During the catwalk shows you could witness fashion bloggers, models, fashionistas, trendsetters, style editors and many other creative people in the streets wearing gorgeous outfits. In these images you are going to find Anna Dello Russo, Miroslava Duma, Elena Perminov, Ulyana Sergeenko, Chiara Ferrand, Olivia Palermo and many other well known personas in the fashion world who appeared in trendy separates and cover-ups, showing off their unique style. You are going to find here lots of wide-brim hats, high-waisted jeans, light colored trainers and snowy-white outfits. Lots of guests have chosen to wear simple separates, where jeans played one of the main roles. There are lots of fringed looks. You are going to find here awesome bags and boots embellished with fringes. There were fashionistas who have chosen to wear leather cover-ups embellished with fringes. The monochrome is still on its high peak. Totally black outfits look very crazy. The high neck cream beige pullover looks fantastic with midi length white skirt paired with light grey pointed-toe pumps: These are my favorite bags that were captured in the streets of Paris: How about wearing totally black outfit? I love this high neck sweater-dress styled with thigh-high black suede boots: How about wearing a maxi length cape with your everyday basics? Love the chambray shirt tucked in high-waisted tie-dye cuffed jeans. Update the look by adding nude pointed-toe pumps: Speaking of fringes, then I recommend to try on this black trench coat updated with fringes at the bottom: How about pale blue suede trench coat? I love this double-breasted model that is updated with LV miniature suitcase and nude pointed-toe pumps: The oversized look is still in trend! Love this exaggerated black wrap coat: Or you can go for a pale pink belted oversized coat that looks fantastic with grey skinnies: Speaking of fringes, then I recommend to try on these brown fringed boots that can be worn with sleeveless grey wool coat-dress and white blouse. Love the mirrored rounded sunglasses: Totally black pencil two-piece dress. Love the ladylike silhouette: Go for the fringed bags! They are totally in: Love the printed tee: The wide-brim floppy hat in pale burgundy color looks fantastic with poncho-blazer, light grey wool sweater and stunning skinny jeggings: Wide-brim fedora, furry coat and slim-fit jeans worn with cool black booties: Pale burgundy velvet trench-coat with fringes at the bottom looks awesome with creative handbag and open-toe booties: Black-white coat looks marvelous worn atop white tee and cool ripped jeans: How about wearing a monochrome checked dress in the streets of big city:

In fact, just a few miles north of downtown Orlando, Park Avenue serves as a major retail and dining mecca for all of Central Florida. Winter Park was originally founded as a winter resort for wealthy northerners, hence the name. The city is one of the wealthiest in the area. Although, Park Avenue is the central artery through town, other businesses can be found on side streets including East Morse Avenue, and East Lyman Avenue. Although Fairbanks Avenue is not as pedestrian friendly as the rest of Winter Park, many unique shops and restaurants can be found along this stretch as well. Its downtown is about seven miles away from downtown Orlando. We head north along Park Avenue or "Park Ave" as the locals call it. Up ahead and across the street are more shops and boutiques. The brick paved streets are very common throughout the Orlando area. As we continue along Park Avenue we find several shops and restaurants, including a French bistro and an Italian restaurant. Winter Park is known for its culinary diversity. More shops along Park Avenue. This one has a kitschy feel to it. Park Avenue gets its name from the large Central Park that runs along Park Avenue that we will be seeing in a little bit. We get to the corner of Park Avenue and Comstock Avenue. This appliance store is in a fun-looking art deco building. Across the street is a Restoration Hardware. Speaking of chains, here are a few more examples in this building that gently curves as Park Avenue curves slightly as well. And this is a view of the boutiques and eateries catty-corner from the City Hall on the other side of Park Avenue and Lyman Avenue. Here are more shops and businesses along Park Avenue. In Winter Park, and many other cities in Florida, you see these signs on the sidewalks pointing to the shops along the street. The Colony Theater opened in the s and lasted until when it was put out of business by larger movie chains. The building was used to house smaller shops and restaurants until when Pottery Barn renovated and moved in. We continue heading north along Park Avenue where we find more boutiques in downtown Winter Park, Florida. Across the street we find more shops, restaurants, and even a mid rise office building all in downtown Winter Park, Florida. We see a pharmacy and a candy shop. We also see a sign pointing to Hannibal Square and the Winter Park History Museum, which we will be visiting in a moment. At the corner of Park Avenue and New England Avenue is this interesting building, which contains a lot of greenery on its second floor. This is our first shot of Central Park. It is one of several museums in the Winter Park area and is located in a former railroad freight depot. Here we find some elegant buildings housing a wide array of businesses. More shops and a coffee shop where I had stepped in on a hot day for something to drink. Today it is home to the Hannibal Square Heritage Center, which preserves the history of the African-American community. A newer building along New England Avenue. Here we see businesses along the bottom and residences on the upper floors. Across the street are multiple restaurants with wide sidewalks for outdoor dining in Hannibal Square. This fine looking building has excellent stone work and wooden shutters. Looks like it houses a French restaurant with what appears to be outdoor seating on two stories. Here is a view looking southbound down Pennsylvania Avenue at some of the restaurants and other businesses in the Hannibal Square area of Winter Park. From here, we will head back to Park Avenue. We are back on Park Avenue. From here, we will continue our tour of Winter Park by heading north. The Wine Room showcases over hand-selected wines that can be sampled from wine dispensing machines. More shops and businesses along Park Avenue in Winter Park. So for awhile most of these shots will show the shops, restaurants, and businesses on the east side of Park Avenue while Central Park will be on the west side of Park Avenue. And if you look across the street, you will see Central Park. Here is a view of the park near where Welbourne Avenue meets with Park Avenue. This is a view of the intersection of Park Avenue with Welbourne Avenue. There is a sign pointing to more shops down Welbourne Avenue. The sign says East Welbourne Shops. We head back out to Park Avenue. As we continue heading north on Park Avenue in Winter Park, we find more shops, boutiques, and sidewalk cafes. Up ahead is a sign pointing into a courtyard filled with more shops and cafes. This courtyard is called Greeneda Court. Here is another view looking into the interior of Greeneda Court and its shops, eateries, and other services. Also, on Park Avenue we see quite a few financial services firms. Winter Park has long been known for its stop on a rail line. It has had stations going back to This current station was built in and serves the SunRail commuter line and Amtrak as well. This time on the other side of Park Avenue on Morse Boulevard. Morse has a wide, tree-lined median with shops and eateries on either side. We head further down Morse Boulevard in Winter Park to find folks walking along the sidewalk and others eating at an outdoor cafe. Back on Park Avenue we find more shops and boutiques, including some well known chains. As we continue heading north along Park Avenue in Winter Park, we find more shops and restaurants, some with outdoor seating on the wide sidewalks. More chains and financial services can be found in this building with some interesting modern architecture on Park Avenue. We take a break for a view across the street at Central Park at a fountain as well as some lush landscaping. Notice the Spanish moss hanging from the trees. The crosswalk is where Park Avenue meets Lincoln Avenue. More shops and restaurants along Park Avenue. On the right, you can see more of those signs that point out the location of businesses. Also, in this mix is the Shops on Park indoor mall. This is a view inside the Shops on Park indoor mall. They have shops, eateries, and even a koi pond. I did find a public bathroom here, by the way. More shops and restaurants on Park Avenue in Winter Park. A lot of people were lined up for brunch outside of the Briarpatch when I took this picture. Another view of a wide variety of shops, services, and eateries on Park Avenue in Winter Park, Florida. We get to the corner of Park Avenue and Garfield Avenue. Garfield is the northern boundary of Central Park. We are actually looking at shops now on the west side of Park Avenue. Here we see some more shops, including another courtyard entrance. This one is called Hidden Garden. This is a view inside the Hidden Garden courtyard where we see some shops, trees, benches, and a fountain. We head back out and find more shops on Park Avenue. Some of these boutiques are even having a sidewalk sale. Some more shops, restaurants, and businesses on Park Avenue. We see some more of those cool business signs and even another entrance to the Hidden Garden courtyard. We head back down into the courtyard and find a boutique and an eatery with outdoor seating in this part of the Hidden Garden. Across the street on the other side of Park Avenue are some more shops and restaurants in these upscale mid-rise buildings in Winter Park. This is another view of the boutique shopping along this stretch of Park Avenue in Winter Park, Florida. We get to the corner of Park Avenue and Canton Avenue. This is the northern limit of the heaviest shopping in downtown Winter Park. Heading north on the other side of Canton Avenue is St. Margaret Mary Catholic Church. The museum also contains other American works of art. This is one of the many museums in the Winter Park area. Past this it becomes mostly residential so at this point, we will end our tour and rest our feet. Contact us to find out how.

Chapter 3 : Street Style Trends From Fall-Winter Paris Fashion Week | calendrierdelascience.com

I received Streets of Winter from the author/publisher (via BookFunnel). The gifting did not determine the review/rating, which reflects my honest opinion. I'm not a huge fan of short stories, as I prefer to get a good sense of the characters (which is lacking in many novellas), but MacKinnon did an excellent job of creating a story and.
