She measured the second one. How many inches was that over the limit? Remember, the length is the longest measurement. She let her son hold the box in his arms, weighing himself and the box together. Angie read the scale. The total was lbs. He weighs lbs. She subtracted his weight from the total to get the weight of the box. How much did the box really weigh? How many pounds did she have to remove to get it down to 70 lbs? She took out a few more objects to allow for possible error in the bathroom scale. The next trip to town she had five boxes with the following measurements. Which ones were over the size limit? Before she filled and taped them, she cut the oversize ones to size. Francine then weighed them. What was the actual weight of each box if her son held them in his arms on the bathroom scale? He still weighs lbs. She took some weight out of the overweight ones and taped each one thoroughly. She stood in the post office line with total confidence this time.
