Chapter 1 : Summertime Sadness Sheet Music Piano Vocal Lana Del Rey | eBay

Summertime Sadness I thought this piece was very nicely arranged for piano and easy for intermediate players that can play the bass along with the counter part. The melody is beautiful with the chords alone and even better with the bass rhythm.

Her previous stage name has been "Lizzy Grant" and since then, she had also become a great songwriter. In fact, she occupied herself with writing songs from the young age of eighteen. In , when she was 22, she managed to get signed by 5 Points Records. Her first album had to wait until , however. Made available digitally, it was named after her and was released in the first month of . In July , she also got signed by three other labels. Her cinematic voice and great pop vibe that she brings with her voice made her try on many genres, starting from dream pop, to trip hop, rock or psychedelic rock, to even indie pop or sadcore. Some of her lyrics get inspiration from the 50s and 60s period, when the Americana pop era was growing. She is quite an avid reader of poetry, as she herself stated, so that is a plus for any artist involved in music. It was very successful in the United States, starting off on the second spot of the US Billboard . According to a year-end statistics, the album ranked at number five on an album best-seller list. Her best song from the album and probably her most known song is "Summertime Sadness", which got remixed by Cedric Gervais. That remix version ranked on a personal record number six on the Billboard Hot . In November , Lana also released an extend play called "Paradise". A short movie called "Tropico" included three of those songs. In June , her album number three went out. It was called "Ultraviolence" and started off at the number one spot on the US Billboard . In , she released another album, titled "Honeymoon". Lana del Rey has received a series of awards for her musical career. Also a Grammy-nominated artist, she is one of the best voices of the decade.
