Why grade-schoolers talk back. You ask your grade-schooler to stop reading because it's time for bed, and he retorts "whatever." Does this display of attitude mean you're in for years of lip?

To be that great it takes understanding of the position, position specific training methods and how to apply them to the pitch. Why do so many teams have center backs at all levels as their captains? Well there are a few reasons, they are: Position - From a position standpoint they are in the in middle of the pitch and see the entire field in front of them being thrown into a leadership position on the field so to speak. Communication -The back line demands organization and a center back must be pulling the strings constantly meaning screaming, talking, whispering and whatever else to get his team on the same page defensively. Lead By Example -A great center defender is fearless and a player that lays their body out on the line time after time builds a level of respect from their teammates. Partnership Finding the right center back partnership is a fragile skill. Do you put the two biggest players back there? Or maybe one big and one small quick wirey player? Or maybe the key is finding the right personalities back there. How Important Is It? Both want to be ball winners, wanting every ball all the time and neither of them wanting to be a bridesmaid. Although it may not be at the top of the list in terms of number one qualities every center defender should have. Anybody that knows a lick about soccer will tell you how much a center back handles the ball at their feet. Getting the ball rolled out to you by the keeper, center mid wanting to reset and start again or the ball being swung around the horn in the back are just a few examples of common situations that come up several times throughout the course of a match and questions are constantly being asked of the men at the back. Great players in any sport come in all shapes and sizes with varying attributes but a common mold for a great center defender in the professional ranks typically have these physical attributes in common: Attributes not necessarily associated with technical or physical ability, more character traits than anything else. Well have a look at how many characteristics you have listed above and which ones you need to add to your game. Do you have a great story or tip about this position? Tell Us Your Story or Tip!
