Stage Manager (PRINCE Companion) by David Marsh, Colin Bentley 1 edition - first published in Project Board Executive Member (Prince Companion).

The Prince hears that Duclos is writing a letter, and arranges for its interception. Left alone with Adriana, Michonnet wants to express his love for her. However, Adriana explains she has a lover: Maurizio, a soldier in the service of the Count of Saxony, she being unaware that Maurizio is in reality the count himself. They agree to meet after the performance. Adriana gives him some violets to put in his buttonhole. The Prince decides to arrange a party for the company at the villa in order to expose Duclos and Maurizio. Act 2[ edit ] A villa by the Seine The Princess de Bouillon, not the actress Duclos, is waiting for Maurizio and expresses her love for him: When he enters, she sees the violets and asks how he came by them. Maurizio presents them to her. Nevertheless, despite being grateful for her help at court, he admits he no longer loves her. Maurizio realizes they think he is with Duclos. He tells Adriana the assignation was political. They must arrange the escape of the woman who is in hiding. Adriana trusts him and agrees to help. During the intermezzo that follows, the house is darkened, which Adriana uses to tell the Princess she can escape. However, the two women are mutually suspicious and the rescue attempt turns into a blazing quarrel before the Princess finally leaves. The stage manager Michonnet notices that the Princess has dropped a bracelet, which he gives to Adriana. The Prince, who has an interest in chemistry, is storing a powerful poison that the government has asked him to analyze. At a reception given by the Prince and Princess, guests note the arrival of Michonnet and Adriana. When the Princess announces that Maurizio has been wounded in a duel, Adriana faints. However, soon afterwards, when Maurizio enters uninjured, Adriana is ecstatic. A ballet is performed: Adriana learns that the bracelet Michonnet found belongs to the Princess. Adriana uses the final lines of the text to make a headstrong attack on the Princess, who determines to have her revenge. Adriana is consumed with anger and jealousy. Members of the theatre company come to visit her, bringing her presents on her name day and trying to persuade her to return to the theatre. Michonnet has retrieved a diamond necklace, previously pawned by Adriana to help Maurizio pay off his debts. A casket is delivered with a note from Maurizio. Adriana looks at the note and immediately feels unwell. She looks in the box and takes out the faded violets that she had once given Maurizio in the theatre. She is hurt that he should send them back to her. He wishes to marry her. Although they embrace, he realises she is shaking. Michonnet and Maurizio realize that she has been poisoned.
