An easy to make dessert that tastes like pecan pie with a cobbler crust on top. It creates an amazing caramel sauce as it bakes! I love pecan pie so much, that I have so many delicious dessert inspirations like this one. Pecan Pie Cobbler Oh boy! Have I got an amazing fall dessert for you. Stop everything that you are doing and run to the store and make this incredible dessert for your family. I spotted this dessert in a Taste of Home magazine, and being so obsessed with Pecan Pie, I knew that I had to try it! We were completely blown away with all that this dessert had to offer. It has everything that you love about a pecan pie with a buttery cobbler crust on top. And then, it gets better!! It creates this magical caramel sauce as it bakes making it the ultimate fall dessert. The great thing about Pecan Pie is that it can be just as good the day after baking as it is the day of baking. This is usually because Cobblers are traditionally made with fresh fruit. In a medium sized mixing bowl combine the flour, sugar, baking powder and salt. Stir in the milk. Remove the pan from the oven and spread the batter evenly on top. Top with pecans, brown sugar, and toffee bits. Bake uncovered minutes or until the top is golden brown. Let it cool on a wire rack minutes and the cobbler will thicken while cooling. Serve warm with ice cream on top. What Makes a Cobbler Different from a Pie? While Pies are great because they use a very distinct crust made with a pastry dough that encases the goodness inside, Cobblers are known to have more of a crumbly and soft layer that you might find is less like a dough and more like a batter. The batter that Cobblers use are great because they keep the moisture and heat in the dessert and give you the opportunity to partner it with the classic Ice Cream that melts Oh, So Perfectly together. What is the Difference between a Cobbler and a Crisp? With a Crisp, you would likely have the filling on the bottom of the dessert, Then you would have the topping. Which gives the Cobbler the warm and moist texture that you desire. Looking for more delicious cobblers or crisps?
