acrylic paints and a cheap airbrush. YOU are the next step in the evolution of this secret and exclusive school of painting. YOU can use the same acrylic paint sets you already have handy. YOU can do it all from the comfort of your home all year round. YOU seriously need to learn this stuff! But wait, you may ask How and why did you figure out how to use spray paint art methods with acrylic painting techniques? And most important, what do I get out of it? Well, first, I had to move out of Mexico for various reasons and I moved to New York where unfortunately there are It freezes and comes out in spats and spurts and is generally impossible to work with in the cold winter months. It was a big goal. I found the sweet spot! I was so excited to share it with my friends! On a Golden Platter!
