LONDON SPEEDWAY HISTORY. Board Threads Posts Last Post; LONDON'S WORLD CHAMPIONS. The pinnacle of individual racing. 2: RIP - Freddie Williams by Administrator.

The event started with two group qualifying sessions that would seed groups to start the race. The slowest qualifiers were placed in group A and started on the track, while each subsequent group was released into the race from pit road at a set lap. Craig Cole 55 set the fastest time with a Group A started the race on the track, while the final Group started the race 16 laps down. Owen James Martin 44 started the race on the pole as three cars started on track and a full field remained on pit road. Jody Mason 68 led the race early as cars began getting slowly released into the field. The original breakout was to be a lap three tenths faster, but because the track was still slightly wet in qualifying that margin was expanded by officials. Jody Mason reassumed the lead on lap 36 after serving his penalty as Allan Martin ran in second. Jo Lawrence 78 , Bill Brekelmans , and several others were sent for a stop and go for breaking out as Mason cut a tire and lost the lead on lap Allan Martin found himself two laps up on the field, before he also cut a tire and was forced to pit. Owen James Martin found himself in the lead once again as Shane Gibson 69 slowly reeled him in and the two battled by lap Gibson entered pit road on lap 60 and the crew went to work. Jody Mason lost control off of turn 69 and hit the turn four wall, but was able to get it going the right direction a few laps later. Lawrence managed to stop the car and get out safely, however the car burned for nearly five minutes. The red flag would be used as the intermission to allow teams to refuel and make repairs before the three wide standing still restart. Dan Storey 61 held a two lap lead at the halfway restart as all cars were able to get going. Storey was sent down pit road for breaking out as dark clouds began to cover the speedway. Several other drivers were handed black flags for breaking out in the following laps as Storey continued to lead. Bill Brekelmans was sent back down pit road for speeding on pit road the lap prior. Craig Cole had flirted with breaking out all event, and on lap he did that and was sent down pit road for a stop and go as he was just five laps down after starting 16 down. As the laps ticked away, Dan Storey slowed his pace and continued to lead with David Rockwood 82 catching him slowly. Ben Davey 07 also found himself on the lead lap but almost an entire circuit behind with just 25 laps to go. With just 10 laps to go, Rockwood was just 2. With just four laps to go, Rockwood broke out and was given the black flag. Ben Davey and Derek Moesker would round out the podium. Delaware Speedway would like to thank all the drivers, fans and track partners for an incredible race season full of all the highs and lows of racing. Congratulations to the track champions and thank you to all of our amazing staff!

History[edit] Several meetings have been claimed to be the first in the UK. The meeting at High Beech on 18 February , a meeting organized by R. Hill-Bailey of the Ilford Motor Cycle Club which attracted an estimated 30, spectators, is often described as the first British speedway meeting. Races at Droylsden , the first held on 25 June , were held in an anti-clockwise direction and this meeting appears to have a strong claim to be the first Speedway meeting in the UK, but it is generally accepted that the sport properly arrived in the UK when Australians Billy Galloway and Keith McKay arrived with the intention of introducing Speedway to the Northern Hemisphere. Both featured in the High Beech meeting. The sport boomed in the early days with new tracks opening in England, Scotland, and Wales. Notable pioneer venues of were Stamford Bridge and Celtic Park. The sport contracted in the early s but revived just before the war. A post war boom came to an end in the early s thanks to television and Entertainment Tax but a revival with the advent of the Provincial League in has been largely sustained ever since. They are called Green Sheet Averages as traditionally they are printed on green paper. For both the Elite League and Premier League there is a points limit in place for team building purposes. This points limit is created to prevent teams becoming too powerful, therefore creating a competitive league. All Elite League and Premier League teams must declare 7 riders before the start of the season. For the Elite League, the combined averages of the 7 riders must not exceed A new CMA is then issued that comes into effect seven days later. Competitions[edit] In the early days of speedway in the UK, meetings consisted of individual tournaments, scratch and handicap races. Northern tracks soon joined together to form the English Dirt Track League , but the league was beset with problems, with many fixtures not completed and several teams dropping out during the season. The closure of several tracks led the remaining teams to come together in the National League , which continued as the main league until , with a hiatus during World War II. In a group of promoters, dissatisfied with how the league was being run formed the Provincial League. This ran from to In it reverted to the Division Two name and continued until , after which the British League ended with the formation of the single-division Premier League. In , with more teams wanting to join the league and to attract money from television coverage, the Elite League was formed as new top tier of ten teams, with the Premier League continuing as a second tier. The need to develop new talent led to the creation of the British League Division Three in , which became the Academy League in , but proved to be financially unviable and in it was replaced with the amateur Conference League. This was renamed in as the British Amateur League, but it was replaced with a revised Conference League in which was not limited to amateurs and allowed Premier League riders with averages below 4. In the regulations were altered again and the Conference League was replaced by the National League , the third league to use that name.

A lot of the film included is recently discovered footage, Tony explains: There are also two Wimbledon v West Ham meetings included from that same season. From we start to see a wider variety of circuits with meetings from Hackney, West Ham and Rye House also included. The West Ham footage is particular interesting with the Hammers wearing Hi-vis Orange vests under their racejackets, an interesting experiment from Dave Lanning. We also get to see their Custom House stadium in its full glory, with fans packed into the stand on the back straight. The West Ham side able to call on the services of Clive Hitch who notches up an impressive 12 point maximum. We see film from the World Final practice and from the final itself. On our next visit to West Ham in we can see that back straight stand has been demolished, the first step towards the stadium being totally flattened a few years later. The meeting is a World Championship Qualifier round, followed by a similar round from Hackney just three days later. Ronnie Moore is wearing a cast on his leg but determinedly lapping the circuit in his usual style. This was the second and final year of the Wembley revival. Jessup would become a popular Leicester Lion the following year. The venue is Wembley as Great Britain take on Sweden. We see a couple of meetings from Oxford in as both Wimbledon and Hackney take on the home side. Barry Briggs, back from a self-imposed exile from British racing, is still good enough to lower the Cowley track record. The visitors eventually lose by after the 18 heats have been completed. Good to see the film nonetheless. In we get our first look at White City, reopened as a suitable home for some of the biggest meetings. A number of the clips on the second disc included the sounds of fans loudly cheering on their favourites, something that is much less noticeable at modern day speedway, perhaps because you feel less self-conscious shouting in a large crowd. Best of all is the famous visit of White City Rebels to Wolverhampton, where the London side clinched the league title. We see some action from the meeting, featuring Hans Nielsen as a young Wolf, along with the celebrations that followed. A great day for the Rebels and the first time in 12 years that the league trophy was taken back to London. Steve Weatherley picks up a maximum for the visitors, despite the efforts of Bob Coles for the Fen Tigers. We skip forward to after that, with film from the practice at the last ever World Final at Wembley. By the VHS revolution was well underway and enterprising companies were beginning to record speedway meetings for home viewing. This allows us to see a number of meetings from Wimbledon which feature commentary. The mid-eighties are represented by a couple of controversial meetings between Berwick and Hackney. Hackney were in their Kestrels phase at this time, courtesy of Terry Russell moving his operation over from Crayford in With characters like Russell and Davie Fairbairn in the pits the aftermath was predictably entertaining. The Dons were promoted by Russell Lanning at the time and he recruited father Dave to commentate on the racing over the stadium PA, we can hear snatches of that as the action unfolds. We also see Todd Wiltshire and Mark Loram competing against each other, both taking early strides on their way towards the World Championship rostrum. Will we ever see speedway in London again? At the time of writing it seems highly unlikely, so perhaps all the more reason to enjoy these DVDs and wallow in a bit of nostalgia. How To Order By Phone:
